[ 15...Nd4 16.f3 Qc7 17.Rc1 Bd7 18.Be3 Nf5 19.Bxf5 From here the queen surveys the c-pawn and the crucial e4-square. gxf5 20.Na4 Rab8 21.c5 bxc5 White is ready to play Qd7+ and c8(Q), but it is Black's turn, and he tries to force a perpetual. 22.bxc5 Bb5 23.Re1 Qa5 24.Nc3?? dxc5 25.Nxb5 Rxb5 White stops the threat of perpetual, and queens his pawn next go. 26.a4! threatens mate in one and draws comfortably: Rb7 27.Rxc5 Qb4! 28.Rc6 Qa5 is also a reasonable try, 29.Bf2 Rd8 and White must take the perpetual, as otherwise there is no defence to the two mate-in-one threats. 30.Rc5 Qb4 31.Qc2 Rbd7 is also a draw, the white king cannot escape. This move allows White to check the black king around until he puts his queen on the best square to help the c-pawn, I prefer 32.Qxf5 Qxa4 ]

16.Be3 Re8 17.f3 Rb8 18.Qd2 Black certainly seems to be poorly-placed here, the white pieces are active, centralised, and he has the superior queenside structure.

[ 28.g3 Material is equal, but the black king is open, and White's c-pawn is very close to queening. This should be enough to win the game for White, but Black has one useful resource: if he can get his queen to e4 he might be able to force a perpetual. ]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 A bold decision by Padmini. Recently she has been playing mainly 1....e5, French, Taimanov and Najdorf. For today's game she had something totally different in mind. The Sveshnikov is a line which she was playing back in 2006. Then there was just one single game played in 2013. So, there was simply no way her opponent could have expected the Sveshnikov. The whole point of playing this line was to get away from any kind of home preparation. As we will see this cunning decision was rewarded right in the opening itself. 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.Bd3 Be6 12.Qh5
[ 12.0-0 is more popular ]
[ 13.0-0 once again 0-0 is more popular ]
13...0-0 14.exf5!? An old line tried from time to time by the white side but it gives no advantage whatsoever. 14...Bxd5 15.f6 e4 16.fxg7 Re8 17.Qxd5? This is a huge mistake and Padmini will not give a second chance to her opponent.
[ 17.Be2 The main idea of 14.ef5 is to enter this variation. Now Black has at least two decent ways to play. Re5 ( 17...Ne5 18.0-0 Qf6 is simple enough to hold the balance. ) 18.Qh6 Now both Rg5 and b4 give Black a typical dynamic Sveshnikov kind of position. Rg5 ( 18...b4 19.Nc2 bxc3 20.bxc3 Be6 21.0-0 Qg5⇄ ) 19.0-0 Ne5 20.Nc2 Nd3⇄ ]
17...exd3+ 18.Kf1 Ne5-+ 19.Rd1 Qf6N 20.h4 Ra7! Bring all your pieces into attack. This is the most thematic approach. The computer however also shows another nice way. I personally like this move more as there is really nothing much to calculate... first bring all your pieces into action.

[ 20...Ng4 21.Qf3 Re2!! An aesthetically pleasing move. Black leaves many pieces hanging at the same time and creates a mating attack. 22.Qxf6 ( 22.Qxa8+ Kxg7 leads to mate ) 22...Nxf6 23.Rxd3 Rae8 24.g3 Rxb2-+ ]

21.Qd4

[ 21.Rh3 Rae7 22.Qd4 would transpose to the game. ]

21...Rae7 22.Rh3

[ 22.Kg1 Nf3+! 23.gxf3 Qxf3 24.Kh2 Re4 25.Rxd3 Qf5-+ wins the queen and eventually the game. ]

22...Qe6! All of a sudden the black queen finds a completely different direction from which to invade. By creating mating threats on e1 Padmini actually wants to grab the a2-pawn and shatter the queenside completely. 23.Re3

[ 23.Kg1 runs into Qxh3 24.gxh3 Nf3+ ]

[ 23.b3 No time to save the pawn Ng4-+ ]

23...Qxa2 24.Rde1 Qxb2 25.Nb1 h5! Sharp and alert. An unusual looking move which makes a lot of sense as Black now threatens the deadly Ng4. 26.g3 stopping Ng4 but allowing something equally strong.

[ 26.Qf4 Re6 ]

[ 26.Qxd6 Ng4 ]

26...Nf3! The last precise combination. 27.Qxd6 Nh2+! Preciion till the very end.

[ 27...Rxe3 28.Rxe3 would unnecessary complicate things as Black has to watch out for Qf8 all the time ]

28.Kg2 Ng4 A great game by Padmini who didn't give any chance after White's one and only mistake on the17th move.

[White's main choice these days is 12.c3 , but the aggressive queen deployment remains a tricky and critical alternative. Who knows, a player new to the Sveshnikov might have failed to devote enough study-time to this once pretty critical variation. Four years is a long time in the world of the Sveshnikov, but back in 2007 John Cox considered 12 Qh5 important enough to devote three whole games to it in his fine introductory guide. ]

12...Rg8

[Black's invariable response. Instead 12...Bg7 13.0-0 f4 *(*one of the points behind White's aggressive approach is that 13...0-0?? is impossible, on account of 14.exf5! Bxd5 15.f6 , when White will emerge a piece ahead after h6 16.Qf5 e4 17.fxg7 Re8 18.Qxd5 exd3 19.Qxc6 ) 14.c3 *(*play has now transposed to a position which can also come about via a 12 c3 Bg7 13 Qh5 0-0 14 0-0 move order an independent alternative, and not a bad one at that in my opinion is 14.c4!? ) 14...0-0 , and now one decent try is 15.Nc2 ( 15.Rad1 is an alternative, as played in Svidler-Van Wely, Wijk aan Zee 2004, where Kh8 16.g3 Rg8 17.Kh1 Bf8! 18.Be2 Rg5 19.Qf3 f5 was unclear, likely about equal - see the Fed's notes in the Archive ) 15...f5 16.Ncb4 Nxb4 17.Nxb4 a5 18.Nc2!? *(*this seems stronger than 18.exf5 Bf7 19.Qh3 Qf6 20.Nc2 , which led to a great scrap in Anand-McShane, German League 2003, with the then already very strong and now pretty in-form Englishman later suggesting the thematic pawn sacrifice b4!? 21.cxb4 d5 ) 18...Qd7 ( 18...d5!? 19.exf5 Bf7 20.Qh3 Qd7 also comes into the occasion, as played by Tsesarsky, although I suspect White is slightly for choice after 21.Rfd1 and then maybe a4 ) 19.Rfd1 Rad8?! *(*this feels slow, but I'm not so sure what to suggest: 19...Rab8 , for instance, running into 20.exf5 Bxf5 21.Bxf5 Rxf5 22.Rxd6! with an extra pawn for White, although Black retains some chances to draw following Qxd6 23.Qxf5 Rd8; maybe 19...Rac8!? should be played, thereby at least giving Black some counterplay with 20.exf5 Bxf5 21.Bxf5 Qxf5 22.Qxf5 Rxf5 23.Rxd6 b4 ) 20.Rd2 Rf6 (this also feels a little strange and fails to equalise, but I can't see anything better) 21.exf5! Bxf5 22.Bxf5 Rxf5 23.Qf3 Rg5 24.Rad1 Rg6 25.Rd5 Rb8 26.Na3 saw White instructively taking control of the centre before attacking on the queenside, which left him clearly for choice in Schulz-Van Gool, correspondence 2008. ]

[Black can also play the rare 12...Rb8!? 13.0-0 Rg8 when White must avoid 14.Qxh7? Rg6! , which already left him struggling in Walsh-Van Riemsdijk, Mar del Plata 2000, as previously covered by the Fed. ]

13.g3

[Wisely covering the threat. I can't see any mention of the ambitious 13.0-0-0?! on ChessPub, and it's certainly time to rectify that, even though I hope most subscribers have already seen the fantastic game, Brodsky-Kramnik, Kherson 1991: Rxg2 14.f4 Nd4! 15.Ne3 Rf2 16.exf5 Bxa2 17.fxe5 dxe5 18.Nxb5 Bh6!! 19.Rhe1 *( 19.Qxh6? 13...Nd4 An important choice, but again there are alternatives and quite critical ones at that:

[a) 13...Rg5 14.Qd1 *(*again the greedy 14.Qxh7? Nd4 15.0-0 Rg6 looks rather precarious for White ) 14...Bxd5 ( 14...Rg4?! is rather strange here, and after 15.f3 Rg8 16.Qd2 Rc8 17.c3 in Vallejo Pons-Moreno, Cala Galdana 1999, White had taken control and subscribers can find the remaining moves in the Archive ) 15.exd5 Ne7 16.c3 Qb6!? *(*Black wants to avoid 16...e4 17.f4! ,; but he has more often preferred 16...Bh6 , leading to a rather unclear situation after 17.Be2 Rc8 18.Nc2 Rc5! ) 17.Nc2 e4 18.Be2 Bg7 19.a4! *(*now if 19.f4 Black might well go exf3 20.Bxf3 f4! , staying pretty active ) 19...bxa4 20.Nb4 f4! 21.Qxa4+ Kf8 22.Qa5 Qa7 23.Bc4 e3 remained rather unclear, with both sides having their trumps in Weber Widmer-Engelhardt, correspondence 2009. ]

[b) 13...Rg4!? is perhaps the most violent move, cutting off the queen's retreat and preparing an exchange sacrifice. One recent example saw 14.h3?! *(*perhaps the critical test is 14.f4!? exf4 15.Nxf4 Rxf4! 16.gxf4 Qa5+ 17.Kd1 , reaching a pretty unclear position in which Rogozenko has analysed fxe4 18.Bxe4 d5 19.Bf5 Qb4 20.Bxe6 Qd4+ 21.Kc1 Qe3+ 22.Kb1 Qxe6 , with decent ongoing compensation for the exchange due to White's difficulties on the queenside ) 14...fxe4! (of course!) 15.hxg4 Bxd5?! *(*tempting, but White's position isn't so bad after this thus I suspect that 15...exd3! 16.Ne3 Nd4 is correct, with strong pressure, and after the plausible sequence 17.c3 Nf3+ 18.Kf1 e4 Black certainly has a strong, advanced bind on the position ) 16.Be2 Qa5+ 17.c3 b4 with decent counterplay for Black in Birkin-Bak, Ilkley 2011. ]

[c) Cox also makes a decent case for the relatively-rare 13...Rc8!? 14.c3 Rg6 . Perhaps one practical downside to 12 Qh5 is that Black has a number of playable responses, all of which lead to quite unclear positions. ]

14.c3

[Necessary. Otherwise, 14.0-0? f4 gives Black a powerful attack on the light squares, ]

[and 14.0-0-0? Rc8 also looks rather risky for the first player. ]

14...fxe4! 15.Bxe4 Bg4 16.Qxh7 Rg7 The point of Black's play. White's pawn-grabbing queen finds herself in potential danger. 17.Qh6!

[ Necessary and perhaps slightly fortunately for White there's no good discovered attack available to Black. Instead 17.Qh8? would be badly misguided, pretty much costing White the game with his queen badly offside after Nf3+ 18.Ke2 Ng5+ 19.f3 Nxe4 20.fxg4 Qg5 . ]

17...Nf3+ 18.Kf1

[ Possible now that the queen covers d2. Here too 18.Ke2 has been tried, and after Ng5+ 19.f3 Nxe4 20.fxg4 Qc8 ( clearly 20...Qg5?? is no longer an option ) 21.Qe3 Qxg4+ 22.Qf3 Qxf3+ 23.Kxf3 f5 chances are balanced, Black's active knight and potentially-powerful centre pawns compensating for White's control of d5 and passed h-pawn. One test concluded 24.Nc2 Kf7 25.Nce3 Nf6 26.a4 Nxd5 27.Nxd5 Ke6 28.Rhd1 Raa7 29.b4 and 1/2-1/2 in Chorfi-Perez, correspondence 2007, which seems fair enough, in view of the continuation Rh7 30.h4 Bh6 , maintaining a rough balance ]

18...Rg5 19.Nf6+! With his queen unable to retreat, White is forced into complications. 19...Ke7 20.Qh8 Nd2+ 21.Kg2 Nxe4 22.Nxe4 Rg6 Both players certainly know their stuff! Play has followed arguably the main line after 12 Qh5, and once again we find the position imbalanced but about equal, Black's bishops and extra centre pawn compensating for the overall pawn minus. 23.Rhe1?!

[ Sensible enough, but in view of Black's possibility on his next turn, I'm not totally convinced. Cox analyses the alternative 23.Qh4+ Ke6 24.Qxd8 Rxd8 , commenting that "Black's assets are even more important in the endgame and he has more than enough compensation here." A statement which it's hard to argue with. ]

[ This I suspect that White's best may be 23.h3!? Bf5 24.f3! , which looks a little strange, but after

A) 24...Rh6 25.Qg8 Rg6 forces a draw, ( and note that here 25...Qd7 26.g4 is again White's idea );

B) 24...Qd7 25.Qh4+ f6 26.g4! the queen escapes and White shouldn't be worse. ]

23...Rh6 This turns out to be a novelty, but does force a draw. Evidently the higher-rated white player had nothing new to contribute in this line, and was just hoping to catch Black out. Unfortunately for Romanenko though, Uesugi proved rather well prepared.

[ Previously in Galkin-Filippov, Elista 1997, Black had played for the win with 23...Qd7! , which just looks pretty good! Indeed, after

A) I wonder what Romanenko would have done here, seeing that 24.Qh4+ f6 25.Qh7+? ( perhaps 25.h3!? Bg7 26.hxg4 Rh8 27.Qxh8 Bxh8 28.f3 , although even here it's hard to believe White has quite enough for the queen ) 25...Rg7 26.Qh6 doesn't help matters on account of Bf3+! 27.Kf1 Qf5 when White is routed;

B) maybe White has to try 24.Nc2!? , at least obtaining some counterplay in the event of Bf3+ 25.Kxf3 Rh6 26.Qxh6 Bxh6 27.Rad1 , although here too I'd take Black after Rd8;

C) 24.f3? Bxf3+! 25.Kxf3 Qf5+ 26.Kg2 Rh6 27.Qg8 Qh3+ 28.Kf3 Rg6 White was already lost! ]

24.Qg8 Rg6 25.Qh8

[ White should keep the bishop pinned, since 25.Qh7? Qd7 26.h3 Bg7 27.Qh4+ f6 28.hxg4 Rh8 29.Qxh8 Bxh8 would lose the queen for insufficient compensation. ]

25...Rh6

[ Settling for a draw, although clearly 25...Qd7! was still very much a candidate. ]

☐ 5) White: 1.e4 vs. 1...c5 - 2
■ Sveshnikov
Opening Compass for Black and White 14.08.2023

1.e4 c5 The Sicilian defense. There is a reason why this move is the most played one in the Mega Database. Black is somewhat preventing our pawn from going to d4. Meanwhile, Black keeps the options for his main central pawns flexible. This makes White's life much harder, as Black has a lot of different set-ups and it is not easy to find the answer to each of them. Also, unlike after 1...e5, the pawn on c5 will not be attacked after 2. Nf3. This gives Black many options. I must admit that 1...c5 was the most challenging move to face when the goal was to follow the principles laid out before. With any other move besides 1...e5 or 1...c5, White can quickly put another pawn on d4. After that, White's development is easy and natural, as White has many options when two pawns are in the center. With 1...e5, White develops the knight to f3 with a tempo. In the case of 2...Nc6 the bishop goes to c4 easily. After 1... c5, however, simply going for Nf3 and Bc4 is somewhat dangerous. Black has an option of playing a6+b5 or e7-e6, followed by d7-d5! Generally speaking, we cannot stop the latter. That is why I decided to go for the main line 3. d4. After the knight reaches d4, White's development should be easy. Then I was thinking about the f1-bishop. If we put it on c4 then it becomes extremely vulnerable to various attacks (a6+b5, e6+d5, Qd8-c7, Nb8-c6-e5(a5)). That is why often that bishop immediately moves again to b3. In many lines, Black gets the bishop pair advantage in a semi-open position after Nb8-c6-a5-b3 or Nb8-d7-c5-b3. If we develop the bishop to d3 then our knight on d4 becomes undefended. Black will often play Nb8-c6 to exploit this, and if we meet it with Nxc6, then after ...bxc6 Black will have a stronger potential in the center (like in the McDonnell-De Labourdonnais game). If we defend our knight with Bc1-e3 then the Nf6-g4 jump becomes the problem. White is sometimes aiming for the fianchetto (g3+Bg2) but the problem is that it takes one tempo longer... These were the main reasons why I landed on the Bf1-e2 setup. Sure, that is not an active square for our bishop, but at least this way we castle quickly without being worried about our unprotected pieces. The bishop also covers the g4-square in case of Nf6-g4, for example. The other minor pieces go to natural squares (Nc3 and Be3(or Bg5)). In most cases, we cannot go Bf4 because of the pawn fork on e5. Other problems for White in the Sicilian are that Black could bother our pieces. For example, ...Nf6 and ...Bb4 would bother our pawn on e4, a6+b5+b4 would bother our knight on c3 and indirectly the pawn on e4 (Black's knight is in 90%+ of cases on f6), e7-e5 kicks our knight away, ...Nc6 and ...Qb6 would bother our d4-knight and the b2-pawn... 2.Nf3 Our general setup will be d4+Nxd4+Nc3+Be2+O-O+Be3(g5). Useful moves: a4 (preventing b5), f4 (taking more central space), Qd2, Rfd1. If Black goes e7-e5 we try to let the knight go b5-d6 or f5-d6. If that is not an option then we retreat to f3. Also, we will be aiming to put the c-pawn on c4 if possible. This would give us more space and significantly decrease Black's potential in the center and on the queenside. 2...Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 The knight is going for the d6 square. You should not go here when the pawn is already on d6! You will just get kicked away with a6! 6...d6 7.Bg5 Developing the bishop and fighting for the d5-square. 7...a6 8.Na3 Sadly, the knight has to go here. The knight is temporarily bad, but the permanent damage to Black's position has been done (the weak d5-square, and the backward d-pawn) 8...b5 The pawn fork ...b4 is coming. We have to react.

[After 8...Be6 9.Nc4! $14 the knight quickly escapes from the horrible a3-square. ] 9.Nd5 Qa5+ 10.Bd2! We have to react with a tempo. 10...Qd8 11.Bd3 The pawn was hanging so we develop the bishop and protect the pawn.

[You could go for a draw by repetition with 11.Bg5 if you want. :-) ] 11...Nxd5 12.exd5 Ne7 13.c4!? The next moves would be O-O, Re1, and then the action should begin on the queenside. 13...g6 14.0-0 Bg7 15.Re1 0-0 16.cxb5 axb5 17.Nxb5 Nxd5 18.a4± The position is extremely sharp. White is better developed and has connected passed pawns on the queenside. Black has strong potential with its central pawns. White should activate the bishops next.

Bartolome Marcussi Memorial 1996

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5! La fuerza de la buena costumbre! Desde hace 10 anos que he estado jugando regularmente la variante Svesnikov, y no he tenido hasta ahora motivos para lamentarme. En todo caso, debo reconocer que, en esta partida, mi manejo de la defensa dejo bastante que desear, lo que me hizo quedar tempranamente en desventaja. 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 Bg7 Esta linea ha sido llamada por algunos la Variante Moderna, en contraposicion con la Variante Clasica, que se inicia con 10...f5. No teniendo una preferencia especial por ninguna de las dos, he optado por ir alternando el uso de ambas. 11.Bd3
[ 11.c4!? Esta provocativa ruptura resulta interesante, pero no ayuda mucho a la causa blanca frente a un juego energico de las Negras, las que deben hacerse rapidamente de la iniciativa con. .. f5! 12.cxb5 Nd4→ ]
11...Ne7 12.Nxe7 Qxe7 13.c3 f5 14.Nc2 Qg5 15.Qe2 0-0 Hasta aqui se estaban repitiendo las jugadas de mi partida con Clarizza, en el Torneo 50 Anos de Ladac. El jugo 16. f3, y, despues de d5!, se encontro en problemas. No se si el amigo Crespo conocia dicha partida, pero su jugada indudablemente representa una mejora. 16.exf5 Bb7!?
[ 16...Bxf5 17.Bxf5 Qxf5 18.Ne3∞ ]
17.Ne3 b4? Demasiada fantasia ! Aqui me pase largo tiempo analizando las hermosas variantes que se producian una vez que el Blanco capturara en b4. Lo curioso es que se me borro de la mente la posibilidad, logica por lo demas, de que el Blanco no aceptara el Peon! 18.Bc4! bxc3 19.bxc3 Y el Blanco ha conseguido una posicion comoda, con ventaja material. Y aqui hubiera terminado esta historia, si las cosas hubieran seguido su curso natural. Pero, tal como advierte el dicho popular "En la confianza esta el peligro". A partir de este momento, el Negro empezo a debatirse furiosamente para evitar la derrota, en tanto que el Blanco empezo a otorgar pequenas licencias que lo llevaron primeramente a perder su ventaja, despues a comprometer su posicion y, finalmente, a perder el juego. 19...Kh8 A falta de alternativas, elijo una movida tematica, que tiene por objeto permitir una eventual maniobra futura con f5.

[ 19...d5?! 20.Bxd5 Bxd5 21.h4!± ]

[ 19...Rfc8 20.Rd1 Qf6 21.Bd5± ]

20.0-0 a5 Buscando liberar la Torre Dama de la defensa del Peon a, y permitir su centralizacion. 21.Rfd1 Rad8 22.Rab1?! Atraido por la posibilidad de obtener inmediata preponderancia en el Flanco Dama, el Blanco permite un pinchazo innecesario. Es cierto que ganara el peon a5, pero permitira que el Negro elimine la traba para avanzar su peon f. 22. Bd5 era la correcta. 22...Be4 23.Rb5 Consecuent e con su jugada anterior, el Blanco captura en a5, permitiendo que su propio Peon a quede libre. La captura del Peon d6 en vez del peon a5, permitia al Negro agregar nuevos recursos a su defensa, especulando con la permanencia de alfiles de distinto color en el final. Por ejemplo...

[ 23.Rb6 Bxf5 24.Nxf5 Qxf5 25.Rbxd6 Rxd6 26.Rxd6 Qf4 27.Rd1 e4 28.Bd5 Bxc3 29.Qxe4 Qxe4 30.Bxe4 Re8 Con buenas chances de tablas. ]

23...Bxf5 24.Nxf5 Qxf5 25.Rxa5 Qg6! 26.Bd5 f5 Y el Negro, aferrandose a su plan tematico, puede por fin iniciar una demostracion en el Flanco Rey. 27.c4 e4 28.Rb1?! Otra concesion del Blanco, provocada, sin duda, por su total confianza en su posicion. 28. Rb5! era mejor, preparando el avance del Peon a. 28...Bd4! Aprovechando la oportunidad para aumentar la potencia del Alfil, aun a costa de permitir el cambio de Damas. 29.Rab5

[ 29.Qd2 Bc5! 30.Qc3+ Qf6 31.Qxf6+ Rxf6 32.Rb7 e3! 33.fxe3 f4 ]

29...Rde8 Otra mejora imperceptible en la disposicion de las piezas Negras. 30.Qd1 Esta jugada, un tanto contemplativa, a pesar del ataque al Alfil Negro, muestra algun grado de incomodidad en la posicion Blanca. Aqui eran mejores 30. Qd2 o 30. a4, si bien las chances de victoria del bando blanco se han vuelto problematicas. Por ejemplo:

[ 30.a4 f4 31.Qd2 Qf6! 32.Rb7 ( 32.Qc2? e3! 33.Rb7 exf2+ 34.Kf1 Qh4∓ ) 32...f3 33.g3 Bxf2+! 34.Qxf2 e3 35.Qxf3 Qxf3 36.Bxf3 Rxf3 37.a5 e2 38.Re1 Ra3 39.Rb2 ( 39.Ra7 Re5 40.a6 Ra2 Con buenas chances de tablas. ) 39...Rxa5 40.Rexe2 Rxe2 41.Rxe2 Rc5 42.Re4 d5 43.cxd5 Rxd5= ]

[ 30.Qd2 Bc5 31.Qc3+ Qg7 32.Qxg7+ Kxg7 33.a4 e3 34.fxe3 f4 35.a5 fxe3♕ ]

de la Torre, descuidando la primera fila, no resulta la mejor manera de conseguir el objetivo deseado.

[ 31.a4 f4 32.Qc1 ( 32.a5?! f3 33.g3? Bxf2+!∓ ) 32...e3 33.Qc3+ Re5↑ ]

31...f4! 32.Qa1+ Qg7 33.Qxg7+ Kxg7 34.Rb7+

[ 34.Rxc5!? Con este interesante sacrificio de calidad, el Blanco podia trabar la maquinaria negra. Sin embargo, parece claro que, a estas alturas, mi rival todavia aspiraba a mas. Una continuacion posible era: dxc5 35.Rb5 e3 36.Kf1! Rb8! 37.a4 ( 37.Rxb8 Rxb8 38.fxe3 fxe3 39.Ke2 ) 37...Rxb5 38.cxb5!? Con juego complejo. ]

34...Kg6

[ 34...Kh6? 35.Rh3+± ]

35.Bc6?! Una perdida de tiempo, que ayuda a optimizar la distribucion de las fuerzas contrarias. Las Blancas estan entrando definitivamente en zona peligrosa. Mejores eran 35. Rh3, 35. a4 o 35. Kf1.

[ 35.Rh3 e3 36.fxe3 fxe3 37.Rg3+ Kh6 38.Rh3+= ]

35...Re5 36.Rb2?! Negandose a aceptar lo inevitable de la igualdad. Todavia eran posibles a4, Rh3 o Kf1.

[ 36.Rb8?? e3! 37.fxe3 fxe3-+ ]

36...e3 37.fxe3? No se con cuanta severidad se pueda juzgar esta movida, considerando que el Blanco ha logrado mantener su peon pasado de ventaja y , en apariencia, ha logrado aislar y bloquear solidamente al intruso Peon negro. Pero lo cierto es que ha sellado definitivamente su derrota! La ultima oportunidad de alcanzar el empate era permitir la captura negra en f2, mediante 37.Kf1 o 37. Rb1.

37...fxe3 38.Re2 Rf4! Amenazando el Peon c4 y permitiendo que las Torres se doblen en la columna f, sin temor a la clavada Be4. 39.Bd5 Ref5 40.Rb1 Kf6!! Con esta ugada de Rey, el Negro pone en marcha un plan de largo alcance, que le permitira decidir la partida a su favor. En este punto, tuve la suerte de que encontrarme de vacaciones, en febrero de 1.998, por lo que pude hacer una verdadera diseccion de la posicion y descubrir el metodo ganador. 41.a4

The computer's choice. We still go for c3 idea, but here Black hasn't wasted time on Kh8. 15.Qd3 a5 This weakens the b5-square, but at least Black gets rid of the weakness on a6 and prevents a potential b4 expansion later on, after an eventual c3 bxc3 Nbxc3 pawn structure change. 16.c3 Rb8 All games continued this way, but it is not the only move, possibly not even the best one. 17.Bb5 Ne7 Trying to simplify.

[ 10.a4? b4 because of the 11.Bxf6 bxc3 intermezzo. ]

10...Bxf6 11.a4 Gaining access to c4-square before launching the knight to d5.

11...b4 This looks automatic, but there are alternatives, in fact.

[ 11...Nd4!? 12.Bd3! Calm development. Black still has to decide what to do with the b-pawn. ( 12.axb5 Bg4! , but no one has managed to come up with this idea so far. [ 11...bxa4 This is not very good, just weakening the queenside. 12.Rxa4 0-0 13.Bc4 Followed by smooth development is just better for White. Black's entire queenside is weakened and our knights are going to run the show. ]

12.Nd5 0-0

[ 12...Bg5 then after 13.Bc4 the castle will anyway have to happen. ]

13.Bc4 Bg5

[ 13...Be6 after 14.0-0 , the move Bg5 will come anyway, so it all transposes. ]

14.0-0 Kh8 The idea of f5, while standard, looks imprecise here.

[ 14...Be6 The computer's choice. We still go for c3 idea, but here Black hasn't wasted time on Kh8. 15.Qd3

A) 15...Kh8 I had a chance to test my own recommendation at the big stage in Bucharest, when in the last round /variation/29098264 I was fighting for the podium, having beaten Ding Liren two rounds ago and now facing another exhausted World Championship match participant. Ian uncorked Kh8 here, which was definitely very clever. 16.Nd2 ( 16.c3 would be met with the energetic f5! . ) 16...Bxd2 Ian tried simplifying. 17.Qxd2 Qa5 ( 17...a5 , when after 18.c3 bxc3 19.bxc3 Ne7 20.Ne3 we keep the slightest of the pressures, thanks to Black's vulnerable d6-pawn and a weakened b5-square. ) 18.Qd3 . ( 18.c3 , which was enough for a mini plus, though then a lot of ups and downs happened in the game, before it was eventually drawn. Stronger, however, is to start with ) 18...Qc5 19.Rfd1 f5 is met with 20.Ne3! when Black has serious issues with the soft d6 pawn. Bxc4 21.Qxc4 The endgames are good for White.;

B) 15...Na5 Fedoseev played this against Kramnik and it is a decent practical attempt to get counterplay. Note, how Vladimir Kramnik played our epic trendy line in February 2022, way past his retirement. And he said he wasn't going to work on chess anymore... 16.Ba2 Qb8 17.Nd2 Nb7 18.Qe2! Now the b4-pawn hangs. first. ( 18.Nf3 , but the way to get the advantage was to move order Black with ) 18...Nc5 And here we don't go Nf3 either, allowing Bd8 which is what happened in the game Kramnik-Fedoseev, blitz 2022, but we get an opportunity to isolate some queenside weaknesses. 19.a5! Black is now worse and the best way to play is to follow a long semi-forced line. Bxd2 20.Qxd2 Nxe4 21.Qxb4 Bxd5 22.Qxb8 Raxb8 23.Bxd5 Nf6 All forced, Black is very close to equalizing here, as they have simplified enormously. 24.Bc4 We go after the a6-pawn. Rxb2 25.Rfd1 ( 25.Bxa6 because of Ra8! when our bishop doesn't have a good hiding square. Here we introduce the rook into the game and prepare a retreat for the bishop on f1. Black still has to be very precise to hold this unpleasant endgame, as the computer still indicates an edge for White. );

C) 15...a5 This weakens the b5-square, but at least Black gets rid of the weakness on a6 and prevents a potential b4 expansion later on, after an eventual c3 bxc3 Nbxc3 pawn structure change. 16.c3

C1) 16...Rc8 17.Rd1 We make a useful move for now.

C1a) 17...Kh8 A waiting move as well. 18.Ba6 bxc3 19.Nbxc3 ( 19.bxc3!? , but generally we go for the knight capture, so I will stick to the same here. ) 19...Rb8 20.Bb5 Nd4 ( 20...Qc8 there is an option to part with the second bishop as well and establish the epic knights with 21.Bxc6 Qxc6 22.Nb5! . White's position feels easier to play for me, but nobody canceled the fact that bishops is a thing, so Black can't be doing too badly here either. 21.Qg3 is also possible, asking the g5 bishop about its plans. ) 21.Ne2 -- ( 21...Bxd5!? 22.Nxd4 Bxe4 23.Qxe4 exd4 24.Qxd4 , but we keep some initiative and a small risk-free advantage. Similarly after 21...Nxe2 22.Qxe2 , it's not much, but we sit on the d5-square firmly and enjoy the light square control. );

C1b) 17...bxc3 Top choice of Stockfish, at least on some depth. The evaluation is dropping towards the floor, but the position still doesn't feel entirely equal to me, as we are the ones sitting on the weak square and can decide at what point do we want to get some action going. 18.Nbxc3 Nb4 19.Qe2 h5 Possibly a useful move, but not sure it does much. 20.h3 g6 21.b3 A standard idea in this system, strengthening our light square control, by defending the c4 bishop. Nxd5 22.Nxd5 We will sit on the d5-square and long term will try to either try and trade the light-squared bishop or/and perhaps get b4 at some point. Is won't be easy against accurate play, as the engine is able to prevent it, but waiting doesn't seem fun for Black, with no active ideas at all at this point, since I believe f5 is more likely counterproductive, only creating more weaknesses without getting a realistic chance at a kingside counterplay.;

C2) 16...Rb8 All games continued this way, but it is not the only move, possibly not even the best one. , also preventing 17.Bb5 ( 17.cxb4 , since after Nxb4 the c4 bishop is under pressure. ) 17...Na7 ( 17...Ne7 Trying to simplify. 18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.cxb4 Creating a protected passed a-pawn. axb4 20.Nd2 The position is quite simplified, but with a passed a-pawn, White is just slightly better. ) 18.cxb4 ( 18.c4!? is very interesting, but it is rather strategically complex. ) 18...axb4 19.Bc4 The bishop has returned, having ensured that the passed a-pawn has been created. Nc6 20.Nd2 -- ( 20...Bxd2 21.Qxd2 Na5 we can just defend the bishop with either 22.Qd3 or 22.Rac1 . )]

15.c3! Getting the b1-knight into the game and asking questions on the queenside.

15...bxc3 Played by Grischuk, but not sure it's ideal.

[ 15...Rb8 This is a good attempt at preventing our ideal setup with cxb4 and Nc3. 16.cxb4 ( 16.Qe2!? also deserves attention. With the text move, we go for a small plus. ) 16...Nxb4 17.Nxb4 Rxb4 18.b3 Be6 We didn't get the time for Nc3-Nd5 here, but we still have the better pawn structure and our knight is getting into the game through another route. 19.Na3! The knight will eventually land on c4. White is still for choice. Our intentions are simple. a1-rook belongs on b1, f1-rook on d1, the queen should come out to d3 or f3 and eventually Bxe6 followed by Nc4 is an idea as well, to get the knight fully into the game. ]

[ 15...Be6 16.cxb4 Nxb4 17.Nbc3 We generally aim for a position like this one. Next we want to solidify the c4 bishop with b3 and we want to sit on the d5-square. Long term we have an outside passed pawn on the queenside. ]
16.Nbxc3!
[ 16.bxc3 by Pichot. White need not fear Nd4, instead, we keep our pawn structure more fluid and want to create a passed pawn, which will distract Black from trying to organize meaningful counterplay on the kingside. ]
16...Rb8 17.Rb1 f5 18.exf5!?
[ 18.b4 , or try to use it to our advantage and gain control over one more light square in the center. ]
18...Bxf5 19.Bd3 Black now has two weak light squares. The position is very unpleasant and our play doesn't require much calculation at the moment, since the position plays itself. We sit on the light squares and eventually get an outside passed pawn.

Is won't be easy against accurate play, as the engine is able to prevent it, but waiting doesn't seem fun for Black, with no active ideas at all at this point, since I believe f5 is more likely counterproductive, only creating more weaknesses without getting a realistic chance at a kingside counterplay.

Of all White's options, this is the most anti-positional move. After recapturing towards the centre Black gets an extra central pawn and instead of controlling the d5-square, White needs to be careful not to be overrun by Black's pawncentre. with a typical position for structures arising from Nxc6, bxc6 Sicilians. Black has a powerful central duo, which is looking for possibilities to march further forward. Black's pieces are well positioned to support this advance, but on the other hand White's pieces are also concentrated on the centre, leading to some sort of dynamical balance in Pineda-Krauss, ICCF 2017. The good news is that there is plenty of play left in positions like this and from a long-term perspective I do like more Black's pawnstructure. ]

11.Bg3 Qe7

[ Another option is 11...Bxc3 12.bxc3 Nxe4 13.Bxe5 d5 which has been played in a couple of games. The position is about equal, but personally I do prefer the text, as it doesn't force matters yet. ]

12.Qd3 Bxc3 13.bxc3

[ 13.Qxc3? fails to Nxe4 14.Qxe5 Qxe5 15.Bxe5 Nd2 and Black wins an exchange. ]

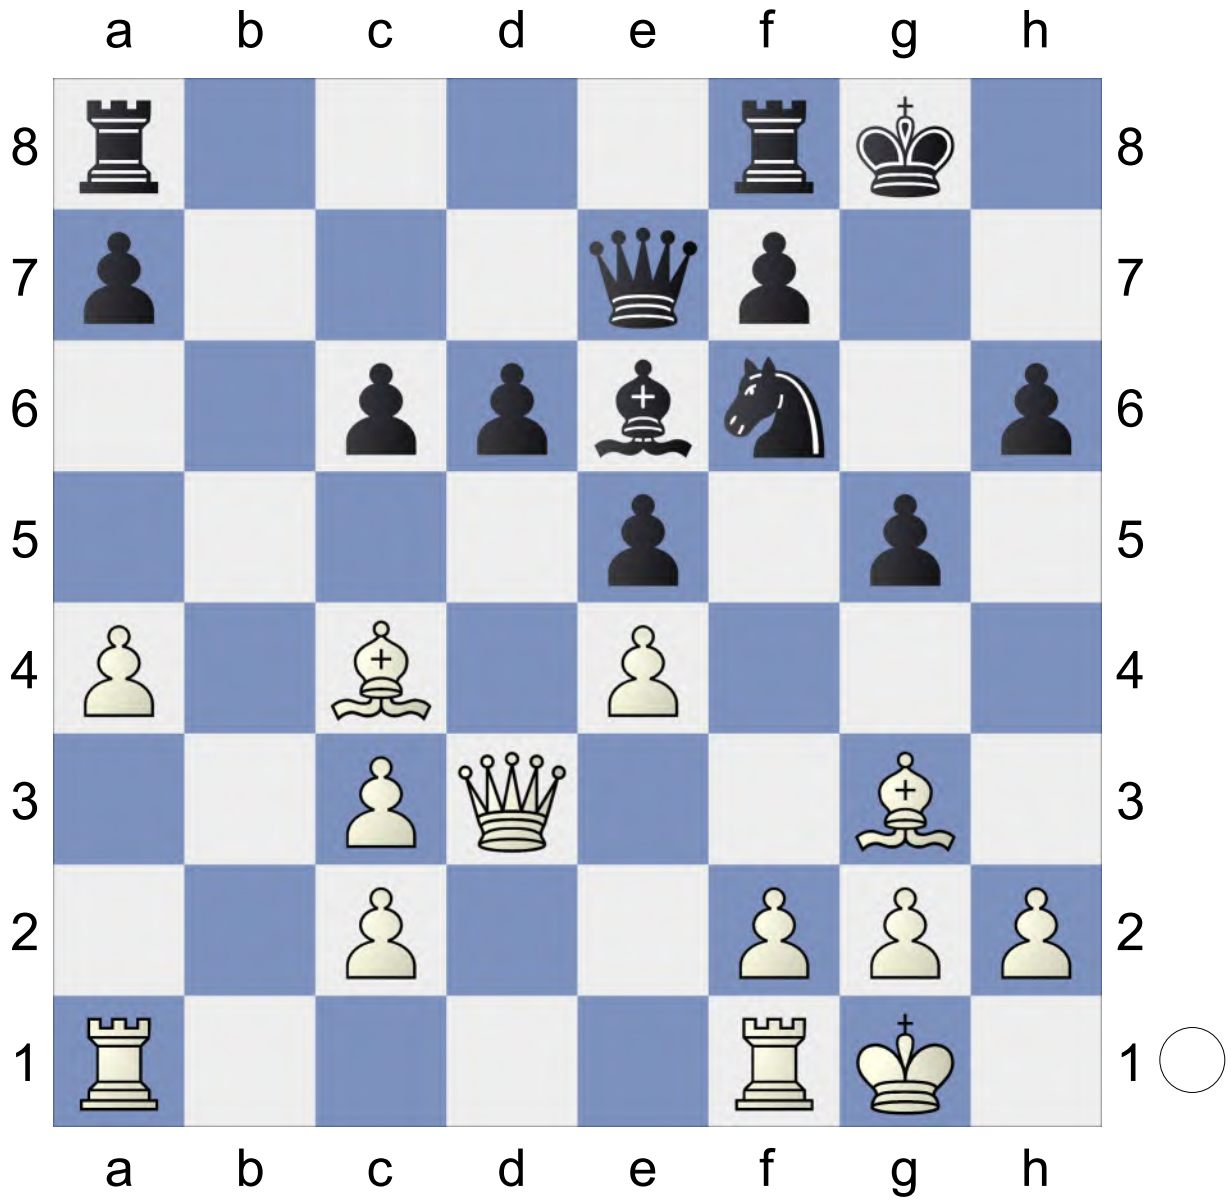
(Diagram)



Both sides don't have to fear anything at all and the position is about equal. There is still enough to play for with Black because of the imbalances in pawnstructure and material (knight vs. bishop), which makes it in my opinion an attractive choice outplaying weaker opponents. 15.f3 Bxc4 16.Qxc4 Rfc8 17.a5 d5 18.Qb4 c5 19.Qa4 c4 20.Rae1 dxe4 21.fxe4 Nh5 22.Rd1 Nf4 23.Qd7 Qf6 24.Bxf4 exf4 25.Rd6 Rd8 26.Rxf6 Rxd7 27.Rxh6 Re8 28.h4 Rxe4 29.hxg5 Rd2 30.g6 Rxc2 31.gxf7+ Kxf7 32.Rb1 Re7

Jacob Aagaard in his "Easy Guide to the Sveshnikov Sicilian" (a much more advanced book than its title suggests) calls 13 Nxb5 "an unimpressive win of a pawn". This positional piece sacrifice leads to an interesting play. For more information about the line, see the game Koch,J-Philippe,C/Bischwiller 2003 from ChessBase Magazine 94. 13...axb5

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5!? This position is very sharp and a nearly virgin field for further researches. This time Karpov decided for a positional pawn sacrifice. 9.Nd5!? Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 Black has to accept the sacrifice. 11.c4 White has compensation for the pawn, as the the b-file is open and after the exchange of the white-squared bishops the black kingside weaknesses are obvious. Black has to be awake and to finish his development carefully, taking care of his king. Not an easy task during a practical game, although Rybka's evaluation is that Black's position is ok. 11...b4?!

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 Wir sehen den Sveshnikov Sizilianer in dieser Partie.Eine scharfe Eröffnung. Um eine so scharfe Eröffnung spielen zu können, muss man sehr gut vorbereitet sein; es gibt viele Fallstricke und Fallen, in die Schwarz im Sveshnikov leicht fallen kann. Sie müssen volles Vertrauen in Ihre Fähigkeit haben, die entstehenden Positionen zu berechnen und zu bewerten. 7.Nd5

[ 7.Bg5 ist bei weitem der häufigste Zug hier. a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 Jetzt kann Schwarz sowohl 10...-f5 als auch 10. .-Bg7 spielen. Diese komplexe Variante war früher sehr beliebt.Heutzutage werden wir wahrscheinlich sehen, wie 7.Nd5 zu mehr Popularität heranwächst. ]

7...Nxd5 8.exd5 Ne7 Jetzt werden wir genau sehenwie der Textzug funktioniert.

[Der übliche Zug 8...Nb8 Dies ist der Hauptrückzug, der Npringer wird später über d7 auf den Königsflügel überführt.Es ist bekannt, dass dies die solideste Option für Schwarz ist. ]

9.c4

[Vor vielen Jahren, als ich Rogozencos Buch The Sveshnikov Reloaded las, erinnere ich mich, dass 9.c3 als das Beste von Weiß galt. Es gibt Weiß einige zusätzliche Optionen auf dem Qamenflügel. 9.c3 Jetzt sollte Schwarz wahrscheinlich 9... -Nf5 spielen, um d6 verteidigt zu halten. Wenn er Ng6? versucht,ist es ein Fehler, denn ( 9...f5!? 10.Qa4 Kf7 ist auch spielbar, obwohl Weiß nach 11.Qb4 leicht besser steht. ) 10.Qa4 Bd7 11.Qc4 ist unangenehm. Besonders, nach Rc8 12.Qb4 greift die d6 und a7 Bauern an. Rc5 13.Nxa7 Qb8 14.Qb6 Be7 15.Nc6 Qc8 16.Nxe7 Nxe7 17.Qxd6 Rxd5 18.Qa3 Nc6 19.Be3 Na5 20.Be2 Nc4 21.Qb3 Nxe3 22.fxe3 Rc5 23.0-0 0-0 24.Bf3 Rb5 25.Qc2 Be6 26.Rf2 f5 27.Raf1 Bxa2 28.Be2 Bb3 29.Rxf5 Rxf5 30.Qxf5 Qxf5 31.Rxf5 Ra5 32.Kf2 Ra2 33.e4 Rxb2 34.Ke3 b5 35.Rxe5 Bc4 36.Bxc4+ bxc4 37.Rg5 h6 38.Rg3 Kf7 39.Kd4 Re2 40.h4 g6 41.e5 Ke7 42.Rxg6 1-0 (42) Verhaeren, G (1469)-Blair,M (1500) IECG 2006 ]

9...Ng6 10.Qa4 Bd7 ist ein schneller Weg, um den Ausgleich zu erreichen. 11.Qb4 Bf5 Der beste Zug

[Der natürlichste Zug ist 11...Qb8 Der Qamenzug scheint die Partie nicht auszugleichen. Weiß hat einfach zu viel Raum. 12.h4 h5 13.Be2 a6 14.Nc3 Be7 15.g3± Nachdem natürliche Züge für beide Seiten gemacht worden sind, scheint, dass Weiß ein einfacheres Spiel hat und der Npringer auf g6 falsch platziert ist. ]

[Unnötig zu erwähnen ist das 11...Bxb5 12.Qxb5+ Qd7 zu vermeiden ist. Niemand sollte das Bäuferpaar aufgeben, ohne dafür etwas Konkretes zu bekommen. 13.Qxd7+ Kxd7 14.g3 Ne7 15.Bd3 Rc8 16.Be3 a6 17.f4 e4 18.Bxe4 Rxc4 19.Bd3 Ra4 20.Bc2 Ra5 21.Bb3 Nxd5 22.Bd4 h5 23.h4 Be7 24.0-0-0 Rf8 25.Kb1 Bf6 26.Bf2 Ne7 27.Rd3 Nc6 28.Rhd1 Be7 29.a4 Kc7 30.Be1 Rc5 31.Bd5 a5 32.Rb3 b6 33.Bf2 Nb4 34.Bxc5 bxc5 35.Re3 Bf6 36.Bc4 Nc6 37.Rde1 Kd7 38.Bb5 Rb8 39.Re8 Rxe8 40.Bxc6+ Kxc6 41.Rxe8 Bd4 42.Rc8+ Kd5 43.Ra8 Bf2 44.Rxa5 Bxg3 45.Ra7 Bxh4 46.Rxf7 Bd8 47.Rxg7 h4 48.Rg8 Ba5 49.Rh8 1-0 (49) Sacerdotali,S (2137)-Kroes,F (1903) Lechenicher SchachServer 2011 ]

[ 12...h5N Schwarz schlägt zurück und gibt Weiß keinen Raum mehr, um damit zu arbeiten.Weiß hat allerdings mehr Raum und es ist nicht ungefährlich für Schwarz.

Zufällig ist dies laut meiner Datenbank auch eine Neuerung. 13.Qa4
Ein provokanter Zug und eine typische Strategie die Züge zu wiederholen um Zeit zu gewinnen auch im Fernschach! Dies ist bei komplizierten oder unbekannten Eröffnungen wie der Sweschnikow sinnvoller. In dieser Partie könnte es von Vorteil sein, da wir uns in einem so frühen Stadium der Partie abseits der Theorie befinden. Bd7 14.Qb4 Bf5

A) Ein langsamer Zug wie 15.Be2 wird es Weiß nicht schaffen,nach einem Vorteil zu suchen. Nach Be7 16.g3 a6 17.Nc3 e4 schafft Schwarz ein starkes Gegenspiel mit ...-Bf6 und ...-Ne5.;

B) Es ist verlockend, die Entwicklung von Schwarz zu unterbrechen, indem man 15.Bg5 und im Nachhinein würde ich diesen Zug empfehlen. Schwarz will nicht wirklich ...-f6 spielen, und ...-Be7 verliert folgend Qb8 muss gespielt werden. ( 15...Be7? 16.Bxe7 Kxe7 17.c5 ist schlecht für Schwarz. Nun wird sein König nach f6 gezwungen. dxc5 18.Qxc5+ Kf6 Und jetzt lässt 19.Nd6 den schwarzen König in einer schwierigen Lage zurück. 19.Nd6± )

B1) 16.Qa5!? ist ein tiefer Enginezug. Die lustige Idee ist, dass b6 17.Qa4 Bd7 18.Bd3 Weiß will schnell mit Bf5 gewinnen, aber Be7! gleicht aus und nimmt den Spaß heraus. ( 18...a6 19.Bf5! ist schwer zu widerlegen für Schwarz. ) 19.Bxg6 fxg6 20.Bxe7 Kxe7 21.Qc2 Kf7=;

B2) 16.g3 a6 17.Nc3 Be7 18.Be2 Qc7 Schwarz muss zwei Tempi aufwenden, um seine Qame von b8 nach c7 zu ziehen.;

C) 15.Be3 Weiß gewinnt Zeit, indem er Drohungen auf dem Qamenflügel erzeugt. Ich nehme an, er muss schnell handeln, sonst beendet Schwarz seine Entwicklung bequem. Dann garantiert die Konstruktion der schwarzen Figuren aktiv auf dem Königsflügel Gegenspiel. In dieser Hinsicht sieht 15.g5 auch interessant aus.

C1) 15...Be7 Schwarz wird eine schnelle Entwicklung und ein Figurenspiel für seinen Bauern erhalten. 16.Nxa7 ( 16.Bxa7 0-0 17.g3 b6
Der Ba7 befindet sich in einer schwierigen Lage*.; 16.g3* Schwarz kann seine Entwicklung durch Rochade beenden oder 16..-Be4 und 17...-Bf3 spielen. ) 16...0-0 Weiß hat jetzt viele Möglichkeiten. Es ist nicht einfach, sich gegen die Initiative von Schwarz über das Brett zu verteidigen. Vielleicht 17.Bb6 ( 17.g3 Be4 18.Rh2 Bf3 19.Nb5 f5! mit Angriff*; 17.Qxb7? Bd8 19.Qxd7 Bxd7 20.Bxd8 Rfxd8 21.Nb5 Bxb5 22.cxb5 Ra4 23.g3 Rc8∞;

C2) 15...a6 Hier hat Schwarz eine weitere scheinbar bessere (wenn auch riskantere) Option. 16.Nc3 Qc7 Solide und einfach. *(*Es ist nicht notwendig, sich für asymmetrische Positionen zu entscheiden. 16...Be7 17.Qxb7 0-0 18.0-0-0 Nxh4 19.Qb6± der h4-Bauer nicht so wichtig ist wie der b7-Bauer von Schwarz. ) 17.g3 ( 17.Qa4+ Bd7 18.Qd1 Ne7 ) 17...Be7 18.f3 ( 18.Qa4+ Bd7 19.Qd1 Bg4 20.Be2 Bxe2 21.Qxe2; 18.Be2 Nf8 ) 18...Nf8! Optimale Neuanordnung der Figuren. In dieser Art von Positionen sollte Schwarz die Rochade verzögern, bis Weiß seine Absicht zeigt. d5 16.cxd5 f4!? Black's plan here is simple. He's going to play Kh8, Rg8, then to take the dark-squared bishop away from the g-file intending to bring on this file as many heavy pieces as possible.

[ Radjabov had tried this move against Kramnik in Dortmund 2003. He had lost that game and turned to the common 16...fxe4 17.Bxe4 Rb8 scoring the wins against Vallejo and Smirnov and drawing with Lutz, Topalov and Leko. Nevertheless Kramnik in his annotations suggested an improvement which Black apparently wanted to test in the present game ]

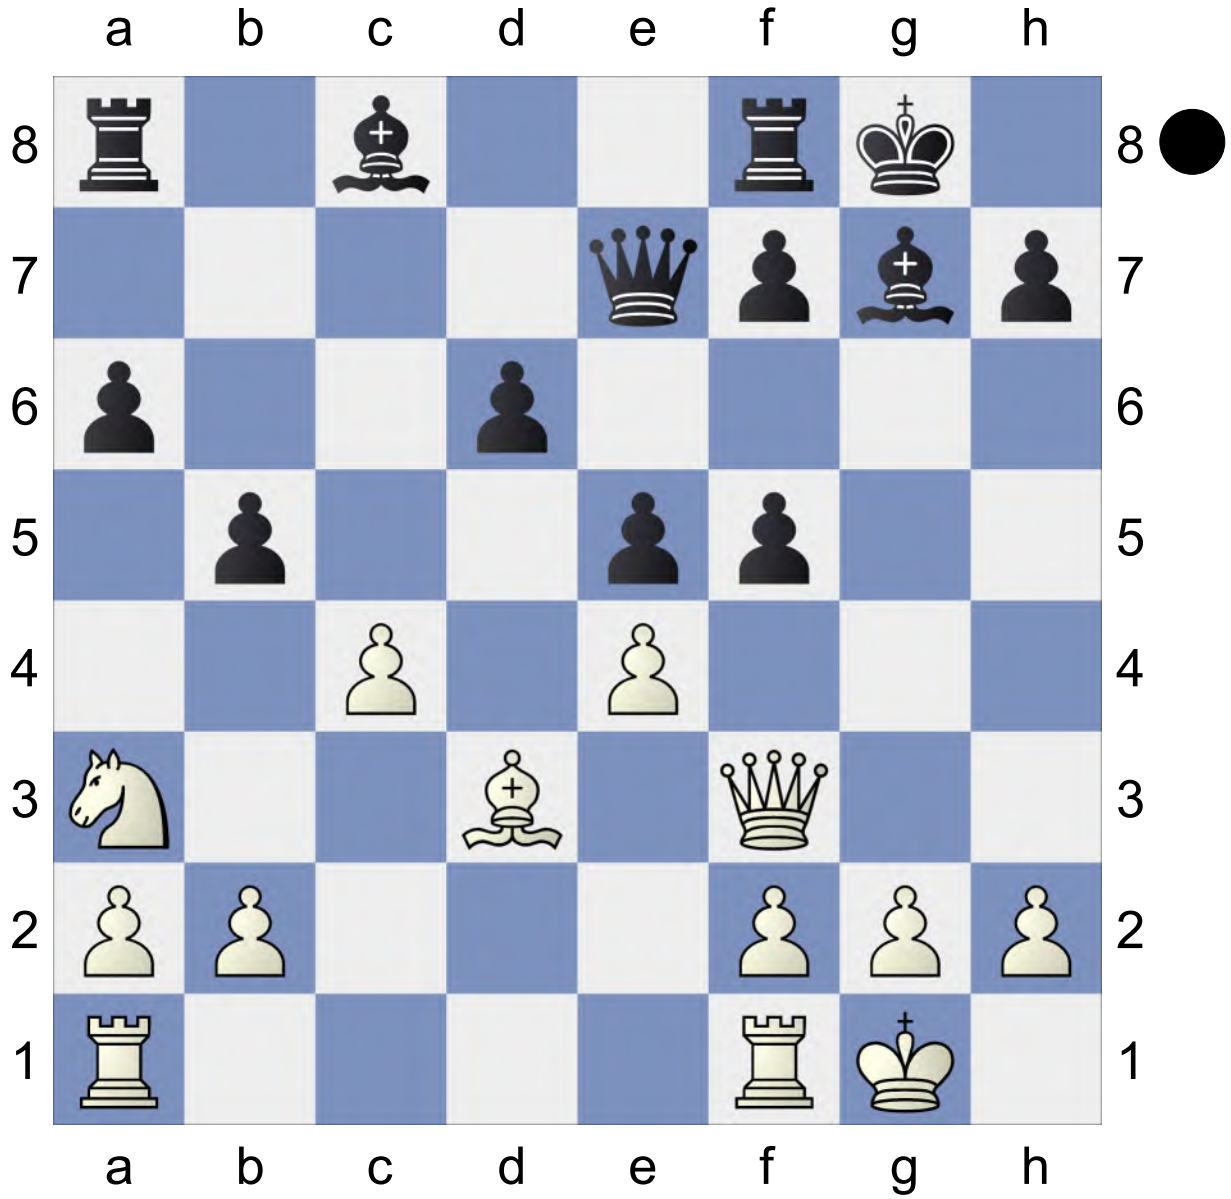
[ Kramnik put the other rook on this square and won after 17.Rfc1 Kh8 18.Nc2



Bd7 19.Ne1! Rg8 20.Be2! Bf8 21.Nd3 Re8 *(*to 21...Bg4 White would have willingly sacrificed the queen ) 22.Rc7 Qd8 23.Rac1 Rg6 24.Qh5 Bd6 25.Ra7 Qe7 26.h3 f5 27.exf5 Rf6 28.Nc5! Rc8 29.Rxd7 Rxc5 30.Rxe7 Rxc1+ 31.Kh2 But 18...Bd7 wasn't essential. Black could have played Rg8 right away. ]

17...Kh8 18.Rfd1 Quite logical: White places one rook at the open file while another one is destined to support the passed pawn 18...Rg8 19.Be2 Qb4!?

(Diagram)

Attacking Pb2 and aiming at Pe4 Black tries to force the white rook to occupy the c2 square which temporarily leaves the knight out of play. Perhaps objectively it was the best continuation for White but it was too tedious for the South African player 20.Rc7!?

[ 20.Rc2 Bb7 with the idea of Rac8 *(*worse is 20...f5 21.Bd3 ) and if 21.Rc7 Rab8 where Pb2 is attacked again ]

20...Qxb2 21.Rxf7 Qxa2 22.Rd3 Lifting the rook White unties his queen. The problem with this move is that it deprives the knight of the c4 square. Secondly the squares of the 3rd rank attractive for the rook are under Black's control. 22...b4 23.Qh5 h6 Note that Black is playing for a win.

[After 23...bxa3 24.Rxg7!

A) risky is 24...Kxg7 25.Qxe5+ Kg6 ( 25...Kf7? 26.Qxf4+ ) as White has at least perpetual while the consequences of 26.Rc3 may be unpleasant for Black;

B) 24...Rxg7 25.Qe8+ Rg8 26.Qxe5+ Rg7 the game ends up by perpetual ]

24.d6 Be6!

[GM Davorin Kuljasevic]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 The main goal of this move is to damage Black's pawn structure.
[ By contrast, in the positional variation 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 instead of damaging Black's kingside structure, White typically plans to get the upper hand on the queenside with the quick c3, Nc2, a4, etc. 11.c3 ( 11.c4!? b4 12.Nc2 is a different approach altogether. ) 11...Bg5 12.Nc2 0-0 *(*Black cannot easily eliminate the d5-knight in this variation, for example: 12...Ne7 13.h4!? Bh6 14.a4 bxa4 15.Ncb4 ) Here is a sample line that shows White's main ideas in the positional variation: 13.a4! bxa4 14.Rxa4 Kh8 15.Bc4 This solidifying move is almost never available to White in the dynamic 9.Bxf6 line; he has no time for a2-a4 in most cases. f5 16.exf5 Bxf5 17.0-0 a5 18.Nce3 Be6 19.Qc2⩲
White has a strong grip on the light squares and Black counterplay in the center is not so dangerous compared to 9.Bxf6 because his pawn is on g7 and not on f5. This is just a line that allows us to compare and contrast 9.Bxf6 and 9.Nd5 variations; Black has many resources to balance the game, of course. ]
9...gxf6 Black has: 1. a dynamic pawn center 2. bishop pair advantage 3. often has to be ready to sacrifice a pawn or two to activate his assets White: 1. has a better pawn structure 2. controls white-square complex 3. usually tries to capitalize on the d5-square and the light squares
[ 9...Qxf6? preserves structural integrity but fails tactically to 10.Nd5 Qd8 11.Bxb5! A very typical and, often, dangerous motif in this variation. Here, it leads to a dominant position for White after axb5 12.Nxb5 Qa5+ 13.c3 Kd8 14.a4→ ]
10.Nd5 Bg7 By overprotecting the f6-pawn, Black prepares to exchange the powerful d5-knight with ...Ne7. I recommend this move for the basis of the Sveshnikov repertoire because it leads to simpler and more intuitive positions than the alternative 10...f5.
[ 10...f5 is a different approach. Instead of challenging the d5-knight, Black decides to ignore it for the time being and fight for the control of the e4-square at once. It usually leads to more complex play compared to 10...Bg7.
A) 11.c3 is another common approach. Bg7 ( 11...fxe4? is premature in the view of 12.Bxb5! axb5 13.Nxb5 Be6 14.Nbc7+ Kd7 15.Nxa8 Bxd5 16.Qxd5± ) 12.exf5 Bxf5 13.Nc2 0-0 14.Nce3 Be6 15.Bd3 f5

(Diagram)

This is an important tabiya of the 9.Bxf6 variation. Since we also reach it from the 9...Bg7 10.c3 f5 11.exf5 move order, we will study it in the 9...Bg7 variation.;
B) 11.g3 has been somewhat neglected in the past, but strong players have been giving it more attention recently. After fxe4 12.Bg2 Be6 13.Bxe4 Bg7! 14.Qh5 ( 14.Nf6+?! Bxf6 15.Bxc6+ Ke7 16.Bxa8 Qxa8↑ ) 14...Rc8 15.Rd1

(Diagram)

Black cannot castle nor play the thematic ...f5 easily. We have an interesting middlegame ahead, where Black's chances are not worse. For example, Ne7 16.c3 Rc5! 17.Nxe7 Qxe7 18.Nc2 d5 19.Bf5 d4!⇄;

C) 11.Bxb5!? axb5 12.Nxb5 looks dangerous and gave Black some problems in the distant past. However, 20 years ago, Peter Leko demonstrated a reliable path for Black: Ra4 13.b4 Rxb4 14.Nbc7+ Kd7 15.0-0 Rg8!⇄ 16.g3 Rb7 17.Qh5 Qg5 18.Qxf7+ Be7 19.Nxe7 Nxe7 20.Ne6 Qg6 21.Nf8+ Rxf8 22.Qxf8 fxe4 23.Rfb1 Rc7 24.a4 e3 25.fxe3 Qe4 0-1 (25) Luther,T (2566)-

D) 11.Bd3 This is the most popular move. 11...Be6

D1) These days, White often tries to get the upper hand with 12.c3 Bg7 and now: 1) 13.Qh5!? is quite popular. *(*2) GM Negi's old recommendation 13.Nxb5!? axb5 14.Bxb5 leads to a double-edged position: Rc8 15.Qa4 Bd7 16.exf5 0-0 17.0-0 e4!∞ ) 13...0-0 14.exf5 Bxd5 15.f6 e4 16.fxg7 Re8 17.Be2 This position is roughly equal, although I feel like White has a slightly easier game in this structure due to his control of the dark-square complex.;

D2) 12.0-0 Bxd5 13.exd5

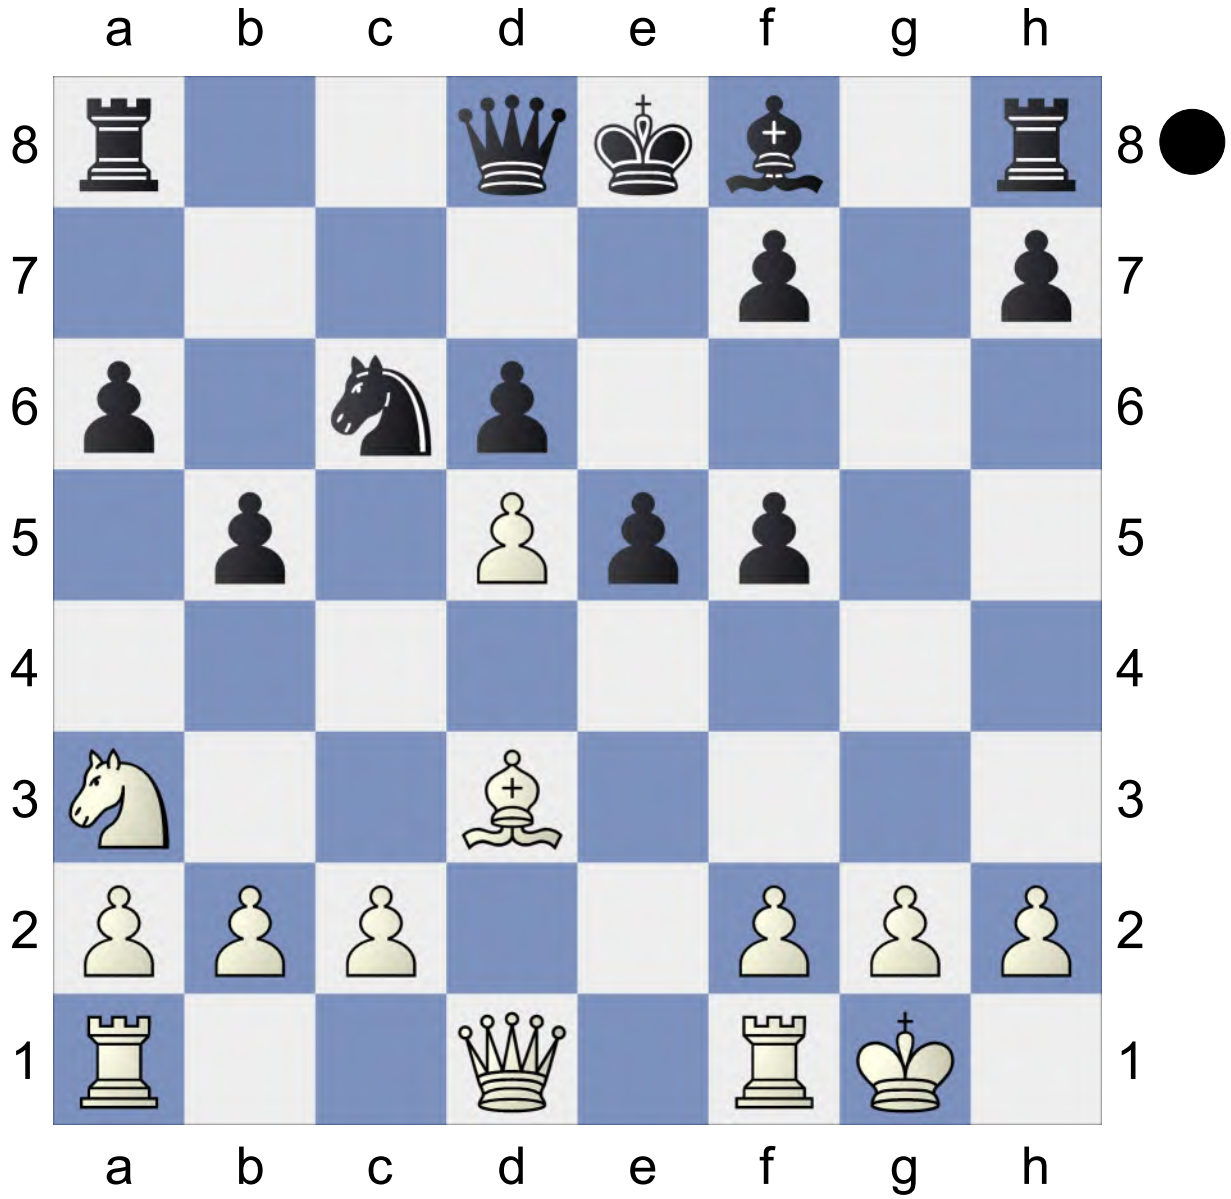
(Diagram)



A very interesting middlegame. It seems like White should be better but Black's dynamic possibilities compensate for his damaged pawn structure. Ne7 14.Re1!? This positional line has become the main attempt for White to obtain an advantage these days. *(*In the past, White preferred the more aggressive 14.c3 Bg7 15.Qh5 e4 16.Bc2 0-0 17.Rae1 but Black was usually doing well in practice after Qc8!∞ ) 14...Bg7 15.c3 0-0 16.Nc2 ( 16.Qh5!? might be a more accurate move order in order to provoke e4 17.Bf1 Re8 18.Nc2 Nxd5 19.Qxf5 Re5 20.Qh3= This structure is very similar to the main line of 12.c3 Bg7 13.Qh5. Again, even though the position is roughly equal, it feels a bit easier to play for White because of the central blockade. Qb6 21.Rad1 Rae8 22.Rxe4 Rxe4 23.Rxd5 R4e5 ) 16...f4!? an ambitious plan, very much in the spirit of the opening. 16.0-0 *(*Another big line goes 16.Qh5 e4 17.Bc2 Ne7 18.Rd1 and here Black gets nice counterplay with a help of thematic pawn sacrifice b4!; 16.Bc2 Black can virtually force a draw with f4!? 17.Qh5 Rf7= etc. ) 16...Kh8 17.Qh5 e4 18.Bc2 White plans to undermine the e4-pawn and attack the one on f5. We have two good ways to fight against it: Ne7 *(*and 18...Ne5!? 19.Nf4 Bd7

[ 11.g3!? has become popular recently. White doesn't mind us playing 11...f5, which transposes into 10...f5 11.g3. 12...Qxe7

(Diagram)

13.c4 This is the most direct continuation. It leads to sharp play and the opening theory runs deep, sometimes even into the endgame. Nevertheless, Black should be in great shape if he knows his theory.

[ 13.c3!? is a more quiet, positional variation. However, it should not be underestimated because White can usually put pressure on the queenside. As Black, we must create counterplay on the kingside and the center as quickly as possible. f5 14.0-0 ( 14.Nc2 Qb7!; 14.Qh5 d5! ) 14...0-0 15.Nc2 Rb8 ( 15...d5!? is a popular move in correspondence chess. 16.exf5 e4 17.Be2 Rd8⩱; 15...f4 16.a4 bxa4 17.Rxa4 is quite double-edged. ) 16.exf5 e4 17.Be2 Bxf5 18.Nb4 Qg5⇄ ]

13...f5 14.0-0 0-0 15.Qh5 The sharpest option.

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5!?
In my opinion, this move is not that stupid. White seizes a lot of space and prevents Black from building a standard position by pushing ...e7-e5. 7...a6 8.Na3 b5
The most principled continuation. 9.Nd5 Be7N 10.Bxf6!? Forcing Black to put his knight on a6 - not the best square for it! On the other hand, White weakens some squares in his own camp, so Black gets counterchances. 10...Bxf6 11.c3 Rb8!?
I was expecting that human move, because it allows him to bring the knight back.
12.Nc2 Bg5 13.Be2 0-0? The first real mistake of Elbek - Black cannot afford to waste a tempo in such an unbalanced position! 14.0-0 I was quite happy with my position - suddenly all my pieces are active and have clear targets! 14...a5?
Black is searching for tactical complications, while his q-side is undeveloped. That leads to an immediate disaster!

BARBARA BOLZ besiegt Moyseenko-ICCF bestätigt OLYMPIAGOLD! In der 10. Olympiade brannten die deutschen Damen ein Feuerwerk ab!!!! Barbara Bolz hat an Brett 2 im Finale der 10.Damenolympiade die Vizeweltmeisterin Tetinia Moyseenko aus der Ukraine besiegt und das deutsche Damenteam uneinholbar auf den ersten Platz gebracht-inzwischen bestätigte der ICCF den Gewinn der olympischen Goldmedaillen für die deutschen Damen! 1.e4 Barbara kam bereits gut aus der Eröffnung heraus.Der weiß vorgerückte h-Bauer hat unter anderem in Verbindung mit dem schwarzfeldrigen Ber sowie der schwarzen Qame eine empfindliche Schwächung auf g3 in der weißen Position hervorufen können.Konsequenterweise hat Barbara das Remisangebot ihrer Gegnerin im 40. Zug abgelehnt.Es entstand in der Folge ein Endspiel mit Schwerfiguren , ungleichfarbigen Bern und einem Minusbauern für Schwarz.Dennoch konnte Barbara ihre positionelle Überlegenheit in der Folge ausbauen und in ein materielles Übergewicht sowie ein gewonnenes Endspiel verwandeln. Das gesamte deutsche Team liegt nunmehr uneinholbar mit 31 Punkten (noch zwei offene Partien)vor Litauen 30 Punkte(keine Partie mehr offen). Die Entscheidung um den dritten Platz ist noch nicht gefallen,derzeit liegt Rußland mit 26 Punkten (noch 2 Partien offen)vor der Ukraine (2Partien offen).Theoretische Chancen auf Platz 3 haben auch noch Polen (24 Punkte 3 Partien offen)und der Slovakei (23 Punkte 5 Partien offen). Das deutsche Team hat mit diesem überzeugenden Sieg ein Stück Schachgeschichte geschrieben,alle Spielerinnen haben an ihren Brettern herausragende Ergebnisse erzielt. BRETT 1 SVETLANA KLOSTER 7 Punkte +3 BRETT 2 BARBARA BOLZ 8,5 Punkte +6 BRETT 3 KIRSTIN ACHATZ 7 Punkte +4 (eine Partie noch offen) BRETT 4 IRENE NEUBURGER 8,5 Punkte +7 (eine Partie noch offen) 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 Ist der Hauptzug in der Fernschach Datenbank 2017,der Qamenzug

10.Bxf6 Ist der Hauptzug und gut spielbar.Aber zu bemerken ist das Schwarz das

[ 15.Bb5 Die Smyslov-Variante ist nicht mehr in Mode.Schwarz hat klare Wege gefunden, um ein gutes Spiel zu bekommen. ]

15...Bd7 Statt der Hauptfortsetzung mit 15 ... Rb8 zu folgen wählt Barbara Bolz eine seltene Seitenlinie, die u.a. von GM Radjabov befürwortet wird.

Nevertheless! The last two moves have prepared this thematic push, while Black has tried to disable it.

[ 13.Be2 0-0 was examined in the previous file. ]

13...bxa4 14.Ncb4 Nxb4 15.cxb4

[If White desires to keep his queenside pawns intact, then he must put his hopes for getting an opening advantage on 15.Nxb4 , to which Bd7 is the best reaction, sticking to the a4-pawn. The critical position arises after 16.Bxa6 ( 16.Qxd6? Be7 ) 16...Qa5 17.Qxd6 Rb6 18.Qd3 , when Black can regain the pawn by Be7 19.Nd5 Rxb2 and meet 20.0-0 with Qc5 21.Rab1 ( 21.c4 0-0 22.Bb5 Bxb5 23.cxb5 Bd8 24.Rxa4 Qxb5 25.Qxb5 Rxb5= ) 21...Rxb1 22.Rxb1 0-0 and now:

A) The tournament practice after 23.Bb5 has shown that Black is holding after the direct exchange, but in my view Be8! is even more precise;

B) 23.Nxe7+ Qxe7 24.Rb7 Rd8 looks suspicious, but, due mainly to the essential role of his far advanced a-pawn, Black can get out of the pins. 25.Bc4 ( 25.h3 Qe8 26.Bc4 Be6 27.Bd5 Bxd5 28.exd5 a3 29.Ra7 Qf8 30.Qc4 g6= ) Black has at least two reliable options, such as 25...Qe8 , preparing both the exchange of the bishops and the support of the main asset - the a4-pawn - by a timely Rd8-a8, for example 26.Ra7 Be6 27.Bd5 Bxd5 28.exd5 g6 29.c4 Ra8 △30.Rxa8 Qxa8 31.d6 a3 32.d7 Qd8 33.Qxa3 Qxd7= ; there is also the cool-blooded 25...h6 with more active ideas for the queen like 26... 1.e4 In that game, you will see a pawn majority attack on the kingside. Advancing a pawn majority may have a few goals: - getting more space and limiting the activity of the opponent's pieces - trying to destroy the enemy king's position and then finishing the attack with pieces. - creating a passed pawn 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Nb8 9.a4 We can see one very interesting line in the Sveshnikov variation. With that move a4, white wants to play Na3-Nc4 and take the control of the b6 square. 9...Be7 10.Be2 0-0 11.0-0 Of course, both sides want to protect their kings. 11...f5 Black has a pawns majority on the kingside and their plan is to attack that side.
[ 11...Nd7!? 12.Kh1 a6 13.Na3 f5 14.f4 exf4 15.Bxf4 Nc5= 16.Nc4 a5 ]
12.f4 a6 13.Na3 exf4 14.Bxf4 And now black has to think about how to activate their pieces on the queenside. 14...Nd7± 15.Nc4 In that position the knight on c4 looks very strong, that's why we want to exchange him. ⩲15...Nb6 16.Kh1 Nxc4= 17.Bxc4 Bf6 18.c3 ⩲Qc7 19.Qb3?!
[ ⩲19.Bd3 g5 20.Be3 f4 21.Bg1 ⩲Qg7= ]
19...g5!∓ 20.Be3 f4!∓ What we can see in the last four moves is that black developed their pieces with a tempo and took the initiative. By the way, this is the best way for developing. 21.Bb6 Qg7!-+ Black follows their plan to attack the kingside. 22.Qb4 Attacking the pawn on d6. 22...Be5-+ 23.Bd4 ⩲Bxd4 24.cxd4 ⩲Rf6 Protecting the d6 pawn and planning to transfer the rook on the g-file or h-file if it's necessary. 25.Rae1 When we attack the opponent we have to activate all pieces. ⩲25...Bf5! 26.Qb3 Raf8!-+ 27.Bd3 ⩱Bc8 Every exchange decrease the power of our attack. 28.Rc1 Rh6!? 29.Qb6 ⩲g4 with idea g3, B:h3 30.Rxc8 The only chance for white to save the position is to sacrifice an exchange. 30...Rxc8 31.Bf5 ⩱Rf8 32.Be6+ Kh8 The light-squared bishop is not dangerous because all of our pieces are on black squares. This is a very good strategy if we want to make the opponent's bishop useless. 33.Qxd6 g3

[ ⩲33...f3! 34.g3 Rhf6-+ with idea Qg6-Qc2 or Qe4 ]

34.h3 ⩱f3! We have to destroy the protection of the king. 35.Qe5 fxg2+??

[ ⩲37...g2+ 38.Kg1 Qxe5 39.dxe5 Rh5 40.b4 Rxe5-+ Black receives an easy winning endgame. ]

39.Bg4= White created a fortress and equalized the position. 39...Qg6 40.d6 Qb1+ 41.Kxg2 Unfortunately, there is no checkmate in that position. 41...Qf1+ 42.Kh2 Qf2+ 43.Kh1 What we have learned from that game: - -Before you start advancing your pawns – make sure that they are going to stay well protected and get support from your pieces. -Try to advance your pawn majority without allowing possibilities to block them. Keep the structure of your pawn majority flexible.

[ The main variation goes 7.Bg5 ]

7...Nxd5 8.exd5 Nb8

[ 8...Ne7 is also playable, but the move played is supposed to be a bit better. After 9.c3 with the threat of Qa4 black faces some practical problems and is forced to move his knight once again. ]

9.a4 White stops black to carry through ...a7-a6 followed by b7-b5 and now he plans to manoevre his knight to c4 to put some pressure on the black center.

[ However 9.c4 is the more usual continuation. ]

9...Be7 10.Be2 0-0 11.0-0 Nd7 12.Kh1 Prepares f2-f4. After the immediate [ 12.f4 black can answer with a6 13.Na3 b5! with the idea 14.axb5 axb5 15.Bxb5?? Qb6+ 16.Kh1 Rxa3 with a clear advantage to black. ]
12...a6 13.Na3 f5 14.f4 Bf6 15.Nc4 Nb6 16.fxe5 dxe5 17.Ne3! An exchange of the knights would favor black and so white chooses to go away. This also prepares for c2-c4 and possibly a timely a5. 17...Bg5! Black protects his f-pawn and in the same time threatens to take on e3, winning a pawn.
[ The immediate 17...f4 is worse and can be met with 18.a5! ]
18.c4
[ 18.a5? loses a pawn after Bxe3 19.Bxe3 Nxd5 with a clear advantage to black. ]
[ but instead the untried 18.d6!? would have been a very interesting possibility. ]
18...a5!?N A novelty! The idea is to stop white from playing a5 and also to get control over the black squares. Now ...Be7 is threatened followed by ...Bc5 to block the white queenside pawns.
[ Also possible was 18...f4 19.a5 Nd7 20.Nc2 e4 as in the game Zelcic - Sutovsky, Struga zt 1995, with a good game for black. ]
19.d6 Be6 20.c5 f4! A strong and very important move. White has an advantage after both [ 20...Nd7 21.Nd5 and ]
[ 20...Bxe3 21.Bxe3 Nd5 22.Qb3! ]
21.Nc4!?
[ After 21.cxb6 fxe3 white has got problems to get out with his black squared bishop and in addition both his d- and b-pawns are hanging loosely. ]
21...Nd7 Now ...Rc8 is to come, winning the xc5.
[ Black also wins a pawn after 21...Nxc4 22.Qb3 Nxd6 23.Qxe6+ Nf7 but here white has a strong pair of bishops in comensation. After 24.b3 it is difficult to find anything convincing for black. Perhaps would this still give better winning chances than the game. ]
22.b4?! White was probably feeling a bit squeezed and wanted to get his pieces out. An interesting move, but not really nessesary.
[ The natural 22.Bd2 looks better. After Nxc5 23.Bc3 white will get back the pawn on e5 because 23...e4?? looses a piece after 24. Qd4 threatening both the mate on g7 and the knight on c5. ]
[ Even 22.b3 was possible, but after Nxc5 23.Bb2 black can still keep the pawn with Bf6 because the b3 pawn will be hanging after all exchanges on e5. However the active white pieces and the strong passed d-pawn fully compensates for the pawn loss. ]
22...axb4 23.Rb1 Rc8
[ An interesting alternative was 23...e4 24.Qd4 Rxa4 also with a clear plus to black. Nevertheless I wanted to play a little bit more calm, not allowing any counterplay for white as I was already getting some time trouble. ]
24.Rxb4 Rxc5 25.Nd2 Rd5 Now I wanted to get rid of the nasty d-pawn.

Unfortunately you get nothing for free and in return I needed to give my important pawn on b7. 26.Qc2 Rxd6 27.Rxb7 Be7 28.Bb2
[ 28.Ba3? is bad because of Rxd2 29.Qxd2 Bxa3 30.Rd1 Rf7 31.Bb5 f3! 32.Bxd7 f2 33.Qxf2 *(*In case of *33.Bxe6? 28...Rb6? This natural move throws away the most of the black advantage. White is controlling the e4-square which makes it difficult for black to advance with his central pawns.Moreover the white passed a-pawn is an important powerful factor.Instead
[ 28...Qa8! should have been played. After 29.Bf3 Rc8 black still holds a clear advantage. ]
29.Rxb6 Qxb6 30.Bd3! White activates his bishop with tempo. This also prevents ... Bf5 and black is forced to weaken his king position. 30...h6 31.Nc4 Qc7?
A careless move in the time trouble. Instead [ 31...Qb8 should be played, but after 32.Qe2 white is completely fine as well. ]
32.Nxe5?! White wins back the pawn and forces a drawn endgame, but after [ 32.Bh7+! Kh8 and now 33.Nxe5 Qxc2 34.Bxc2 Nxe5 35.Bxe5 black will be facing some difficulties. Still a draw would be the most natural result, but it´s not yet completely clear. White has still got some winning chances thanks of his passed a-pawn. ]

Ds man die Ponzianieröffnung als Überraschungseröffnung durchaus anwenden kann sieht man in folgender Partie. Schwarz muss einige präzise Züge finden, um

Ausgleich zu bekommen. Kleine Ungenauigkeiten erlauben es Weiß, einen sicheren Vorteil zu erlangen. Aber natürlich kann man mit Ponziani als Haupteröffnung nicht leben, ab einem bestimmten Zeitpunkt fangen die Gegner an, sich richtig vorzubereiten und nur in die soliden Varianten zu gehen, dann wird es kein Spaß mehr machen. Aber ab und zu gespielt, ist Ponziani eine gefährliche Waffe. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 Die mit Abstand sicherste Antwort auf 1.e4 ist heute 1...e5. Es ist sehr schwer für Weiß, einen Vorteil in der Russischen oder Spanischen Partie zu erlangen. Nun, leider lässt sich Russisch so gut wie gar nicht umgehen, nur wenn man Königsgambit oder etwas Ähnliches spielt. Dagegen gibt es mehrere Möglichkeiten, den spanischen Varianten aus dem Weg zu gehen. Die am häufigsten vorkommenden Abweichungen sind Schottisch und Italienisch. Doch leider wie in der ersten so auch in der zweiten kann Schwarz mit richtigem Spiel leicht ausgleichen. Dabei muss man als Weißspieler eine ungeheure Menge an Theorie in beiden Eröffnungen kennen, um nicht in Nachteil zu geraten. Das heißt mit anderen Worten, man arbeitet viel und kommt trotzdem nicht über Ausgleich hinaus. In solchen Situationen ist es daher manchmal besser und effizienter, sich eine seltene Eröffnung anzuschauen, die zu interessanten Stellungen führt und gleichzeitig als Überraschung für den Gegner ziemlich unangenehm sein kann. Dazu gehört auch die Ponziani-Eröffnung. 3.d4 das ist sie, die Ponziani-Eröffnung. Die Idee des Weißen ist offensichtlich: er will 4.d4 spielen und dann nach 4...exd4 mit dem Bauern zurückschlagen - 5.cxd4 -, um sich damit einen Vorteil im Zentrum zu sichern. Schwarz verfügt über zwei Möglichkeiten, um das weiße Vorhaben zu stören, das sind die Züge 3...d5 und 3...Nf6. 3...cxd4 Die aggressive Fortsetzung 4.Nxd4! Nur so kann man hoffen, einen Vorteil zu erlangen. Die alternative Fortsetzung 4...Nf6 Das gilt als Hauptzug. 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5

From Black's point of view I never thought this method of play for White to be very dangerous. Black's position is solid especially the d6 pawn. This line might be a tad to solid. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.c3 I remember this tricky move from a Shamkovich game many years ago. If Black plays 11...fe4? then 12 Bb5! is very strong. 11...Bg7 12.exf5 Bxf5 13.Nc2 Be6 14.g3 0-0 15.Bg2 a5
This is important preventing Nb4 ideas. 16.0-0 f5 17.Qe2 Rb8 18.Rfd1 Qd7 19.Na3 Na7 20.Rd2 Qf7 Notice that White can only attack d6 by retreating the Nd5 to e3. This is met strongly by ...f4. 21.Rad1 Kh8 22.f4 b4 22...e4 is Ok as well. 23.Nc4 Nb5 24.fxe5 bxc3 25.bxc3 Nxc3 26.Nxc3 Bxc4 27.Qe3 dxe5 Black is up a nice pawn, but White has some play. 28.Bd5 Bxd5 28...Qc7 might be stronger. 29.Rxd5 f4 30.Qf3 fxg3 31.Qxf7 gxh2+ 32.Kxh2 Rxf7 33.Rxa5 Bh6 34.Kh1 Re8 35.Ra4 Rf3 36.Rh4 Bg7 37.Ne4 Rf4 38.Rxf4 exf4 39.Ng5 h6 40.Nh3 Re4 41.Rd3 Kh7 42.Kg2 Kg6 43.Kf3 Kf5 44.Nf2 Ra4 45.Rd5+ Ke6 White was fortunate to draw.

7...Nxd5 8.exd5 Ne7

[ 8...Nb8 (Roiz,M) had been preferred by Boris in his preceding encounters. ]

9.c4 Ng6 This is Black's main move here.

[ We'll look at 9...Nf5 in the next game. ]

[ REMEMBER: 9...a6? is a well-known blunder because of 10.Qa4! and White is virtually winning already. Nonetheless, it has occurred over 160 times in the databases, and even titled players have fallen for it. ]

10.Qa4 Bd7 11.Qb4 Qb8 The best way to defend the d-pawn.

[ 11...Bf5 (Roiz,M) Karjakin,S (2753)-Carlsen,M (2845) Shamkir AZE 2019 [Roiz, M] ]

12.h4 QUESTION: White is seriously threatening 13 h5 and Black must decide how to react. What would be your decision? ANSWER: 12...h5! Preventing further expansion on the kingside and thus securing the knight's place on g6.

[ It is still too soon for 12...a6? , because of 13.h5! axb5 14.hxg6 fxg6 15.cxb5 and White is clearly better. He will be able to push his pawns on the queenside far more easily than Black on the kingside. White scores an impressive 73% from here, and I'm surprised it isn't more than that. ]

13.Be3

[ Instead, 13.Bd3 was seen in M.Vachier Lagrave-Ma.Carlsen, World Rapid Championship, Moscow 2019. However, I think this has no real point since it encourages a later ... e5-e4, gaining time, as occurred on move 18. In addition, after a6 14.Nc3 f5 15.Be3 Be7 16.Na4 , Black had a strong option which he missed in the game: Nxh4! would have given him an excellent position. After 17.Rxh4 ( if White now goes for 17.Nb6? , Black grabs another pawn with Nxg2+ 18.Kd2 Nxe3 19.fxe3 Qd8 20.Nxa8 Qxa8 and stands much better despite the missing exchange: the kingside pawn mass looks very strong ) 17...Bxh4 18.Nb6 a5 19.Qb3 Qd8 20.Nxa8 Qxa8 , Black's position is preferable. ]

13...b6 Gelfand goes for a sideline. Roiz,M: '!?' Roiz,M: 'As usual, Boris demonstrates his deep knowledge in the most up-to-date theoretical lines. This move is new for our site.'

[ The idea is to prevent c4-c5, which would follow after the careless 13...Be7 ; i.e. 14.c5 dxc5 15.Bxc5 a6 16.Nd6+ Kf8 17.Ne4 with a strong initiative for White. ]

[ The main line is 13...a6 14.Nc3 , but this isn't fully satisfactory for Black either; e. g. a5 ( or 14...f5 Roiz,M: 'was successfully employed in Van Foreest,J (2612)-Carlsen,M (2835) Wijk aan Zee NED 2019 [Roiz,M] , but had White played' 15.Na4 Roiz,M: '!' 14.Be2

[ Starting with 14.g3 (Roiz,M) is a sensible idea, but White doesn't seem to save a tempo by not developing his light-squared bishop Be7 15.a4 ( 15.Be2 might transpose to the text. ) 15...Bg4 16.Bg2 0-0 17.0-0 Qc8⇄ The chances were mutual in Westerinen,H - Barle,J Esbjerg 1977 ]

14...Be7 15.g3 Roiz,M: 'White shouldn't avoid making this natural move.' Roiz,M: 'might transpose to the text.'

15...a6 Roiz,M: 'This continuation is connected with a pawn sacrifice on the q-side.'

[ Possible was also 15...0-0 (Roiz,M) , giving up another pawn 16.Bxh5 a6 17.Nc3 b5 This complex position offers interesting play to both sides. For instance, 18.cxb5 axb5 19.Bg5 Rc8⩲ ]

16.Nc3 b5 17.cxb5 axb5 QUESTION: Should White win the b5-pawn now? 18.0-0! Roiz,M: 'Magnus decides not to grab the pawn right now.'

[ANSWER: No, the captures on b5 offer Black decent counterplay, e.g. Roiz,M: 'Black also retains decent attacking chances after' 18.Bxb5 0-0 19.0-0 ( 19.a4 Roiz,M f5⩱ ) 19...Bh3 ]

[or Roiz,M: 'After' 18.Nxb5 0-0 19.a4 f5 . Quick development is more important for White. There is no rush to win a pawn in any case, since Carlsen will soon pick up the h5-pawn instead, which would no longer be possible after taking on b5. Roiz,M: 'The pinned Nb5 causes White certain problems. Then play might continue:' 20.Bxh5 Roiz,M f4! 21.Bd2 Bxb5 22.Bxg6 fxg3 23.fxg3 Qb6 Black's initiative outweighs the pawns. ]

18...0-0 Roiz,M: '?!'

[The aggressive 18...f5! (Roiz,M) was more to the point: 19.Rae1 0-0 20.Bxh5 Be8⩱ Black can now consider both ... f5-f4 and e5-e4. ]

19.Bxh5 Bd8 Roiz,M: 'In comparison to 18....f5, Black's play on the k-side is now slower.' 20.Ne4 Roiz,M: '!' Roiz,M: 'The knight is perfectly placed in the centre.'

[Weaker was 20.Bxg6 Roiz,M Ba5 21.Qb3 *(*Hardly more promising is 21.Bxf7+ Rxf7 22.Qb3 Bxc3 23.Qxc3 Rf3 ) 21...Bxc3 22.Bd3 Ba5 23.Rac1 Bb6 Black retains definite compensation for a pawn as White's king isn't very safe. ]

20...Bf5 Roiz,M: '?!' Roiz,M: 'Giving up the Pd6 is a big concession.'

[After 20...Ra6 Roiz,M 21.Bxg6 fxg6 22.f3± White manages to consolidate on the k-side, but it was still the lesser evil. ]

21.Nxd6 Be7 22.Bc5 Bh3?

[ 22...Ra4 was the best chance, when it may seem that White is in trouble. QUESTION: Can you spot what Carlsen must have planned? ANSWER: 23.Nxf5! (giving up the queen is the only way to keep an advantage) Rxb4 24.Nxe7+ Nxe7 25.Bxb4 and White is better in a crazy position, thanks to his strong bishops and passed d-pawn. ]

[Simply 23.Rfc1 is even stronger, since after Ra4 24.Qxb5 the tactics work in White’s favour; e.g. Bxd6 25.Qxa4 . ]

23...fxg6

[The intermediate 23...Ra4 (Roiz,M) wasn't so effective is view of 24.Qxb5 Qxb5 25.Nxb5 Bxc5 26.Bd3 Bxf1 27.Kxf1± the q-side passers are very dangerous. ]

24.Ne4 Roiz,M: '!' Roiz,M: 'A clever positional idea - after sacrificing the exchange White takes full control of the centre.'

[Now 24.Rfc1 Ra4 25.Qxb5 Bxd6 26.Qxb8 ( 26.Qxa4? is no longer possible because the f-file is open, and after Bxc5 27.Rxc5 Qxb2 Black has crushing threats ) 26...Bxb8 27.Bxf8 Kxf8 still keeps a slight plus for White, but in view of Black’s bishops the position becomes quite double-edged. Roiz,M: 'was less convincing, even though this unbalanced position is better for White. ' ]

24...Bxc5 25.Qxc5 Bxf1 26.Rxf1 Since Carlsen gave up the exchange voluntarily I assume that he estimated this position as being very promising, probably even winning for White. So let’s see how he converted his plus. 26...Qc8

[Possibly the best practical chance was 26...Qa7 Roiz,M 27.d6 Qxa2 28.Qxb5

Rab8 29.Qxe5± , though even then Black's position remains very difficult. ]
27.Qxb5 Roiz,M: '?!' Roiz,M: 'This was the only serious mistake by Magnus in this game.'
[ Much stronger was 27.d6! Roiz,M Qxc5 28.Nxc5 Rxa2 29.d7 , and the d-passer decides the game. ]
27...Qg4 Roiz,M: '?' Roiz,M: 'Boris returns the favour.'
[ Had he found 27...Qc2! Roiz,M 28.Ng5 Rfb8 29.Qd7 Qf5 30.Ne6 Qf7± it would be difficult for White to convert his advantage into a full point. ]
28.Qc4 Rf4 Roiz,M: 'Desperation.' 29.d6+ Kh8 30.Qd5 Black's problem is that he has no counterplay, while White has a stable knight and three extra pawns, of which the passed d-pawn which will soon decide the game. 30...Raf8 31.d7 Roiz,M: 'The rest was agony.' 31...Rxe4
[ 31...Rd8 32.Ng5 doesn't help Black at all. ]
32.d8Q Rxd8 33.Qxd8+ Kh7 34.Qd1 And the rest is just a matter of technique.
34...Qf5 35.Qd3 Qg4 36.h5! I like this precise move which opens the position around Black's king. Roiz,M: 'Now the only way, but the most elegant.' 36...Kh6

[ For our main move, 9.a4 , please check out the next three games. ]
9...Be7 10.c5 This is White's idea.
[ Of course 10.Qa4?! would make little sense now since Black can just castle and already has a comfortable position. ]
10...0-0
[ Of course not 10...dxc5?? 11.d6! and White wins instantly due to the fork on c7. ]
11.Bd3 There's no hurry to take on d6. 11...a6
[ 11...dxc5 is still answered by 12.d6! and Black loses material; e.g. Bxd6 13.Nxd6 Qxd6? 14.Bxh7+ etc. ]
12.Nxd6 Bxd6 13.cxd6 Qxd6 Let's quickly evaluate the outcome of this early exchange on d6. It is not yet clear whether the pawn on d5 will prove to be a strength or a liability. Black will try to set up a blockade and eventually win the pawn, while White will try to push it further. This leads to an interesting positional battle. Note how long White uses tactics to keep the pawn defended rather than protecting it directly. 14.0-0 Nd7

[Of course not 14...Qxd5? because of 15.Bxh7+ again, picking up the queen. ]

[Black could try 14...f5 to restrict the light-squared bishop, but White has a good plan in response: 15.b3 Nd7 16.a4 , activating the dark-squared bishop via a3 and probably pushing the pawn further with d5-d6. ]

15.Qc2 Nf6

[In the case of 15...g6 16.Be3 Qxd5 17.Rfd1 Qe6 18.Be4 White has a huge lead in development for the missing pawn. ]

16.Rd1

[White is still relying on tactics, when it was probably time to ensure its safety with 16.Bg5 h6 17.Bxf6 Qxf6 and the fight around the d-pawn will start. The text move allows Black the chance to develop a slight initiative. ]

16...Bg4 17.f3 Rac8 18.Qb3 Bh5 19.Bg5 b5

20.Bf5 Rc5 21.Qa3 Putting some pressure on Black.

[For example, 21.Qa3 -- threatens 22.Be3 , attacking the pinned rook; *(*and possibly 22.Bxf6 , damaging Black's pawn structure since Qxf6?? would drop the rook on c5. )]

21...Nxd5?? This negates the little threat but not the big one.

[Black should have played 21...Rd8! , not fearing 22.Bxf6 gxf6 because a subsequent ...Bg6 keeps his kingside solid. ]

[ 22...Rc6? is refuted by 23.Qxd6 Rxd6 24.Bc5 , winning the exchange at least. ]

23.Qxb4

[ 23.Qb3! is even better. After Rb5 24.Be4 Rd8 25.Rd2 f6 White can win with a tactical nuance. QUESTION: Although Black is ready for ...Bf7, protecting d5 once more, White can finish the game at once. Can you see how? ANSWER: 26.Bxd5+! Rxd5 27.Rxd5 Qxd5 28.Rd1! At first sight there seems to be nothing for the bishop to do on this diagonal, but White has two ideas in mind. First, he can now expand with a4-a5 which, if played immediately, would run into 12...a6 and White must retreat the knight to c3 in order not to lose the a-pawn. Second, there is the possibility of b2-b4, either sooner or later, when ...a7-a5 is already prevented, although I think the latter plan is far less common than the first. 12...a6

[ A more common option to blocking the queenside is to allow everything and just generate counterplay on the kingside. [ Black is afraid of 14 a5, but he should probably just allow it with 13...f5 14.a5 as in the previous note. ]

14.Nc4 f5 15.f4 White's pieces are actively placed and he starts pressuring the e5-pawn. 15...Qc7!? Black plays to reinforce the central dark squares, getting ready for 16...Bf6, and even ...e5xf4 and ...Ne5 which is not possible yet.

[ An interesting alternative was to play 15...Bf6 first, seeing that the d6-pawn is still protected indirectly by ...Qb6+. After 16.Kh1!? , threatening d6 for real, Black can try the dynamic exf4 ( not 16...Qe7? 17.Bxa5 exf4 18.Bb4 Be5 and White is much better*;* while 16...Qc7 17.Be3! is similar to the game ) 17.Nxd6 ( if 17.Bxf4

Ne5 , the position is roughly equal; Black saved time by not playing ...Qc7 ) 17...g5 and the play becomes very double-edged. ]

[ As usual, 15...e4? is a bad idea when the centre is locked with f2-f4 and ...f7-f5. White can slowly expand on the queenside, while Black does not have any particular counterplay. ]

16.Kh1 b6

[ Still not 16...exf4 17.Bxf4 Ne5?? ( or if 17...b6 then 18.Ra3! Ba6 19.Re3 gives White a great initiative ) 18.Bxe5 dxe5 19.d6 and White wins. ]

QUESTION: This is a critical position in the game and it is not so easy to see White's plan from here. What would be your intentions if you were White? ANSWER: 17.Be3 With nothing much to do on d2 any more White switches the bishop to a more useful diagonal.

[ The immediate 17.Na3!? is also possible, trying to make use of the b5-square, but Black can continue with Bf6 , and after 18.Nb5 Qb8 19.Be3 Nc5 White has not achieved very much. ]

[ Instead, 17.fxe5 Nxe5 18.Nxe5? dxe5 is not advisable. The resulting position is better for Black due to his flexible pawns, whereas White's pawns are safely blocked. ]

17...Ba6?! This just encourages White to play Na3. The exchange of light-squared bishops only helps White, as the b5-square becomes more vulnerable. If Black retreats the bishop again, White has gained some time.

[ Again 17...Bf6 should always be considered because the e5-square is crucial. QUESTION: Does 17...Bf6 solve Black's problems or is it not unsatisfactory at this moment? ANSWER: Sadly, not really. After 18.fxe5! , the desired Nxe5 would drop the b6-pawn; ( nor is 18...dxe5 any good work because 19.Rxf5 wins another important pawn.; Even 18...Bxe5 has some drawbacks, as White can either grab the bishop pair or first improve his position with 19.Qd2 . )]

[ Probably Black's best option is to play 17...exf4 18.Bxf4 Nc5 , similar to 15...Nc5 in the notes to the previous game. As we saw there, it is very difficult for White to make progress in this sort of position. ]

18.Na3 Bxe2 19.Qxe2 Now White gets an initiative by natural moves. 19...Rac8

[ Here 19...Nc5 does not fully convince me in view of 20.Nb5 Qb8 21.g4 , when White has a favourable version of his plan in the game. Black's pieces are stranded on the queenside, so we can start opening things up on the other wing. Black is under a lot of pressure. ]

20.c3 Bf6 21.Nb5 Qb8 22.g4!? With the black queen out of play defending the queenside pawns, White takes the opportunity to attack on the kingside.

[ Nonetheless, 22.fxe5 Bxe5 23.Nd4 might have been a better option. Black is pretty much forced to take the knight, and after Bxd4 24.Bxd4 White is very much in control and can look to create pressure with moves like Rae1 and Qb5. ]

22...exf4

[ The immediate 22...Rce8 was a stronger defence and more consistent with Black's whole strategy of defending the dark squares. For example: 23.gxf5 ( if

23.fxe5 Rxe5 24.Rxf5 , then Qe8 gives Black enough counterplay ) 23...exf4! 24.Rxf4 Bg5 25.Rf3 Re5 26.Rg1 Bxe3 27.Rxe3 Rfxf5 and Black is fine, having safely regained the pawn. ]

23.Bxf4 Rce8 24.Qc2 Be5 25.gxf5 Bxf4 26.Rxf4 Re5 Black's position here is very similar to that after 25...Re5 in the previous note, except that the dark-squared bishops have been removed which changes the assessment entirely. 27.Rg1 Rf7 28.c4 White is dominating, having stabilized the queenside, created pressure down the g-file and, most significantly of all, managed to defend the extra pawn on f5 which gives him a winning position. 28...Qf8 29.Nd4 Nc5 30.Rfg4 Kh8 31.Qg2 Nd3 Black was probably setting one last trap, but White's next move avoided any kind of counterplay. 32.Qg3! With Ne6 to follow, so Black resigned.

[ Black was likely hoping for 32.Ne6 Rxe6 33.dxe6 Rxf5 , when 34...Nf2+ is a very big threat. QUESTION: White is still winning here but the path has gotten narrower. Can you find White's only way to success? ANSWER: 34.e7! , and if Qxe7 then 35.Rxg7! Nf2+ 36.Qxf2 Rxf2 37.Rg8# . No other 34th move works for White, as you can convince yourself! ]

This Pelikan is one of the trappy lines but with accurate play White should be better. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 Be6 With this Black gives up the fight for d5 for the moment. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 Shifting to the Catalan approach is interesting but White should be ready to give up his c4-pawn. 5...e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Be3 A similar position can be reached if White shifts to the Catalan approach in the Noteboom: 1. d4 d5 2. c4 c6 3. Nf3 e6 4. Nc3 dxc4 5. a4 Bb4 6. g3 Nf6 7. Bg2 but the bishop's lunge to b4 there seems more reliable for Black than the typical ...a7-a6, which does not actually support ...b7-b5 here. 7...Be7 Otherwise White will soon get the c4-back, obtaining a stable advantage. 8.Be2 a6 9.Na3 Black has undoubled his c-pawns and but it has increased the power of White's Catalan bishop. 9...b5 10.Nd5! A typical manoeuvre for such positions, as we have already seen above. White is going to restore the material balance so Black has to find some resources, otherwise he will find himself in a worse position without counter chances. 10...Nxd5 11.exd5! 21.Be2± White is still a little better but it's a different type of advantage to the one that went before. Donaldson has to grind out the point and it will not be at all easy. Where are Black's weaknesses? Well, White would like to create a passed d pawn with c4-c5 or he could consider trying to round up the pawn at a4. But Black is active, the pawn on c4 isn't totally secure and the square f3 beckons a Black Knight if White gets frisky. While Van Foreest might have spent several hours preparing this position, it is likely that Carlsen and his team (assisted by powerful engines) had spent many weeks analysing the following labyrinthine varitions for the World Championship. Zusammenfassung: Magnus Carlsen ist für seine Suchen nach ständig neuen Konzepten bekannt,die er dann in seiner Turnierpraxis überprüft.Auch permanent prüft er verschiedene Verstärkungen in komplizierten Eröffnungen.Auf diese Weise bringt er viele neue Ideen in die Entwicklung der Schachtheorie ein.In diesem Sinne ist die vorgestellte Variante ein ausgezeichnetes Gebiet zu weiteren Forschungen.

Moscow Ch 1/2 Final (3.9) 04.03.2004
[Barsky]

I'd like to show you one of my games which was played in March 2004 in the semi-final of the Moscow championships and has some theoretical importance. For the previous four years I hadn't played in tournaments with long ("classical") time control because I had a lot of work as a journalist and a coach. And only recently had I had some free time, when the new managers of the Russian Chess Federation (none of whom could play chess, I have to add) pushed myself out from Chess Weekly newspaper together with IM Notkin, IM Odessky, master Khenkin, the famous coach Dvoretsky and some other chess specialists who stopped their collaboration with Chess Weekly. There was some time before the court case (it will be in May, I hope) and I decided to play chess. OK, as the Russian proverb says, "there isn't anything bad without something good"! or the English one: "Every cloud has a silver lining". 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 About 10 years ago I helped GM Eugenij Sveshnikov to write a book about B22, and after that I began to play this system by myself regularly. 2...Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 Quite an ambitious move - Black tries to get an initiative. 6.Ndb5 Fashionable move. When, 3-4 years ago, Sveshnikov began to use it on a regular basis, many other players began to do the same. 6...d6 I decided to annotate the opening part of this game in Sveshnikov's style: instead of variations I give my own games which were played in blitz or rapid against rather strong opponents, mostly masters or grandmasters, and mostly in Moscow chess club "Octiabrskij". 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 b4 12.Nc2 a5 13.Qf3 To my mind White has rather a big advantage here. You could add some games to this line from common databases (ChessBase, for example) and begin to play it for White - I wish you success! 13...Be6

[ 13...Bg5 14.h4+- Bh6 15.g4 f6 16.g5 fxg5 17.Qh5+ Kf8 18.c5+- I didn't play Be6 in view of 19.Bb5 Na7 20.Qf3+ but according to computer White wins after Bf7 21.Bc4 g4+- OK, maybe it was the shortest way, but the text move couldn't be bad -White simply includes new piece into attack. 22.Qxg4 Rc8 23.Rh3 Rxc5! 24.Rf3 Rxc4 25.Rxf7+ Kxf7 26.Qf5+ Ke8 27.Qe6+ Kf8 28.Qf5+ ]

14.Rd1 White simply completes his development. Worse was 14...a4 Black has to lose one more tempo and make the 4th move with the Queen in the opening. 15.b3

[ 15.Be2 b3 16.axb3 Rb8 Also good was 17.Nxf6+ gxf6 18.b4 Nxb4 19.Na3 Nc6 20.Nb5 Qa5+ 21.Rd2+- Ke7 22.Qe3 Nd4 23.Nxd4 exd4 24.Qxd4 Qc5 25.Qxc5+- ]
15...axb3 16.axb3 The white bishops create very strong pressure on Black's queenside. 16...0-0 17.Nxf6+ Qxf6 18.Qxf6 gxf6?

19.Rxd6! Nd4 20.Nxd4 Ra1+?! A rather strange move because now without the g6 pawn, White could create a very strong attack vs. the King on g8. And there isn't any defender near him now. 21.Kd2 exd4 22.g3
[ 22.Rxd4 Rfa8 ]
22...Rfa8

(Diagram)

23.Bg2!? Black has to accept the second knight sacrifice, and after that his white points became dead weak. 23...R1a2+ 24.Kd3 Rxf2 25.Bf1 Ra3 Another quite move - the rook is going to f3 via d3. 26.Kxd4 Rxb3 27.Bd3 Rc3 28.c5 Rd2 29.Ke3 Ra2

(Diagram)

And now - a simple but nice final combination: 30.Kd4 Rd2 31.Ke3! Ra2 32.Kd4 Black resigned in view of 32...Rd2

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Nb8 9.a4 Be7 10.Be2 0-0 11.0-0 Nd7 12.Kh1 A logical move, preparing f2-f4. It is also wise to wait with this move until Black has committed to ... f7-f5.

[ The main alternative is 12.Bd2 , for which see Game 65. ]

[ All other options are worse. Let's have a look at the most natural tries and understand why they are unconvincing: a) 12.a5?! would be a systemic mistake because of a6! and the white knight is forced to c3, as 13.Na3? would drop the a-pawn. ]

[ b) 12.c4 a6 13.Nc3 a5!? is a standard ploy by Black which you should always keep in mind when advancing c2-c4. After this Black has managed to set up a solid blockade on the queenside and can then commence kingside play with ...f7-f5. ]

12...a6 13.Na3 f5 14.f4 Via a different route we have now reached the same position as in the previous game. In this one Black opts to resolve the central tension straight away. 14...exf4 15.Bxf4 g5!? If Black wants to put his knight on e5 then this is a necessary precursor.

[ The immediate 15...Ne5?! would invite 16.Bxe5 again, when dxe5 17.Nc4 Bf6 transposes to the previous game; *(*while after 17...Bd6 18.a5 White has the option to remove the bishop at a convenient moment. Anyway, I would not call 15... g5 a risky move because Black's king remains very safe afterwards with so many pawns and pieces around. )]

[ A calmer option is 15...Nc5 16.Nc4 a5 , aiming to neutralize White's initiative on the queenside. Black will follow up with ...b7-b6 and ...Ba6 to challenge the white knight, while the black knight may later go to e4. This has only been tried a couple of times in "live" chess games, perhaps because it's not very ambitious, but one of those was 17.Bd3 b6 18.Qe2 Ba6 19.Nxb6 Nxd3 20.cxd3 Qxb6 21.Qxe7 Bxd3 22.Qe6+ Kh8 23.Qxd6 Qxd6 24.Bxd6 Bxf1 25.Bxf8 Bc4 26.Be7 Bxd5 27.Rd1 Bb3 28.Rd8+ Rxd8 29.Bxd8 Bxa4 30.Bxa5 Kg8 and the players agreed a draw in M.Vachier Lagrave-Ma.Carlsen, Stavanger 2019. ]

16.Be3 The first thing I would like to mention is that at this point the paths are already quite unexplored, so there is no concrete theory or deep analysis you have to be afraid of. Keep in mind the plans and you will have a solid base for navigating through the position.

[ On this move 16.Bd2!? may be better. The bishop is safer than on the e3-square since Black does not win time with ...f5-f4 later. As a general principle after ...g7-g5, White should try to focus on exploiting the weaknesses in Black's kingside rather than the space advantage on the queenside. With that in mind 16 Bd2!? is an interesting approach which can create problems for Black in a practical game. Let's have a concrete look: Ne5 17.Nc4 Nxc4 18.Bxc4 Bf6 was seen in S. Das-D. Gukesh, Chess.com (blitz) 2020, and here 19.Bd3!? is possible, offering the b2-pawn for gain of time. For example: Bxb2 20.Rb1 Bg7 21.Qh5 h6 22.h4 and White enjoys more than enough compensation. ]

16...Ne5 17.a5 f4 18.Bb6 Qe8 19.Nc4 Nxc4 20.Bxc4 Black is already slightly better. White controls the queenside but there is no way to break through any time soon. 20...Bf5 21.Bd3 Qg6 22.Qd2

[ Here 22.Re1 , trying to exploit the weak e6-square, looks more active. ]

22...Bxd3 23.cxd3 Bf6 24.Rae1 Qf5 25.Re4 Qxd5 26.Qe2 Rac8 27.h4 With his position continuing to go south, Vachier-Lagrave makes a move to disrupt things. QUESTION: How would you respond? Can Black simply play 27...h6, or does he get in trouble after 28 Qh5 - ? 27...Qf5? This gives the advantage away and White gets much closer to equality.

[ANSWER: Yes, Black can play 27...h6! , which is the only way to maintain the advantage. After 28.Qh5 Qxd3 29.Rfe1 Bg7 30.hxg5 *(*not 30.Re7? f3 ) 30...Qd5 Black has everything under control and remains a pawn up. ]

28.hxg5 Bxg5 29.Bd4 h6 30.b4 Rf7 31.Qf3 Rcf8 32.Rfe1 Bh4 33.g4 Qg5 34.R1e2 Bg3? The players now trade a couple of mistakes before Black makes a last fatal one. 35.Re6 Rc7 36.Kg2? Qh4 37.Bg1 Rc1?? This is too ambitious by the young Indian prodigy, but such things can happen in a blitz game, even to the most talented players. The problem is that 38...Rxg1+ is not even a threat, so White can go for an immediate counterattack. 38.Rg6+ Kh7

[After 38...Kf7 39.Rxd6! the king is even more exposed than on h7 and White will quickly launch a decisive attack. ]

39.Rxd6 Rf7 QUESTION: White is obviously winning here, but can you quickly calculate to mate? ANSWER: 40.Qe4+ Kg8 41.Rg6+

18...b4! This logical and thematic break either disrupts White's pawns or allows Black's knight a free hop into b4. 19.Nc2! I believe this is White's best chance to extract something. Getting his knight into play is more important than structural integrity.

29...Qd4! Centralization ensures that Black's king stays relatively safe. 30.Qf4? The players' conclusions radically differ. This psychological mistake is a form of confirmation bias. White wants to attack so he believes there is one, even where it's not there. White attempts to grab hold of an apparition and misses the fact that he cannot retain queens on the board after Black's next move.

The traditional h5-square looks most aggressive, another possibility being 17.Qd2. In all cases Black has enough chances to create his own play. The move 17.Qe2 was introduced by Topalov in 1996 and is meant to prepare doubling rooks on the d-file and at the same time to keep an eye on b5, eventually playing even Nc2-a3 at some point. Black's plan is to play f5, Kh8, Qd7, e4, Ne5 and eventually combine the break b5-b4 with the play in the center (trying to fight for square d5 - Qf7, sometimes Rf8-c5). In case WHite plays Na3, Black can defend with Na7.'

17...f5 18.Rfd1 Rogozenko: 'The eternal question - which rook to place on d1. Of course one can say that if White is going to double rooks, then this is not so important, but still... By taking away the rook from f-file White practically takes away the possibility to play later f4 and with Black's pawn on e4 to play g3-g4. On the other hand the rook a1 keeps pawn a2 protected plus White can consider to play a3 later and Black's b5-b4 will be less attractive, because it will open the a-file for the rook. 18.Rfd1 is the move used by Topalov.'

The traditional h5-square looks most aggressive, another possibility being 17.Qd2. In all cases Black has enough chances to create his own play. The move 17.Qe2 was introduced by Topalov in 1996 and is meant to prepare doubling rooks on the d-file and at the same time to keep an eye on b5, eventually playing even Nc2-a3 at some point. Black's plan is to play f5, Kh8, Qd7, e4, Ne5 and eventually combine the break b5-b4 with the play in the center (trying to fight for square d5 - Qf7, sometimes Rf8-c5). In case WHite plays Na3, Black can defend with Na7.'

17...f5 18.Rfd1 Rogozenko: 'The eternal question - which rook to place on d1. Of course one can say that if White is going to double rooks, then this is not so important, but still... By taking away the rook from f-file White practically takes away the possibility to play later f4 and with Black's pawn on e4 to play g3-g4. On the other hand the rook a1 keeps pawn a2 protected plus White can consider to play a3 later and Black's b5-b4 will be less attractive, because it will open the a-file for the rook. 18.Rfd1 is the move used by Topalov.'

63. European Championship 2018
[Jonas Hacker]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Nb8 9.a4 This is regarded as the most testing continuation against 8... Nb8. White stakes out space on the queenside. A typical plan once Black drives the b5-knight away with ...a7-a6, is to reroute it to c4, aiming at the b6-square, supported by the further advance a4-a5. 9...Be7 10.Be2 0-0 11.0-0 f5
[More often Black plays 11...Nd7 first, but it can come to the same thing. For instance, 12.Kh1 a6 13.Na3 f5 14.f4 reaches same the position as after 14 Kh1 below. We will look at this move order in the next game. ]
12.f4!? White does not like to allow Black to expand further.
[In particular, there is no time for a preparatory move like 12.Kh1 , as Black would get the option of f4 , cutting off White's pieces from the kingside. ]
12...a6 13.Na3 Nd7 14.Kh1 Bf6?!
[As mentioned in the introduction, Black has a variety of choices here: a) 14...exf4 is examined in the next game. ]
[b) 14...e4? is at the very least premature. After 15.Be3 Nf6 *(*or 15...b6 16.c3 , intending Nc2-d4 ) 16.Nc4 Nd7 17.a5 , White already has a huge plus, as in V. Moiseenko-K.Novikov, Kolomna (rapid) 2018. ]
[c) 14...b6 aims to forestall a4-a5, but White can play it anyway: 15.a5!? Rb8 ( 15...bxa5 16.Nc4; and 15...b5 16.c4 are worse ) 16.axb6 Nxb6 17.c4 Bf6 18.Nc2 Nd7 and here the preliminary 19.fxe5 looks best, with ideas then of Nd4, Ra3 and b2-b4; *(*rather than 19.b4 exf4 , as in C.Aryan-M.Karthikeyan, Moscow 2020. )]
[d) 14...Qc7 has mostly been seen in correspondence games, where play continues 15.Nc4 b6 16.Ra3 Bf6 17.Be3 e4 18.a5 b5 19.Nb6 Rb8 20.c4 Nxb6 21.axb6 Rxb6 22.Bxb6 Qxb6 23.cxb5 axb5 . Although the extra pawn and strong dark-squared bishop provide certain compensation for the exchange, such that Black has mostly drawn from here, he is only playing for that at best, which hardly makes it an attractive practical choice. ]
15.Nc4 exf4

[The alternative 15...Nb6 leads to forcing play which is very much in White's favour: 16.fxe5 dxe5 17.Nxb6 Qxb6 18.a5 Qc5 19.c4 e4 20.Qb3 Be5 21.Be3 Qe7 22.c5 Qh4 23.Bg1 Kh8 was I.Smirnov-U.Atakisi, Kharkov 2006, and now after 24.d6 White is basically winning since Black has no real threats; e.g. Rf6 *(*or 24...f4 25.Qd5 ) 25.Qd5 Bxh2 26.Bxh2 Rh6 27.Qe5 and wins. ]

[ 16.Nxd6 g5 would be rather unclear and nothing special for White. ]

16...Ne5 QUESTION: We've arrived at a crucial positional decision which you will face at some point. Should we keep the tension in the centre and just continue squeezing Black on the queenside with a4-a5 or should we clarify the situation at once? ANSWER: 17.Bxe5! This is by far the strongest move and may be hard to find because we give the bishop up for the knight for no obvious reason. But as we shall soon see, the knight can be very strong!

[Let's have a look at the alternatives: a) 17.a5? Nxc4 18.Bxc4 Bxb2 would drop a pawn. ]

[b) 17.c3 Nxc4 18.Bxc4 is possible but we only get an equal position; the game move is much more ambitious. ]

[c) 17.Nxe5 is another option, but then White must move his bishop several times; e.g. after dxe5 18.Be3 f4 19.Bg1 Bf5 with some counterplay on the kingside. ]

17...dxe5

[Instead, 17...Bxe5 leads to a complicated-looking position after 18.Nxe5 dxe5 19.c4 e4 . QUESTION: The big question here is whose pawns the more dangerous? What is your opinion? ANSWER: White's pawns are much stronger: they are less vulnerable and they also seriously restrict Black's bishop. White has the advantage after either 20 Qd4 or just 20 c5, gaining more space. ]

18.a5 e4 19.Nb6 Be5!? Creative but not good.

[On the other hand, the straightforward 19...Rb8 20.d6 Be6 21.Bc4 Bxc4 22.Nxc4 leads to a position where White is much better. The knight is very stable, the d6-pawn safely defended, and White has direct threats against the f5-pawn. ]

QUESTION: Can you see what Black has in mind? Can we take the rook on a8 or do we need to be more cautious? ANSWER: 20.d6! Threatening Qd5+ so Black has time neither for 20...Qh4 nor 20...Rb8, saving his rook.

[White cannot take the rook yet as after 20.Nxa8?? Qh4 there is no good defence against the mate. ]

20...Be6

[ 20...Qh4? is now impossible due to 21.Qd5+ and White wins a piece. ]

21.Bc4! Not giving Black time for his counterattack.

[Still not 21.Nxa8?? as Black is ready for Qh4 again. ]

21...Bxc4

[Now in the case of 21...Qh4 , White can take the material and then defend his king: 22.Bxe6+ Kh8 23.g3 Bxg3 24.Qe2 , when White is a piece up and there are no threats remaining. ]

[Instead, 21...Qf6 was the most tenacious computer line. Many humans would dismiss it in view of 22.Nd7 , winning material, but there is Bxc4 23.Nxf6+ Rxf6 and although White is still objectively winning, things become a bit messy. At any rate, this was Black's best try. ]

22.Nxc4 Bf6 23.Rxf5 Rc8 24.Qd5+ Kh8 25.Re1 . White will win a second pawn while keeping control of everything, so Black resigned.

Suppresses Black's ...d6-d5 break. -- 2. Makes Black's ...f7-f5 break less palatable, as e4xf5 empowers White's fianchettoed bishop along the h1-a8 diagonal. 11...Bg5 Before White thinks about stopping the bishop move by playing h2-h4.

[ Otherwise 11...0-0 12.Bg2 Bg5 transposes. ]

12.Bg2 0-0 13.0-0 Now that White's king is safe, he can push his c-pawn either one or two squares on his next move. 13...Be6 Challenging for d5 as usual;

[ which Black can also do with 13...Ne7 . For example, 14.c3 ( or 14.Nxe7+ Qxe7 15.c3 Bb7 16.Nc2 a5 17.Qd3 Bc6 18.Rad1 Rfd8 19.a3 and Black stood no worse, T.Davis-C.Lakdawala, San Diego 2002 ) 14...Nxd5 15.Qxd5 Be6 16.Qd3 Qb6 17.h4 Bh6 18.c4?! (White was better off playing the f-rook to d1 and doing nothing), M.Litvinov-D.Lintchevski, Samara 2016, and after Rfb8 , Black looks slightly better. ]

14.c4!? This move may be the seed of White's coming difficulties. The challenge to the queenside comes at a cost as White just lost control over d4.

[ 14.c3 is probably the better path, though after Ne7 15.Nc2 Nxd5 16.exd5 Bd7 17.Nb4 f5 18.Nc6 Qb6 , I.Ohat-C. Kemeny, Hungarian League 2009, Black can ignore White's knight and play on the kingside with the superior chances. ]

14...Nd4 15.cxb5 This leads to opposing wing majorities and opposite-coloured bishops, where Black is better on both counts.

[ However, 15.Qd3?! Bxd5! 16.exd5 Qb6 17.cxb5 axb5 18.Kh1 f5 leads to a strategically won game for Black, J.Urbina Perez-M. Gutierrez Valero, Lucena 2012. ]

15...axb5

[ Black can also play the immediate 15...Bxd5 16.exd5 axb5 17.Nc2 Nxc2 18.Qxc2 Qb6 19.Qc6 Qb8! , when White can't easily challenge the c-file and is in trouble. ]

16.Nc2 White is unable to dodge a coming ...Bxd5.
[ If 16.Nb4? then Qa5 17.Nac2 Nxc2 18.Nxc2 Rfc8 and White is strategically lost. ]
16...Nxc2 17.Qxc2 Bxd5! 18.exd5 White probably hoped for a draw here due to the opposite-coloured bishops, whose trajectories never overlap. Yet he stands worse for the following reasons: -- 1. He is unable to challenge the c-file, unless he is willing to damage his structure by playing f2-f4. -- 2. Black's kingside majority is mobile, while White's on the queenside is dormant. -- 3. As mentioned earlier in the book, such positions with opposite bishops nearly always favour Black. 18...Qa5
[ I would prefer 18...Qb6! 19.Qc6 Qb8! . ]
19.h4 Bh6 20.Bh3
[ Instead, 20.Qc6! Rfd8 21.b4! Qxb4 22.Rfb1 Qd4 23.Qxb5 Ra3 is similar to the game continuation but a slightly better version for White. ]
20...Ra7 21.Qc6 Ra6 22.Qb7 Ra7 23.Qc6 Rd8 No draw. 24.b4?! White decides he has endured the bitterness of captivity long enough and violently attempts to free himself from Black's pressure. However, the timing is wrong for this move and now his options narrow.
[ Perhaps he should try and defend a pawn-down opposite-coloured bishops ending by allowing his queen to get "trapped" with 24.a3!? Rc7 25.b4 Rxc6 26.bxa5 Ra6 27.Rfb1 Rxa5 28.Bf1 Rb8 29.Rb4 Bd2 30.Rb3 and maybe White can still hold the game. ]
24...Qxb4 25.Rab1 Qd4 26.Rxb5 White has paid off the loan but not the interest.
26...g6!
[ Black avoids the back rank trap 26...Rxa2? 27.Qxd6! , when White is back in the game. ]
27.Rb7 If it's not one damned thing then it's another. Just when White thought he had fixed problem A, problem B comes along. --- EXERCISE (combination alert): Black found a way to win a pawn by force. How did he accomplish this? 27...Ra3! ANSWER #1: The monumental can be reached via incremental steps. Step 1: play the rook to a3, threatening ...Rxg3+.
[ ANSWER #2: 27...e4! is just as strong, according to the computer. ]
[ Not 28.Rxf7? Kxf7 29.Qc7+ Ke8 30.Qxh7 Rxg3+ 31.Kh2 Rxh3+ 32.Kxh3 Qd3+ 33.Kg2 Bf8 and Black consolidates. ]
28...Rc3! Step 2: chase off the defender of d5 by transferring the rook to c3.
29.Rd7?!
[ White had to try 29.Qb5 , though after Rc2 30.Qb3 Rd2 the d5-pawn is doomed. ]
29...Rxd7!
[ This is more accurate than 29...Rxc6 30.Rxd8+ Kg7 31.dxc6 Qd5+ 32.Kg1 Qxc6 . ]
30.Qa8+ Kg7 31.Bxd7 Qe4+ 32.Kh2 EXERCISE (combination alert): White's king is vulnerable. How did Black cash in? 32...Rxg3! ANSWER: Annihilation of defensive barrier. One against three is unfair odds and, if we close our eyes, we can imagine the unpleasantness which is coming the white king's way.

[ For example, 32...Rxg3 33.fxg3 *(*or 33.Kxg3 Bf4+ 34.Kh3 Qf3# ) 33...Qe2+ 34.Rf2 ( 34.Kg1 is met by Be3+ ) 34...Qxf2+ 35.Kh3 Qf1+ 36.Kh2 Be3! forces mate in four moves. ]

Tsvetkov Memorial KO 1 (1) 17.10.2005
[Alvarez,Roberto G, MH]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 In this game I preferred to avoid the Nimzoindian (3. Nc3 Bb4), but the early development of the knight to f3 has also its drawbacks (one of them is you cannot choose the best lines of the Exchange Variation in the Queen's Gambit Declined). 3...cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3!? I usually play the common 5.Bg5, but since it is very studied and with many long-lines, I preferred the development of the bishop at f4 (maybe I was influenced by Peter Leko's nice win against Vlad Kramnik at the Brissago 2004 Classic World Chess Championship...) Anyway, the line is well playable. If you want to study this line, look at the games of Dreev, Epishin, Golod, all GMs who usually play it. 5...e5 6.Ndb5 d6 The natural reaction. 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 This exchange leads to a position with an isolated queen pawn. Usually, when having an IQP, you should avoid the exchange of pieces (because the isolated pawn provides central support for your pieces and you should aim for dynamic play, and in the ending that IQP would prove to be an important weakness). 8...b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 Preventing an unpleasant check at b4. 10...f5 11.Bd3 Be6?
I was really surprised when I saw my opponent played this move. An oversight? Usually Black retires the bishop (to b6 or e7), and this is because White is threatening to win material by Bxh7+ and Qc2+ (the bishop at c5 is unprotected!).
12.0-0 Bg7 13.Qh5 f4 14.c4 bxc4 15.Bxc4N A novelty what should not exchange the evaluation of the line. White is of course better. My intention was to preserve knights since the heavy pieces would be probably exchanged on the open files.

Rxf7!?* A difficult move, since I should evaluate the ending with bishop plus 2 connected passed pawns against a knight and a remoted passed pawn. There are some positions where the knight draws (fortress), specially if you are forced to put your pawns on squares of the same colour of your bishop. The advantage of the text move is that, being Black unable to exchange on f3, his bishop is badly placed at h1 and White can push his connected passed pawns. 45.Qxf7+! I saw this possibility long before (when analyzing the endgame at move 49... but there is a hidden surprise for Black... Kh6!? The bishop escapes, controlling important squares as f4 and d4-c5 (if the bishop were at b2 - with the black king on a light square- then Black should have good drawing prospects) 46.Ng4+?? A decisive mistake. My idea was to prevent the advance of the black pawn at the time I could be ready to push my own pawns on the kingside. Black should have tried 55...Nb4 or the most difficult to find 55... Kg8!? (quitting the king from the dangerous diagonal). Being sincere, I am not sure if White wins this ending... but surely the defense is DIFFICULT and the winning prospects still high for a telechess game. Kg5! Surprise!! Now the black knight is attacked and.. it cannot escape, since there is a decisive pin on the a1-h8 diagonal. 47.Qf6+ Kh5! The knight is lost since Black is unable to prevent the approach of the white king. 48.Qh6# ) 41.Be4+!? Kf7 42.Qh7+ Bg7 43.Qg6+ Kg8 44.Bd5+?! Black was playing very well, and this move indeed came as a surprise, since it loses the g5-pawn by force (although Black is able to capture the white pawn at b4 later). At first glance I think "what a stupid mistake", I would pin the knight and the ending with two passed pawns should be a win no matter of the bishops of opposite colour". But not: the endgame with only bishop is a draw! (it was really interesting to analyze the endgame since I learned a lot. Look at the supplementary games in this article to see how some grandmasters missed a draw!) If my opponent saw this, then he deserves my congratulations for his creative mistake with ...Bh1! Qb5!? In playing this move I invested a lot of analysis. Of course, the pawn at b4 is lost after.... Nc6. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6
Die Sveshnikov-Variante ist sehr tief analysiert und kennzeichnet sich durch dynamisches Spiel seitens des Nachziehenden als Kompensation für die positionellen Zugeständnisse. Ein wesentlicher dynamischer Faktor ist, dass der weiße Springer von b5, der nach a3 ziehen wird, eine Zeitlang außer Spiel ist. Diese Zeit wird Schwarz nutzen, um seine Figuren in Stellung zu bringen. 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 Aus taktischen Gründen ist dieses Zurückschlagen notwendig, aber an sich auch nicht so schlimm. Schließlich kann Schwarz zur passenden Zeit mit f5 seinen Doppelbauern auflösen oder mit f5 seine Bauernmasse in Bewegung setzen.
[ 9...Qxf6? ist laut Theorie einfach schlecht: 10.Nd5 Qd8 11.c4! Damit wird an der schwarzen Bauernkette am Damenflügel gerüttelt. b4 12.Qa4 Mit diesem Doppelangriff gewinnt Weiß einen Bauern. Ra7!? Der Turm deckt das Feld c7 und steht nicht mehr im Gabelbereich; nun kann sich Weiß einfach den Mehrbauern schnappen ( 12...bxa3 ist natürlich schlecht wegen 13.Qxc6+ Bd7 14.Qxa8 Qxa8 15.Nc7++- ) 13.Nxb4 , zum Beispiel Bd7 14.Nd5 ( 14.Nxc6 Qc7 15.Qa5 Qxc6 16.Bd3± ) 14...Be7 15.Bd3 Bg5 16.0-0 0-0 17.Nc2± mit jeweils einem sicheren Mehrbauern für Weiß. ]
10.Nd5 f5 Schwarz möchte sofort die Lage klären.
[ Alternativ wurde 10...Bg7 gespielt, um vor der Öffnung der Stellung erstmal die Figuren zu entwickeln. Dies ist auch eine interessante Geschichte, zum Beispiel: ]
11.Bd3 Be6 12.0-0 Bxd5 Diese strukturelle Veränderung ist die übliche Fortsetzung. Schwarz bekommt eine Zentrumsmasse und es gibt ungleichfarbige

Läufer. Der letztere Punkt zwingt beide Seiten einen unerbitterlichen Kampf um die Initiative. Denn mit der Initiative wird die angreifende Partei praktisch eine Mehrfigur besitzen, weil der gegnerische, ungleiche Läufer die kritischen Felder nicht schützen kann!

[ Weniger erfolgreich sind die Alternativen, zum Beispiel: 12...Bg7?! 13.Qh5 f4 14.c4 bxc4 15.Bxc4 0-0 16.Rac1 Rb8 17.b3 Qd7 18.Rfd1 Kh8 19.Qh4± 1-0 Dosi,A (2548)-Lew,T (2362)/ICCF WS 2006/ICCF CBM 132 (43) ]

13.exd5 Ne7 14.c3 Ein typischer Zug, um den Springer a3 wieder ins Spiel zu bringen. Dies gibt aber dem Nachziehenden, wie oben erwähnt, die Zeit seine Figuren zu koordinieren.

[ Nachdem gierigen 14.Nxb5 bekommt Schwarz heftiges Gegenspiel, wie in der folgenden Begegnung: Bg7 15.Nc3 e4 16.Bc4 0-0 17.Bb3 Ng6 18.Qd2 Re8 19.Ba4 Re5 20.f4 Qb6+ 21.Kh1 Re7 22.Bb3 e3 23.Qe2 Bxc3! Ein typischer Zug in dieser Variante. Weiß spielt nun praktisch mit einem Großbauern auf b3. 24.bxc3 Qc5 25.c4 a5 26.a4 Rae8 27.g3 Qb4 28.Rab1 Re4 29.Rfc1 Qc3 30.Re1 h5 31.c5 Qxc5 32.Rbd1 h4 33.c4 hxg3 34.hxg3 Kg7 35.Rd3 f6 36.Rf1 Qa7 37.Kg2 Rg8 38.Bc2 Kf8 39.Rb3 Re8 40.Bd1 Qe7 41.Qb2 Nh4+ 42.Kh2 Qg7 43.Bg4 fxg4 44.gxh4 Rh8 45.Rb8 Rxh4+ 46.Kg2 Qe7 47.Rxe8+ Kxe8 48.Qc2 Qh7 49.Qxh7 Rxh7 50.Rb1 Re7 0-1 Sasvári,T (2578)-Mikeshin,S (2591)/ ICCF 2007 ]

[ Alternativ zum Partiezug ist noch 14.c4!? interessant, zum Beispiel: e4 15.Be2 Bg7 16.Rb1 bxc4 17.Nxc4 0-0 18.b4!? f4 19.Qd2 Ng6 20.Rb3 Qf6 21.Rh3 Rfe8 22.Kh1 Kh8 23.Rd1± 1-0 Fleischanderl,F (2217) -Ivanov,H (2403)/LSS 2007 ]

14...Bg7 15.Re1 Damit umgeht der Anziehende die forcierten Geschichten,

[ die nach 15.Qh5 e4 16.Bc2 entstehen würden. ]

[ Nach 16...Re8?! 1/2-1/2 Inarkiev,E (2582)-Babula,V (2550)/Pardubice 2003 17.a4 Qb6 18.axb5 axb5 19.Qd2 steht Weiß aufgrund der strukturellen Vorteile etwas besser, zum Beispiel e4 ( 19...Qc5 20.Nb4± ) 20.Bf1 Ra4 21.Nb4± und Schwarz bleibt auf der Schwäche b5 sitzen. ]

[ Im Falle von 16...f4!? mit der Idee den nächsten Bauern nach f5 zu schieben und dann die Bauernwalze ins Rollen zu bringen, reagiert Weiß mit 17.a4 bxa4 18.Nb4! f5 19.Bxa6 e4 20.Bb7 Ra7 21.Nc6 Nxc6 22.dxc6 Be5 23.Rxa4 Rxa4 24.Qxa4 f3 25.g3 In der Partie gelang es dem Anziehenden nicht zu beweisen, dass sein c-Bauer schwerer ins Gewicht fällt als die schwarze Bauernarmada. 28.Qe3 h4 29.Ra8 Qf6 30.Ba6 d5 31.Qd2 f4 32.Qxd5 fxg3 33.hxg3 e3 34.Re8 exf2+ 35.Kf1 hxg3 36.Qxe5 Qxe5 37.Rxe5 Kh6 38.Re8 Rg7 39.Rh8+ Kg5 40.Rf8 Kh4 41.Rf4+ Kh5 42.Rf5+ Kh4 43.Rf4+ Kh5 1/2-1/2 Søgaard,O (2542)-Hebels,A (2455)/ICCF 2006 ]

[ Die direkte Vorgehensweise 17.a4!? bringt nichts für Weiß: e4 18.Bf1 bxa4 19.Ne3!? Qb7 20.Nc4 Rad8! ( 20...Qxd5?! 21.Qxd5 Nxd5 22.Red1 Nc7 23.Rxd6± 1/2-1/2 Kramnik,V (2777)-Leko,P (2722)/Monaco 2004 (63) ) 21.Rxa4 ( 21.g3!? Nun macht dieser Zug mehr Sinn. Schließlich eröffnet sich Weiß damit die zusätzliche Ressource Lh3. Wahrscheinlich kann Schwarz dennoch ausgleichen. ) 21...Nxd5 22.Qd2 Ne7 23.Nxd6 Qb8 24.Rxa6 Nc8 25.Rd1 e3!! Damit gleicht Schwarz vollkommen aus! 26.Qd5 exf2+ 27.Kxf2 Qxb2+ 28.Qd2 Qxd2+ 29.Rxd2 Be5 30.Nc4 Rxd2+ 1/2-1/2 Swan,I (2415)-Mahling, T (2467)/ ICCF 2006 ]

17...a5!?N Schwarz nutzt die Gunst der Stunde und bereitet sein Gegenspiel am Damenflügel mit b5-b4 vor. Allerdings ist die Frage, ob dieses Vorgehen dem Schwarzen tatsächlich Chancen auf Gegenspiel gibt oder doch nur eine Schwäche darstellt?

[ In den Vorgängerpartien konnte die Schwarze Feste nicht zum Einsturz gebracht werden: 17...Rfc8 18.g3 Rc5 19.Bg2 a5 20.a3 Rf8 21.Ne3 f4 22.gxf4 exf4 23.Nc2 Ng6⇄ 1/2-1/2 Zivkovic,M (2204)-Vidalina,F (2325)/ ICCF 2006 (45) ]

18.g3 Damit bereitet Weiß das Manöver Se3-c4 vor, bei vorangegangenem a2-a4.

[ Versucht der Anziehende mit 18.a4 in den Gewässern von 17.g3 überzuleiten, so kann Schwarz auf eindrucksvolle Art und Weise die Unterschiede zu Tisch bringen: bxa4! 19.Ne3 Rfb8 20.Nc4 Rb3 21.g3 Rab8 Da Schwarz e4 unterlassen hat, kann Sc4-e3 jederzeit mit f5-f4 beantwortet werden. Schwarz steht bereits etwas angenehmer! ]

[Nach 20.Nd4?! gleicht Schwarz sofort mit b4! aus: 21.Qf3 bxc3 22.bxc3 Rac8= ( 22...Bxd4!? 23.cxd4 Ng6= )]

(Diagram)

23.Bd3!? Damit wird nicht nur Se5 verhindert, Weiß plant die zeitintensive Überführung des Turms d1 nach h3! Schwarz muss nun präzise agieren.

[ 23.Bh3 Qc7 nebst Dc4! ]

[Vielleicht bringt die Zentralisierung der weißen Dame mit 23.Qf5!? gewisse Aussichten auf Vorteil!? Neben Df5-d3 ist auch unter bestimmten Voraussetzungen h2-h4 eine Idee. ]

23...Be5 24.Be4

B33: Sicilian: Pelikan and Sveshnikov Variations 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Not quite a London System and not quite a Veresov. Something in between. Does the position of the knight on c3 hinder or help the White cause? Back in the 1980s I remember that everyone had a hard time accepting that this idea could give Black problems, but the results were fantastic for White. --- In this brief introduction, we will note that even Magnus Carlsen has been tempted to play this unusual opening. 4...Nf6 5.Nc3 We can call this the main line move, although 5 Nb5 is catching up and may well surpass 5 e3 as White's best try before very long. 5...e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Ne7 Black has chosen a solid and rather unambitious approach. This is a blitz game, and he is playing Magnus, but we will learn that an aggressive attitude is important if Black wants to counter the Barry successfully. 9.c4! Ng6

[This allows Black more flexibility than 14...Rc8 15.Qa4 Bd7 16.exf5 . ]
15.exf5 So White gets his third pawn for the piece. Nonetheless, I would once again prefer to have Black's piece than White's pawns. 15...0-0 16.0-0 e4 This allows Black's pieces access to e5. 17.a4 Re8 18.Qg4
[ 18.Re1 Re5 19.Ne3 Ne7 20.Bxd7 Qxd7 21.f6 Bxf6 22.Qg4+ Qxg4 23.Nxg4 Re6 24.Nxf6+ Rxf6 25.Rxe4 Kf8 has been seen in five correspondence games, in all of which White managed to hold the draw. ( 25...Re6 , M.Yeo-F. Kwiatkowski, British League 2009, also leaves chances equal. )]
18...Kh8 It isn't a bad idea to slip the king off the g-file. 19.Qf4
[ 19.Rad1 Rb8 20.Rfe1 Ne5 21.Qxe4 Bxb5 22.axb5 Rxb5 23.f4 Rxb2 24.Kh1 Rg8 25.f6 Bxf6 26.Nxf6 Qxf6 27.fxe5 Qxe5 28.Qxe5+ dxe5 29.Rxe5 Rgxg2 30.Re8+ Kg7 31.Rg1 was Wei Yi-Yu Yangyi, Danzhou 2014. This game too soon petered out to a draw. ]
19...Be5 20.Qh6
[Of course 20.Qxe4?? hangs the queen to the simple discovery Bxh2+ . ]
20...Rc8
[Or 20...Rg8 21.Rfe1 Rc8 22.f6 Rg6 23.Qe3 Bxf6 24.Qxe4 Bg7 25.Rad1 Re6 and a draw was prematurely agreed in V. Borges-E.Choma, Curitiba 2016. I slightly prefer Black. ]
21.f6 Rg8 22.Rae1
[ 22.Rfe1 would transpose to the previous note. ]
22...Rg6 23.Qh4 Rg4 24.Qh5? White is in "it's-him-or-me" mode.
[He should have offered a draw by repetition with 24.Qh6 , when Black can either take the draw or play on with Rg6 25.Qh4 Bf5 . ]
24...Bxf6 25.Qxf7 Be5 Black has a strong attack against White's under-defended king. 26.f4?
[White had to try 26.g3 Rg7 27.Qh5 Be6 28.Ne3 Na7 29.Ba6 Rc5 30.Qe2 Nc6 , with an inferior yet still playable game. ]
EXERCISE (combination alert): White missed something on his last move. How should Black continue? 26...exf3?! Black allows the opportunity to sneak by, not sensing his position's concealed power.
[ANSWER: 26...Rg7! is very strong; e.g. 27.Qh5 Bg4 28.Qh6 Rg6 and White's queen is trapped. He is hopelessly lost after 29.Qxg6 hxg6 30.fxe5 dxe5 . ]
27.Rxf3?
[ 27.g3 Rg7 28.Qxf3 was forced, though even here a dark shadow hangs over White's king. ]
27...Rg7! Now this idea is even stronger. 28.Qh5 Bg4
[Since 28...Bg4 29.Qh6 Bxf3 picks off an entire rook. ]

White simply castles and continues to develop. 12...Bxd5! Remember our Sveshnikov rule of thumb: given a chance, plug d5 with a white pawn. 13.exd5 Ne7 At first glance it may seem that Black just allowed a combination with 14 Nxb5, but Black does not need to fear this possibility. 14.c3

[The ineffective "combination" 14.Nxb5 is seen in the next game. ]

14...Bg7 Now negating the Nxb5 trick. 15.Qh5

[Here 15.Nc2 0-0 16.a4 e4 17.Be2 bxa4 18.Rxa4 Qb6 19.Rb4 Qc5 20.Ne3 Rab8 21.Qb3 Rxb4 22.cxb4 Qc8 23.g3 Ng6 24.Qc4 f4 25.Qxc8 Rxc8 26.gxf4 Rb8 27.Bxa6 1/2-1/2 was D.Sadvakasov-A. Khalifman, Russian Team Championship 2005. I would decline a draw with Black, who looks slightly better after Rxb4 . ]

15...e4 The g7-bishop's power just increased tenfold. 16.Be2

17.Nc2 Re8

[Others: -- a) 17...Rc8 18.Ne3 f4 19.Nf5 Re8 20.a4 Ng6 21.axb5 axb5 22.Ra6 Bf8 23.Bxb5 Re5 24.Qh3 Rb8 25.Nd4 Qf6 and Black's chances on the kingside and centre fully compensate for White's extra pawn, V.Turkov-F. Finocchiaro, correspondence 2009. ]

[Or 18.Rad1 f4 19.Nb4 Qb6 20.Qg4 a5 21.Nc6 Nxc6 22.dxc6 Qxc6 23.Qg5 Re5 24.Qxf4 d5 and Black stood no worse, J.Vosahlik-V.Iotov, correspondence 2007. ]

18...f4! A good new move. Gelfand wants to go after his opponent's king. This is one of those positions that fools the computer, who calls it even. If you play the logical progression out about ten moves, then the evaluation always seems to swing in Black's favour, no matter how White plays it, as is the case so often with the comp's (mis)assessments in the Sveshnikov.

[Instead, after 18...Nxd5 19.Qxf5 Re5 20.Qh3 Qb6 21.Rfd1 Ne7 Black can play for a break on b4 with ...a6-a5 and ...b5-b4, and chances look even, E.Van Leeuwen-M.De Oliveira, correspondence 2012. ]

19.gxf4?! With this move White forges the future chains which bind him. Inarkiev doesn't like the idea of retaining tension and keeping Black's central pawns fluid for too long. Perhaps he thinks he will be doing the attacking down the g-file, after Kh1 and Rg1.

[The correct move was 19.Bg4 to seize control over f5. After Ng6 20.Bf5 Re5 21.Rad1 Qf6 22.Nd4 Rxd5 23.Rde1 Re8 24.Qh3 Rxd4! 25.cxd4 d5 , the comp calls it dead even, while stylistically I prefer Black. ]

19...Ng6 20.f5 Nf4! Black's remaining bishop proves to be superior to White's knight. 21.Qg4 Nxe2+ 22.Qxe2 Qh4 23.Kh1 Kh8 Both kings hurry off the open g-file. The game soon reveals that Black is the one doing the attacking. 24.Rg1! This is White's best path.

[His game degrades if he attempts to eliminate Black's e-pawn with 24.f3?! exf3 25.Qxf3 Be5 26.Rf2 Rg8 27.Raf1 Rg4 28.Nb4 Rag8 29.Nd3 Qg5 (threatening mate on g1) 30.Qd1 Bf6 31.Qc1 Qh5 32.Qd1 Qh6 and White is in trouble. If 33.Qc1?? then Bg5 34.Qe1 Be3 wins, since White is unable to move his rook away from f2; i.e. 35.Re2? Qh3 forces mate in three moves. ]

24...Be5 Threatening mate on h2. 25.Rg2 Rg8 26.Rag1 Rxg2 27.Rxg2 Rg8 28.Qf1 Qh5 29.Ne3?!

[White has more hope of surviving in the line 29.Rxg8+! (principle: when the opponent is attacking, exchange pieces) Kxg8 30.Qg2+ Kf8 31.f6! Qd1+ 32.Qg1 Qf3+ 33.Qg2 Qxf6 34.Kg1 Qh6 35.Qxe4 Qxh2+ 36.Kf1 , although Black still has all the winning chances. ]

29...Rg5! 30.c4 White was perhaps possessed by an irresistible urge to lash out at something - anything. 30...Qf3! Black's pressure grows to unbearable levels.

31.cxb5 axb5 32.b3

[White is in no position to go pawn grabbing with 32.Qxb5?? as then Rxg2 33.Nxg2 Qd1+ wins. ]

32...Bf4 Threatening 33...Bxe3.

[The calm 32...b4 was also strong. ]

33.Kg1

[Not 33.Nc2?? Rxg2 34.Qxg2 Qd1+ and wins. ]

33...Bxe3 34.fxe3 Qxe3+ 35.Kh1 Rxg2 36.Kxg2

36...Qd2+ 37.Kh3 Qxd5

[Here 37...b4! 38.Kg4 e3 39.Kf3 Qxa2 is easier for Black. ]

38.Qf4! f6! 39.a4 White desperately attempts to create play with a passed a-pawn.

39...Qd3+

[Euclid never said that the shortest distance between two points is a curved trajectory! Simpler is 39...Qxb3+! , after which White's position faces economic excommunication; e.g. 40.Kh4 bxa4 41.Qxe4 a3 42.Qe8+ Kg7 43.Qe7+ Qf7

, when there is no perpetual check and Black's a-pawn wins the game. ]
40.Kg2 e3! 41.Qf3!
[ 41.Kf3?? is a fatal misstep. After e2+ 42.Kf2 Qd1 43.Qb4 Qf1+ Black promotes. ]
41...bxa4 42.bxa4 Qc2+ 43.Kg3 Qxa4 44.Qxe3 Black's extra pawn is decisive, yet there is one loose end, so he can't just relax and declare victory. He has to be certain that White doesn't have access to perpetual check. 44...Qb5 45.Kg4 Qe5 46.Qf3 d5 47.Kh3 Qe4! 48.Qh5
[ 48.Qxe4? dxe4 49.Kg4 Kg7 50.Kf4 Kh6 51.Kxe4 Kg5 52.h3 h6 is zugzwang. Black wins the king and pawn ending. ]
48...Qe3+ 49.Kh4 d4! 50.Qd1
[ After 50.Qf7 Qg5+ 51.Kh3 Qxf5+ 52.Kh4 Qf4+ 53.Kh3 Qh6+ 54.Kg3 Qg7+ the queens are removed from the board and White must resign. ]
50...d3 51.Qb3 Qf4+ 52.Kh3 Qxf5+ Now Black's win is clear. 53.Kh4 d2 54.Qd1 EXERCISE (planning): Find Black's most efficient route to victory. 54...h5! ANSWER: There is no defence to the coming ...Qg4+, removing queens.

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Nxc6 bxc6 7.Bc4 Be7 8.Bg5 0-0 Weiß hat eine Variante gewählt, die im OTB-Schach sehr schlecht abschneidet. Das schlagen auf c6 gibt Schwarz die Kontrolle über das wichtige Feld d5 (normalerweise schwach in e5-Systemen) und eine offene b-Linie , falls erforderlich. Moderne Engines mögen diese Position als gleichwertig ansehen, aber bereits in den 1970er Jahren verwendete IM David Levy als Schwarz genau diese Ideen, um seine berühmte Wette gegen Chess 4.7 zu gewinnen White has chosen a line that scores very poorly in OTB chess. The capture on c6 gives Black control of the important d5 square (normally weak in e5 systems) and an open b-file to use if necessary. Modern engines may consider this position equal, but as far back as the 1970's IM David Levy used just these ideas as Black to win his famous bet against Chess 4.7 9.Qd3 Qb6 10.b3 d5! Der andere Vorteil, einen Bauern auf c6 zu haben. Auf den ersten Blick scheint es, dass dieser Zug nicht gespielt werden kann, aber die folgende taktische Kombination ist für Schwarz besser. The other benefit of having a pawn on c6. At first glance it seems that this move can't be played, but the following tactical sequence is better for Black. 11.exd5 cxd5 12.Nxd5 Nxd5 13.Bxd5 Bxg5! Der Schlüsselzug. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 b4 12.Nc2 0-0 13.Be2 a5 14.0-0 Bg5 This way White's f2-f4 is made less desirable, since it would increase the power of Black's dark-squared bishop. 15.Qd3 Be6 16.Rad1 Which rook White places on d1 is important and shapes the play for the remainder of the game. In Game 14 White put the f1-rook on d1, meaning that plans with a2-a3 and queenside play were possible. By playing the a1-rook to d1, White signals that she plans to ignore the queenside and go for a break with f2-f4. 16...Ra7 As in the previous game Black prepares to defend the d6-pawn with ...Rd7, just in case White relocates her d5-

knight. 17.b3 Qb8
[ 17...Rd7 is Black's main move and also fine. ]
18.Kh1 Theory ends here. White prepares f2-f4, with or without g2-g3 thrown in.
[ 18.Nde3 , as in M.Kobalia-M.Devereaux, Tromsø 2010, can be met either by chopping the e3-knight, or playing Rd8 straight away. ]
18...Ne7 Black begins the plan of challenging d5.
[ 18...a4 is also reasonable. After 19.g3 axb3 20.axb3 Bh3 21.Rfe1 f5 Black stands no worse. ]
19.Nxe7+ Bxe7 20.Ne3 g6 21.Nd5
[ White can also play directly for mate with 21.g3!? a4 22.f4 exf4 23.gxf4 Bd7 . Delivering mate is always possible, but it's every bit as likely that White will simply overextend. ]
21...Bxd5! From observation and experience, I have noticed that when we reach such bad bishop versus bad bishop structures, the black piece is better, since it has a nasty habit of emerging on the g1-a7 diagonal, via d8. 22.Qxd5
[ Others: -- a) 22.cxd5 Bd8! 23.Rc1 Bb6 24.Rc6 Bc5 25.g3 a4 26.Bd1 axb3 27.Bxb3 Rc8 28.f4 exf4 29.gxf4 Qb7 30.Qf3 Rxc6 31.dxc6 Qxc6 32.f5 Qe8 33.Bd5 Bd4 and it's hard to see how White loses. Still, I would rather take Black, who has an extra pawn. ]
[ b) 22.exd5? is dumb, since it activates Black's kingside pawn majority, while White is stuck with a fixed one on the queenside. ]
22...Rc8 Halting c4-c5 tricks, while preparing to eject White's queen from her central post. 23.f4!? This creates a caustic effect on White's dark squares. It's difficult to let such a move go with adverse comment, but for now I will not dub it an error. With this radical decision, White is willing to take on an isolated e-pawn and an e5-hole in order to pry open the f-file. I suppose true faith in the (future) attack requires acceptance of the unseen and unproven.
[ A less radical agenda would go something like 23.Qd3 a4 24.g3 axb3 25.axb3 Qb6 with an equal position. ]
23...Rc5 24.Qd2 exf4 25.Qxf4 Bf8 26.Rd5?! As mentioned many times previously, it usually favours Black when d5 is plugged with a white pawn.
[ White was better off trying 26.Rd3 . ]
26...Rxd5 27.exd5
[ After 27.cxd5 Bg7 28.Bc4 Be5 White has no counterplay and is stuck with a bad bishop. Black can slowly try for play down the a-file with ...a5-a4, in conjunction with a slow push on the kingside with black queen on e7 and ... h7-h5. ]
27...Qb6 Black is essentially a pawn up, since White's majority is frozen. 28.Bg4
[ Maybe White should try and bail out to an ending at once with 28.Qf2 . ]
28...Bg7 29.Re1 Be5 Eljanov seals the e-file. 30.Qe3 The WGM decides that her king is in greater danger than Black's, so she tries her luck in the ending, hoping the opposite-coloured bishops will save her. 30...Qxe3 31.Rxe3 The ending will be a tough one for White to hold for the following reasons: -- 1. Black's bishop is far superior to White's. -- 2. Black is virtually a pawn up, since he has a mobile 3 to 2 kingside majority, while White's 4 to 3 needs a c4-c5 break to create a passed pawn. This will be very difficult to achieve. -- 3. Black may generate play with ...a5-a4 and open the a-file. 31...Kg7 32.Bd1 Halting ...a5-a4.

[The "undermining" shot 32.c5?? fails miserably to Bd4 . ]

32...h5 33.g3 f5 34.Kg2 Kf6 35.Re1 Rc7 This prevents c4-c5 tricks. 36.Re2 Kg5 He wants either to provoke White into the weakening h2-h4+, or else open the h-file with ...h5-h4. 37.Bc2 h4 38.Bd3 Kf6 39.Rc2

[After 39.gxh4?! Rh7 40.Kh3 g5 Black favourably regains the pawn. ]

39...Rc8 40.Re2 Rh8 41.Re3 Rh7 42.Bc2 Rh6 43.Bd3 Rh8 White is unable to improve her position, so Black makes a few waiting moves. 44.Bc2 EXERCISE (planning): What is Black's winning plan? 44...h3+! ANSWER: Push the h-pawn to h3, fixing White's h2-pawn as a permanent target. 45.Kf1 g5 Here comes the majority. 46.Rf3 f4 47.g4 This attempt to seal the position fails.

[White is also unlikely to save the game after 47.gxf4 Bxf4 48.Kg1 Ke5 . ]

47...Bd4 48.Bd3 Ke5 49.Bg6! Intending Bh5 and Rxh3. The problem is that perseverance doesn't do a lot of good when labouring on a lost cause. White does indeed win the h-pawn, but at too high a cost, since her pieces get tangled in the process. Still, it's the best try. 49...Be3 50.Ke2 Kd4 Now that is what I call a king. 51.Bh5 Black's h3-pawn falls, but White's pieces had to go into a terrible tangle to win it. 51...Kc3 52.c5 Desperation.

[After 52.Rxh3 Kb2 Black's king mops up the queenside pawns. ]

52...dxc5 53.Rxh3 Rh7 54.Rf3 Rd7 55.h4! We are all men and women of indomitable spirit when everything is going well in our lives. It's not so easy to fight when everything is falling apart. When we are losing, the normal must bow to the whims of the insane. Everything loses at this stage, but this is White's best shot at complicating, since it creates a passed g-pawn. 55...gxh4 56.Rh3 Rxd5 57.Kf3 Kb2?! Complicating the win;

[which is easier after 57...Rd2! 58.Rxh4 Rf2+ 59.Ke4 Rxa2 60.g5 a4 61.bxa4 Rxa4 62.g6 b3+ 63.Kf5 b2 64.Rh1 Ra1 65.g7 Rxh1 66.g8Q b1Q+ . ]

58.Bf7! Rd2?! Another inaccuracy and another setback for Black.

[Here 58...Rd3! 59.Ke4 Rc3 60.g5 f3! 61.Rxf3 Bxg5 62.Rf2+ Ka3 is an easy technical win. ]

[Black has better winning chances with 62...c4! 63.Bxc4 Rxg6 . ]

[After 67.Ke4! White should draw, since if a4 68.Bb5 axb3 69.Bxc6 b2 70.Rh1 Ka2 71.Bd5+ b3 72.Rd1 b1Q+ 73.Rxb1 Kxb1 74.Bxb3 , I'm almost certain this is a theoretical draw. ]

67...a4 This is the pesky detail White forgot. Now she no longer has Bb5, since her rook occupies the square. 68.Bd5 Rh6 69.Kg5
[ Or 69.bxa4 Kxa4 70.Bc4 Rh4+ and the loose white bishop falls. ]
69...Be3+! How convenient. Both the black rook and bishop get covered in a single move, and with tempo. 70.Kf5 axb3 71.Ra5+ Kb2 72.Ke4 Bb6 73.Ra8 Rh4+ 74.Kf3
[ 74.Kd3?? hangs the bishop to Rd4+ . ]
74...Bd4 75.Rb8 Bc3 76.Rg8 Rd4! The rook will block annoying checks on d2.

Black is okay here. Trust the comps!
14.exf5 This is the start of a scary-looking forcing line.
[ We'll examine the calmer 14.0-0 in two games time. ]
14...Bxd5 15.f6 Black resigns? Not quite, since we have access to two adequate resources. If you are just starting with Sveshnikov and haven't ever seen this position, be careful not to reject it out of pre-existing beliefs. Relax. Black's position is fully playable. 15...e4 It's time for us to enter territory inhabited by dragons and other fearsome creatures. As Tal use to say, the opponent can only take one piece at a time.
[ 15...h6 is also okay for Black; e.g. 16.fxg7 ( 16.Qf5 e4 17.fxg7 Re8 is similar to the game continuation ) 16...Kxg7 17.Nc2 Qg5 18.Qxg5+ hxg5 and Black had reached a decent ending, R.Bes-V. Kurgansky, correspondence 2010. ]
16.fxg7 Re8 17.Be2 The only move.
[ 17.Qxd5? is a bad idea. White's lag in development is of far more concern than Black's awful structure. 17...Ne5 The knight is powerfully posted on e5. It may even later hop into d3.

19...Nd3! Maybe ...Nd3 isn't discouraged after all! --- Normally, an imagination-less rationalist like me loathes speculation, yet I fully endorse this pawn sacrifice, after which it is White who struggles to maintain equality. It's shocking to have played an opening for decades and then come to the realization that there are still some secrets left unresolved. The Sveshnikov is not a rigid system. It generally flows and shifts along with our ambitions. Black gets full compensation for the pawn. 20.Bxd3
[Not 20.Qxd5?? Qxf2+ 21.Kh1 Qxe2 22.Rf1 Ra7 23.Qb3 ( 23.Qxd6 Qxb2 is hopeless for White ) 23...e3 and White is paralysed. ]
20...Re5! Black defends his bishop with tempo. 21.Qh3 exd3 22.Rxd3 Rae8 Threatening mate on the back rank. 23.Nc2?
[White maintains the balance only by returning the pawn immediately: 23.Rf1! (this is the magic protection spell that keeps White safe) Bxa2 is equal. ] EXERCISE (combination alert): White's last move loses material. Demonstrate how.
23...Re2 ANSWER: Step 1: Start with a double attack on f2 and c2. 24.Qg3 The f2-square must be protected. 24...Be4! Step 2: Skewer. Sveshnikov que je ne suis pas loin de considérer comme la réfutation pure et simple de la Sicilienne ouverte ! Carrément ! Le concept imaginé par les noirs est si puissant qu'on peut d'ores et déjà dire qu'ils ont égalisé. On laisse aux blancs tout le loisir d'occuper la case d5 en faisant l'audacieux pari qu'ils n'en tireront rien ou qu'ils devront la céder avec pertes et fracas. Ce système peut porter d'autres noms : Lasker, Pilnik, Pelikan... mais c'est essentiellement le grand maître Evgeny Sveshnikov qui l'a rendu populaire. Aujourd'hui, des joueurs de tout premier plan comme Lautier, Shirov, Kramnik emploient régulièrement cette variante mais je pense que le grand maître Michal Krasenkow en est le plus grand spécialiste mondial. Ce n'est pas le genre de décision que je prends à la légère. En effet, je n'aime pas m'engager dans des variantes dont l'issue me paraît trop incertaine; sans doute à cause des mêmes doutes qui m'assaillent quand, au beau milieu d'un long et obscur tunnel, je perds un peu de l'assurance que j'avais à l'entrée de revoir la lumière du jour à la sortie. Sans chercher à m'en faire une spécialité, j'ai étrangement souvent l'occasion de donner la qualité (cf. CDE/486). Résultat des courses : alors que je pouvais contraindre mon adversaire à un abandon quasi immédiat, j'ai du ramer jusqu'au 51e coup et demeurer dans une stressante incertitude par rapport au délai. Quand Alfredo Pietrobono déposa les armes, le congrès n'était plus qu'à une quinzaine de jours ! Là, je peux vous dire que sans l'e-mail, il m'aurait été absolument impossible de régler à temps toutes les formalités nécessaires à la validation du titre. Comme quoi le courrier électronique a aussi du bon !' ]

Current Reputation: White has the upper hand I've borrowed this title from GM Zvjaginsev's previous article, as it basically deals with the same thing: Giri's impressive preparation for his match against Shirov. On the other hand, this survey intriguingly bears semblance to GM Kovacevic's yesterday's article as well, since it also explores heavily analyzed lines that go well beyond 20th move. Consequently, I'm going to start from move 22, and for all other earlier deviations I'll refer you to GM Vuckovic's excellent take on this topical variation presented in our CHOPIN Line 439.

[We first examined this last month in the game Kovchan-Moiseenko and it was great to see Dargan so fast to jump on the bandwagon. Less ideally, however, when Moiseenko reached this position again in the World Team Championship, he switched to the main line, 11...b4 12.Nc2 0-0 and after 13.h4 *(*Nepomniachtchi's move White should ignore the b-pawn, but he can deploy his bishop to e2 or fianchetto it with 13.g3 - see Nisipeanu-Radjabov, Medias 2010, for coverage of the latter )

A) there's still no reason to defend the b-pawn, but in another recent game, Lorenzo de la Riva-Munoz Pantoja, Barcelona 2011, 13...a5 was preferred after 14.Qf3 *(*Shirov's 14.g3 Be6 15.Bh3 a4! is known to give Black enough counterplay - see Nepomniachtchi-Ni Hua, Sochi 2009, in the Archive ) 14...Be6 15.Rd1 Bxd5!? *(*this seems fine here, although Black can also keep the tension with 15...Be7 followed by ...a4, as we saw in the notes to Nepomniachtchi-Ni Hua ) 16.Rxd5 Qb8 17.g3 a4! (this seems to be the key idea in this variation with White still to develop his kingside, Black does his best to open lines on the other flank) 18.Rb5 Qc7 19.Qd3 Rfb8 20.Be2 and now the instructive exchanges Nd4! 21.Nxd4 exd4 22.Rf5 b3 23.a3 Ra5 24.Rxa5 Qxa5+ Black was pretty comfortable;

B) 13...Be6 14.g3 *(*not 14.Ncxb4? Nxb4 15.Nxb4 Qb6 16.Qd2 Rab8 when Black regains his pawn with promising activity ) 14...Rb8 15.b3 g6 *(*this turns out well, but it seems that Black is quite comfortable in any case another Sveshnikov expert opted for 15...Be7 in Feygin-Tregubov, German League 2008, where 16.Qd2 Qd7 17.Rd1?! Bd8 18.Bg2 Bg4! (forcing a small concession) 19.Ra1 a5 20.0-0 Bb6 21.Nxb6 Rxb6 22.Rfe1 Nb8 23.Re3 Na6 saw Black ignoring the hole on d5 and beginning to outplay his opponent en route to the full point ) 16.Nxf6+ ( 16.h5 Bg5 only seems to help Black ) 16...Qxf6 17.Bg2 Rfd8 18.0-0 a5 19.Qe2 Qe7 20.Rad1 a4 Black was, if anything, slightly for choice in Balogh-Moiseenko, Ningbo 2011. Yes, his traditional d-file weaknesses remain, but they are hardly important, whereas the soon-to-be-opened a-file will be. Moreover, just compare the minor pieces! Perhaps Moiseenko was happy to gradually outplay White in the solid ... b4 lines (although he only drew despite pressing for a long time), and maybe he feels that 11...Ne7 is only good as a surprise weapon - whether because it's not 100% sound or because White, if prepared, can find a way to draw against it. In any case, I still haven't found anything wrong with the dynamic knight move, although I'm happy to admit that the game will still be a draw if White plays accurately! ]

12.Nxf6+ This must be critical, but isn't forced - see the notes to Kovchan-Moiseenko for the alternatives. 12...gxf6 13.cxb5 0-0 14.bxa6

[ We analysed this last month, where we mainly focussed on Kovchan's 14.Qd2 Bb7 15.Bd3 axb5 16.Nxb5 d5 17.exd5!? Qxd5 18.Nc3 Qxg2 19.0-0-0 , which led to a sharp, roughly-level game in Kovchan-Moiseenko, Ukrainian Championship, Kiev 2011. ]

14...Bxa6 15.Bxa6

[ White can keep the bishops on with 15.Nc4 , but after d5 16.exd5 Nxd5

( 16...Qxd5!? 17.Qxd5 Nxd5 followed by ...Nf4 may also be possible ) 17.Qg4+ Kh8 18.0-0-0 Rg8 19.Qe4 Bb7 Black deals with the pin on the d-file and is at least OK. 20.Bd3 Rg7 will keep everything under control on the kingside and surely, sooner or later, White's king will begin to feel the heat on the opposite flank. ]

15...Qa5+ 16.Kf1

[ A novelty. Last month I just mentioned 16.Qd2 Qxa6 17.Qe2 Qa5+ when Black has enough compensation if White tries to play on, but after 18.Qd2 it's not clear he can do better than repeat moves. Perhaps Qxd2+!? 19.Kxd2 Ra4 20.f3 d5 might be tried, although after 21.Nc2! (if in doubt improve your worst-placed piece!) I'm yet to convince the machine that Black has quite enough activity to claim equality. ]

16...Qxa6+

[ This feels very natural, but perhaps 16...Rxa6!? might also be investigated, intending 17.Nc4 Qc5 18.b3 ( 18.Ne3 Rb8 followed by ... Qd4 or ...Qb4 gives Black some pressure) ) 18...d5 19.exd5 Nxd5 when White is yet to sort out the kingside and, in practical terms at least, Black must have enough compensation. ]

17.Qe2 Rfb8! Dargan's pieces flow into the game along Benko lines. 18.Qxa6 Rxa6 19.Nc4! Good defence. White was in danger of landing up worse, but Hegarty finds a way to activate her knight just in time. 19...Rb4 20.b3 Rxb3 21.Nxd6 Rc3!?

[ Trying to keep the game going. Instead after 21...Rb2 22.Nc4 Rc2 23.Ne3 there's nothing for Black's rook to do, but recapture - Rcxa2 24.Rxa2 Rxa2 25.g3 and the draw becomes rather clear. ]

22.Nf5! Further good defence from the England Ladies International, who has realised that Black won't have time to cause mayhem on her second rank. 22...Nxf5 23.exf5 Rb6

17...Rd7 18.Bf3 Nimzowitsch would be impressed with White's overprotection of d5, but I ask: Is White's control over d5 bothering Black in any way? I don't see how it is.

18...Nb8!? Destination c5. 19.a3!? A new move which turns the queenside into a warring republic with no ruling authority. --- QUESTION: Is it in White's favour to open the queenside? --- ANSWER: White logically assails b4, hoping to gain some queenside traction by exploiting Black's knight retreat. However, this plan does help Black in one way: it opens the position for his bishop pair.

[ Previously, White played exclusively on the kingside: 19.g3 (aiming for an f2-f4 break) Na6 20.Qe2 Nc5 21.Nce3 g6 22.Bg2 , V. Kovalev-O.Ladva, European Rapid Championship, Warsaw 2011, and now Bh6 23.f4 exf4 24.gxf4 Re8 leaves the game dynamically balanced. ]

19...bxa3 20.Nxa3 Na6?! I prefer White's position after this.

[ Seeing that the situation on the queenside has changed, Black should backtrack with 20...Nc6! , retaining control over d4 and b4. ]

21.Nb5? When we pick an aggressive plan and then hesitate, we demand the privilege of ownership, without the commitment of paying for it. With one move White goes from better to worse.

[ He should play the more accurate 21.Qc3! (allowing him to recapture on d5 with the rook) Nc5 22.Nb5 g6 23.g3 Bh6 24.Bg2 , when I think Black stands slightly worse due to the weaknesses at d6 and a5. ]

21...Bxd5! 22.cxd5?!

[ Not 22.Qxd5?? , which self-traps the queen after Nb4 . ]

[ Instead, 22.exd5 is probably the lesser evil, even if it does allow Black to activate his kingside pawn majority with f5 . ]

22...Rb7! Now White experiences serious issues in the protection of b3. 23.Be2

23...Qb8 24.Ra1

[ After 24.Nc3 Nc5 25.Qf3 Rxb3 , Black has an extra pawn and White's knight is caught in a painful pin. ]

EXERCISE (combination alert): White complies under duress. How did Black win material? --- ANSWER: Removal of a key defender. 24...Nb4!

[ Rather than 24...Nc5? , which allows White to hang on to his knight after 25.Qc4 . ]

25.Qc3 Rxb5 26.Bxb5 Qxb5 27.Qc7 Black has won two minor pieces for the rook, but urgency presses upon White and it appears as if he has rustled up some counterplay against a5 and d6. However, Wei Yi's next move shows that Black's initiative comes first. 27...Qe2! Targeting both f2 and e4. If White's position hasn't quite reached hell, then it may be nearing the suburbs. 28.Qxd6 Nd3 Covering e5, while eyeing f2. 29.Qa6

29...Qxe4 30.Qc4 Qf5! Black must keep queens on the board to go after White's king. From f5 the queen enables a future activation of the rook into the attack with ... Rc8. 31.Rxa5

[ If 31.d6 at once, then e4 and Black hangs on to his a-pawn. ]

31...h5! Offering his king luft, while worrying White about a future push of his h-pawn. 32.d6 Rc8 33.Qc7!? When we are losing, a single thought pops into our mind: How can we turn order into anarchy? Refusing to be enfeebled by long adversity, Zhao Jun fastens to his single strength in the position: his passed d-pawn. White refuses to impose limits on his spending and offers his queen. The idea is either a desperate bluff, or a cunning trap.

[ Objectively speaking, 33.Qd4 was correct, making use of the pin along the fifth rank, but that would only prolong White's suffering after g6 34.Qa7 Rd8 . ]

[ QUESTION: Why can't he just play 33.Qd5 - ? --- ANSWER: Let's turn that into an exercise. --- EXERCISE (combination alert): Black to play and win. --- ANSWER: Qxf2+! (when we are the victims of such shots, our emotions are the same as upon seeing a large oak tree, which has been a familiar sight all our lives, suddenly shattered into fragments in an instant by a bolt of lightning) 34.Rxf2 Rc1+ 35.Rf1 Be3+ 36.Kh1 Rxf1# . Forcing mate with a queen sacrifice is the chess equivalent of Christmas, your birthday and a visit from the tooth fairy and Easter bunny, all on the same day. ]

33...Rxc7! White's attempt at irony backfires; this is not one of those "Down-goes-Frazier" moments for Black. Sometimes an open challenge by our opponent undermines our rationality, to the point where we back down, when logic tells us we should accept the challenge. Wei Yi correctly accepts the queen. White's idea was merely an abstraction, without a real chance of application. He is unable to force promotion of the c7-pawn.

[ Chickening out with 33...Bd8! 34.Qa7 Bxa5 35.Qxa5 Qg4 wins easily too, when Black is a piece up and White's d-pawn is going nowhere. ]

[ There is absolutely no reason to play an apathetic response like 33...Rd8? , even if Komodo says Black is still winning anyway. ]

34.dxc7 Qc8 "With great power comes great responsibility," says the queen, quoting Spiderman's uncle Ben. The queen isn't destined to be chained to c8 forever. 35.Ra7 e4 Threatening ...Bf4 and ...Bxc7. 36.Rfa1 Kh7! Frustrating White's aim of a Ra8 pin, and c7 soon falls. --- SUMMARY: White's quiet set-up with 13 Be2 shouldn't cause us any problems. We can develop our pieces to sensible squares and await our chances. Note Black's idea of 16... Ra7, maintaining flexibility with the heavy pieces.

White immediately challenges us on b5. -- 2. White increases his grip on the d5-square. 3. White clears c2 to bring the offside a3-knight back into play. --- QUESTION: Is there a strategic cost for White? --- ANSWER: There is one: by playing c2-c4, White fixes another pawn on the same colour as his remaining light-squared bishop, which means there is a clear danger of landing up in some version of a bad bishop endgame.

[ White's other alternatives - 11.Be2 ]

[ 11.Nxf6+ ]

[ 11.Bd3 ]

[ and 11.g3 - are examined later in the chapter. ]

[ A final possibility, 11.Nb1 , transposes to 9 Nab1 Be7 10 Bxf6 Bxf6 11 Nd5 in the notes to Polgar-Kramnik in the previous chapter. ]

11...b4 We bypass, while menacing the c3-knight.

[ Capturing with 11...bxc4?! makes little sense, since we hand White control over c4 and pressure on d6 after 12.Nxc4 with a pleasant edge. ]

12.Nc2

[ QUESTION: Should we fear 12.Qa4 - ? --- ANSWER: Absolutely not. Play Bd7! and dare White to take the b-pawn. If your opponent insists with 13.Nxb4? , your initiative gets out of control after Nd4! 14.Qd1 Rb8

A) If White is tempted to hang on to his extra pawn with 15.Nd3 (this has been played twice in my database and White won both games, yet Komodo assesses it as -2 09!), Black should continue Bh4! 16.Be2 *( 16.g3? 12...0-0

[ If you want to make sure of the b4-pawn you can play 12...a5 at once, which generally transposes. ]

[ The main alternative, 13.Be2 , is examined in Zhao Jun-Wei Yi and Negi-Kryvoruchko. To my mind, fianchettoing is more efficient than playing the bishop directly to e2, since White keeps Black's pieces out of h4 and also may later opt for an f2-f4 break. ]

[ QUESTION: Why isn't the b-pawn hanging this time? --- ANSWER: After 13.Ncxb4 Nxb4 14.Nxb4 Qb6 , White is unable to hang on to his extra pawn. For example, 15.Nd5 ( not 15.Nd3? Qc6 16.Be2 Qxe4 17.0-0 Rb8 , when Black has regained the sacrificed pawn with a clear advantage with the bishop pair and more active pieces ) 15...Qxb2 16.Bd3 Bd8 17.0-0 Be6 , and I already prefer Black due to his dark square control, V. Anand-T.Radjabov, Bilbao 2008. We will see a similar situation arise in Negi-Kryvoruchko. ]

13...a5 Black finally deigns to protect his b-pawn. 14.h4 This move, which cuts off ... Bg5 and keeps open ideas of Bh3, is the current favourite of top GMs.

14...Be6 At some stage we may want to chop that d5-knight - especially if we can force White into a pawn recapture. 15.Qd2 Keeping an eye on b4 to discourage any ...a5-a4 ideas.

[ For instance, 15.Bh3 , which was White's main option here, can by met by a4! and then:

18...h5 19.f4 The only way for White to make progress on the kingside. 19...Bg7 Black wisely preserves his dark-squared bishop, which is now useful both defensively and offensively. 20.Bd3 f5 Black stands his ground, ruling out any f4-f5 pushes;

[ for instance, 20...b3 21.f5!? bxa2+ 22.Kxa2 Bxd5 23.Nxd5 Rb8 is anybody's game. ]

21.Rhf1 a4? Sometimes we make a move, hoping to intimidate, only for the effect on our opponent to be the complete opposite of our original intent. Black begins to overreach his authority on the queenside with a mistimed sacrifice of the b-pawn.

[ He should sit tight and play 21...Qe8 with a tense and dynamically balanced position. ]

22.fxe5 dxe5 23.Qxb4! Nepomniachtchi correctly assesses that he can get away with the crime. 23...Rb8 24.Qe7! , when he still has practical chances in view of the vulnerable white king. After the text, Black is busted. ]

26.fxe6?! This is the sort of position where we sit at the board wishing we had access to a computer.

[ White now gets a lot of material for the queen, but it was much better simply to move her away, assuming we can see our way to safety in the following complicated variation: 26.Qg5 Bxd5! 27.Nxd5 a3 28.b3 Rxb3+! 29.axb3 a2+ 30.Kb2 Ra7 (Black's attack looks very dangerous, but Komodo is unperturbed) 31.f6! 26...Rxe7 27.Nxe7+ Kh7 28.Bxg6+ Kh8 29.N7d5 White has rook, knight and three pawns for the queen, while his e-pawn hovers dangerously close to the promotion square. Nevertheless, Black is not lost yet. 29...a3! 30.b3? There was no time for this.

[ White should have played 30.e7! Rxb2+ 31.Ka1 Rb8 32.e8Q+ Rxe8 33.Bxe8 e4 34.Kb1 , when Black is down too much for the queen and has no clear way to proceed with the attack, even if White is still a considerable way from consolidating after, say, Qa7 35.Bb5 Qc5 . ]

EXERCISE (critical decision): In most games comes a defining moment. After 30 b3 there is a choice of three candidate moves: 30...e4, 30... Nxb3 and 30...Rxb3+. Black emerges fine in two out of the three. Pick one. 30...Nxb3? This move enfeebles his own attack, and we now feel a stumbling-down-the-stairs desperation to Black's coming moves. As it turns out, the most tempting of the three is the only one which doesn't work for Black.

32.Kc2 Qa3 33.Kd3! "I won't take up any more of your valuable time," says the king to his sister, dealing with the black queen's aggression with the air of someone humouring a crazy but harmless aunt at Christmas dinner. After a flash of inspiration, an idea sometimes just pops into our heads, which isn't merely correct - it's perfect. With his last move, White disarms his opponent's intent in advance of its engagement, realizing that the king is perfectly safe in a crowded mid-board, mainly due to an iron grip on the light squares. 33...e4+ 34.Kxe4 Qd6 35.Nf4! Securing the e6-pawn. White's king is safe and, according to Komodo, he is up +4.50 - the equivalent of a full rook! 35...Qc6+ 36.Ned5

36...Rxb3 EXERCISE (critical decision): Victory is within White's grasp, with five pieces defending his king and a strong passed e6-pawn eager to rush forward. How should White proceed? 37.e7?? Up until now, the issue of White's potential promotion goes unmentioned by both players, as if the e-pawn were an invisible third participant in the game. Is there any pain greater than coming agonizingly close to winning a beautiful game and then tossing it away, either through fatigue or time pressure? Before this move, White mastered the art of pushing to the edge, without actually falling off, but now unlucky geometry and chance intervene in Black's favour.

[ ANSWER #1: White wins with 37.Kf5! , where the king is perfectly safe (all that is missing from his fortress is a moat); for example, Qd6 38.Rfe1 Qf8+ 39.Bf7 Rxg3 40.Nxh5 Rg2 41.Nhf4 Rf2 42.Rd2! Rxd2 43.Ng6+ etc. ]

Komodo already has Black up by over one point. ]
14...Nf6 15.Rad1? EXERCISE (combination alert): My opponent, by now in extreme time pressure, misses a simple tactic. How does Black win material? 15...b5??
I would throw a fit if one of my students overlooked a simple win of the exchange. Grossly overconfident, I made my move instantly, even though I had plenty of time on my clock. Then an instant later, I groaned mentally and kicked myself.

[ANSWER: The obvious 15...Bg4 16.Qf2 Bxd1 wins easily. ]
16.Ne2?!
[He had to try 16.Bxe6 fxe6 17.Nab1 Na5 18.Rc1 with a miserable, though still playable position. ]
16...Bxd5?! I was flustered at missing 15...Bg4 on the previous move and, as a result, compounded the mistake with another one.
[Stronger was 16...Bg4 17.Qf2 Ne7 18.c3 Qb6 19.Rd3 Nexd5 20.exd5 Ne4 21.Qe1 f5 with a wretched position for White. ]
17.exd5 Ne7 18.e4?! This is suicide in the guise of an attack. Another time-pressure error.
[ 18.c3 was forced, although Black stands clearly better after Qb6 19.Rf2 e4 20.Qh3 b4 . ]
18...b4 19.Nb1 Rxc2 The queenside pawns begin to fall. 20.Ng3 The conspicuous absence of a white attack means there is no way to avert the inevitable.

9...h6 The idea is to prevent Bg5 to retain the f6-knight, one of the key stewards of the d5-square. 10.0-0 Be6 11.Ne3 Rc8 12.Ncd5+ Bxd5? This is an exception to the Sveshnikov rule of plugging d5 with a white pawn if possible. 20.Na3! The awful truth is I've been outplayed strategically by a 12-year-old (he is an IM today!). I totally missed this idea. Black is busted. 20...Bb6 21.Bd3?!

[ 21.Nb5! Ne8 22.Bb2 is stronger. ]

21...Kf8 22.Nb5 e4? Clearing e5 for the knight, but too ambitious.

[ 22...Qe7 was forced. ]

23.Be2?!

[ The comp bashes out 23.Nxd6! exd3 24.Nxc8 Qxc8 25.c5 and claims a decisive advantage for White. Certainly Black's position looks terrible. ]

23...Ne5 24.Qb3 Kg7 25.Bb2 Re8 26.Qg3! EXERCISE (critical decision): Calculate 26...Rxc4. Should Black play it? 26...Qe7? This passive response is hopeless.

[ ANSWER: Black can still make a fight of it by sacrificing a full rook with 26...Rxc4!! 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6
[The game actually began 2...e6 3.Nc3 Nc6 4.d4 cxd4 5.Nxd4 Nf6 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bf4 e5 8.Bg5 , when all the variations get confusingly pushed up one move, since both sides use an extra tempo to get to the starting position, but there's no need for us to bother with all that. Yu Yangyi perhaps changed his move order (from the direct 2...Nc6 in the previous game) to disguise the fact that he had an improvement prepared; or perhaps he just didn't feel like facing 3 Bb5 that day. ]
3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 b4 12.Nc2 0-0 13.g3 a5 14.h4 Be6 15.Qd2 a4!
When we play a novelty, we essentially tell a venerated authority: "I know better than all those before me!" How wonderful when this actually comes true. This move was a discovery of GM Alexandr Fier, just one month before this game (which was played three months after the previous one). --- QUESTION: Why did Black just give away his b-pawn? --- ANSWER: The principle behind the sacrifice is the same as in the Benko Gambit. Black sacrifices it to open the b-file. In this case, we get the added bonus of enhancing our play on the dark squares as well. --- QUESTION: Is it sound? --- ANSWER: It's absolutely sound and Komodo gives it a thumbs up. 16.Ndxb4
A new move. Iordachescu asks his opponent to prove it, deciding that the b4-irritation warrants removal, even at the cost of great inconvenience.
[In the original game, G.Oparin-A.Fier, Spanish Team Championship 2015, White declined with 16.Nce3 , which I think is inferior. At this point, rather than 16...Qa5, Black can play Nd4! 17.Qxb4 *(*or 17.Bg2 b3 18.a3 Rc8 19.Rc1 g6 20.h5 Rc5 , when White suffers from weak dark squares and stands worse ) 17...Bxd5 18.cxd5 (White's knight must cover the c2-fork square) Nf3+ 19.Kd1 Rb8 20.Qa3 *(*or 20.Qc3 Qb6 ) 20...Qa5 21.Qc3 Qa7 22.Rc1 Nd4 and it looks to me like Black's initiative/attack is worth a lot more than White's useless extra pawn. The opposite-coloured bishops factor is also in Black's favour here. ]
16...Qb6 Yu Yangyi provokes White's next move. A skilled positional player can sway an opponent to his purposes, without them even realizing that they are being guided/manipulated. 17.a3!? A solution can become worse than the original problem, the way a patient checks into the hospital with a dislocated shoulder, only to die from an infectious illness caught from another patient. I think White stands worse after this attempt to consolidate his extra pawn.
[His best line may be 17.Nxc6 Qxc6 18.Ne3 Bd8! (threatening ...Ba5) 19.0-0-0 Bb6 20.Nd5 Bxd5 21.Qxd5 Qc8 22.Rh2 *(*not 22.Qxd6?! Bd4! 23.f3 Rd8 24.Qa3 Rb8 25.Rh2 Qc6 and White is in deep trouble, despite his two extra pawns; note that he can't play 26.Kb1?? due to Bc5 27.Rxd8+ Rxd8 28.Qc3

Rd1+ and wins ) 22...Bd4 23.f3 Qc7 24.Rxd4! exd4 25.Qxd4 with two pawns for the exchange, but I still prefer Black since White's position feels loose. If this is the case, then the entire sacrifice beginning with 15...a4! may just be in Black's favour. ]

17...Na5! The knight decides to sail past the traditionally demarcated fourth rank, planning to sink itself on b3, while threatening the c4-pawn en route. 18.Rd1 Qb7 Threatening ...Qxe4+ and ...Qxh1. The queen also makes room for a future ...Bd8 and ...Ba5.

19.Ne3!

[ With 19.Ne3 White cleverly covers both c4 and e4 (tactically: Qxe4? gets skewered by 20.Bg2 ), albeit at the cost of allowing the black knight into d4, conveniently sealing White's attack on d6. ]

19...Nb3 20.Qc3?! White creates problems for himself on the kingside light squares with his chosen scheme of development.

[ 20.Qd3 Nd4 21.Bg2 and 22 0-0 looks more sensible. ]

20...Nd4 21.Bd3 Bd8! By now, we should all realize that our "bad" bishop isn't really so bad after all. Here White must factor in ...Ba5 or ...Bb6 ideas, when the bishop applies unpleasant pressure on the dark squares, so much so that Iordachescu feels it necessary to sacrifice the exchange. 22.0-0!? Bh3 23.Ned5 White saddles his opponent with a conflict-of-interest dilemma, asking the question: Do you want the exchange enough to lose control over the light squares across the board?

[ QUESTION: Why did White give up material when he can simply block with 23.Ng2 - ? --- ANSWER: In that case the pressure continues to grow: Bb6 24.Kh2 Nf3+! 25.Kh1 ( White gets crushed if he takes the bishop: 25.Kxh3?? Qd7+ 26.g4 h5 27.Ne3 Bxe3 wins ) 25...Bd4 26.Qc2 Bc5 27.Nd5 Nd4 28.Qd2 Rab8 29.Rb1 Qd7 30.f3 f5 with an enormous initiative for Black. ]

[ After 23...Bb6 , the rook isn't running away; 24.Rfe1 is met by Nf3+ . ]

24.Kh2 Bxf1 25.Rxf1 So White has obtained a pawn and light-square power for the exchange; but it's not enough, in my opinion, since Black controls the dark squares and can in his own time aim for a direct attack on the enemy king, whereas White has no real prospects of active counterplay. 25...Bc5 26.Kg2 Kh8 Leaving open possibilities of ...g7-g6 and ...f7-f5 in the future. 27.Qd2 Rab8 This move freezes the d5-knight, who is forced to babysit his b4-comrade. 28.Rb1 Qd7 Eyeing the g4-square and ...f5-break. 29.Qg5 Rb7 30.Qh5 f6 31.Qd1 Rfb8 32.h5! h6 Black agrees to a concession. Now he can't play the ...g6-g6 and ... f7-f5 plan. 33.Ra1 Rf8 34.Rb1 Ra8 35.Ra1 Rab8 36.Rb1 Get on with it people, we are busy, and our time is valuable. Both sides shuffle to get closer to the move 40 time control. 36...Rf8 37.Ra1 In a single chess game, we wish for many things. Then the hard reality arrives, with unpleasant questions about feasibility and details. --- EXERCISE (critical decision): Should Black play 37...f5 here? Or will doing so give White too much counterplay on the light squares? We can't make such a committal move unless we understand the long-term implications which are certain to follow. 37...f5! ANSWER: White finds himself assailed from multiple directions. As every CEO understands: never convene a board meeting to ask for something, unless you already know their collective answer in advance, since to call the meeting and be rejected would be to lose face. The lack of deterioration of White's position galvanizes Black into action. The immediate 37...f5! is correct, since the f-file is the corridor of Black's power. He can just work around White's light square control.

[ If 38.f3 f4! , White is unable to seal the position satisfactorily since Black eventually sets up a breakthrough sacrifice on b4. For example, 39.g4 Ra8 40.Rb1 Qd8 41.Qe1 Bxb4 42.Nxb4 Rab8 (Black eyes a return exchange sacrifice with dangerous fascination) 43.Bf1 Qa5 44.Bd3 Rxb4! (wealth has a way of creating more wealth in the future) 45.axb4 Rxb4 46.Qc3 Qc5 47.Rd1 Rb3 48.Qc1 Qb6 49.Rd2 Nxf3! 50.c5 ( or 50.Kxf3 Qe3+ etc ) 50...Nh4+ 51.Kh3 dxc5 52.Kxh4 Qd8+ 53.Kh3 Rxd3+ and wins. ]

38...Nxf5 39.f3 This move weakens e3, but White had no better.

[ If 39.Be4 Nd4 40.Rb1 ( or 40.Nd3 Ne6 and the coming ...Ng5 will be decisive ) , then 40...Rxf2+! 41.Kxf2 Qh3 with a winning attack. ]

39...Qf7 40.Qe2

[ Or 40.Qh1 Ne3+! 41.Nxe3 Qxf3+ and wins. ]

40...Qxh5 Now ...Qg5 as well as ...Nxg3! are huge threats. 41.g4 White struggles to procure the non-existent raw materials to rebuild his sagging position. This move is a mistake... in a position where it didn't matter.

[ White would also lose with 41.Bxf5 Qxf5 42.Rf1 Bd4 43.Qd2 h5 , sooner or later. ]

[ After 41...Nh4+ 42.Kg3 Qg5 43.Rf1 Rbf7 44.Be4 g6! 45.Nd3 Bd4 46.Qd1 h5 , White's kingside is swept away, debris in a flood. --- SUMMARY: 15...a4! is a completely sound pawn sacrifice, so play it without hesitation. ]

12...Qxg2 Not only does this win a pawn, it also accomplishes the following: -- 1. It destroys White's option to castle kingside. -- 2. It weakens the light squares around White's king, especially f3, which may be exploited with . ..Bg4, combined with ...Nd4.

[ This obvious move is a clear improvement over 12...Ng4? , as in M.Baldauf-R. Vidonyak, Neuhausen 2004, where 13.0-0 Bxc3 14.bxc3 Nxe3?! 15.fxe3 g6 16.Rf6! Be6 17.Ne4 Kg7 18.Qf3 would have seen a dangerous attack brewing for White. ]

13.a3 Bg4 Gaining a tempo while preventing White from castling long.

[ I prefer this to 13...Bxc3+ 14.bxc3 Be6 , even though Black's extra pawn and superior structure outweigh White's development lead. ]

14.Qd2? The queen should have gone to b1. --- EXERCISE (combination alert): White's last move allowed Black a combination. How should he continue? 14...Ba5?! This is still favourable for Black.

[ ANSWER: But I missed the far more favourable 14...Nd4! , threatening the fork on f3. I saw this move and misassessed just how strong it was for Black. 15.b4

Black threatens to undermine the h1-rook's support with ...h5-h4. -- 2. Black can later activate the sleeping h8-rook, via h6 or h5.

[ I think this move is more accurate than chasing the white king to safety with 18...Re8+ 19.Kd2 Qxf2+ 20.Kc1 . ]
19.Qc5+! This way White can play Kd2, while covering both f2 and his h1-rook against ...h5-h4. 19...Kg8 20.Kd2! h4 21.Nf5 Bxf5 I'm happy to eliminate a potentially potent attacker. 22.Qxf5 Rh5! The great issue with the Mamba is the buried h8-rook. [ 23.Rhg1 was necessary. ]
23...Nd5 The knight is unleashed as an agent of coercion, directed at White's queen and later (hopefully) his king. It becomes clear that it is White's king who is in the greater danger, despite the open g-file. White simply doesn't have the time to use it.
24.Qd4 Qg5+! A dual-purpose move: -- 1. White's rooks get disconnected and Rg1 ideas are no longer available. -- 2. Black's queen covers d8, in preparation for ...Nf4 and ...Rd8, going after White's bishop. 25.Kd1 Nf4 26.Qe3

Shampionat na (9) 2006
[FM Nikolay Yordanov]

In that game, you will see how to play with bishop pair, how important are the manoeuvres in strategic positions and why when our opponent has a very strong piece on the board is good to exchange it, especially if this is a knight in the centre.
1.Nf3 c5 2.e4 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6

8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 Bg5 We can see one of the most popular lines in the Sveshnikov variation. 12.Nc2 Ne7 13.Ncb4 0-0 Now our king is protected by the pawns. 14.Be2 Be6 We develop our non-active piece and put pressure on the d5 square which is very strong for white.

[ ⌓14...a5!? It is another option for activation and now white has to exchange one of the knights. 15.Nxe7+ Qxe7 16.Nd5 Double attack. Qb7□ 17.Qd3 Attacking the b5 pawn. Rb8 Protecting the pawn. 18.0-0 Be6= The plan for black is to play: Kh8, Bd8, Rfc8, Rc5, g6, f5, B:d5 ]

15.Qd3 Nxd5

[ ⌓15...a5!? That move is also possible. 16.Nxe7+ Qxe7 17.Nd5 Qb7 18.Qxb5 Bxd5 19.exd5 Qa7= Black is doing fine in that position. They plan to play: f5, e4, Bf6 ]

16.Nxd5 Qb8 17.Rd1 Qb7 Putting pressure on the knight on d5. 18.Qg3 Bd8= 19.0-0 White has a very strong knight on d5, that's why we have to get rid of him with Rc8-Rc5, B:d5 19...f5!? One of the major ideas for black in the Sveshnikov variation.

[ 19...Rc8!? 20.Rd2 With idea Rfd1 and to protect the knight on d5 and if is possible to take the weak pawn on d6 for black. Kh8= Typical move in the Sveshnikov variation. The plan for black is to play: g6 and f5 with chances for both sides. ]

20.Qe3 Rc8 21.Bf3 ⌓f4! We don't want to open the diagonal for the light-squared bishop for white. 22.Qe2 ⌓Rc5!= The mission is completed. We can take that strong knight on d5. 23.a3?!

[ ⌓23.b4 Rc4= ]

23...Bxd5∓ 24.Rxd5 Rxd5 25.exd5 And now we can see one tutorial position with opposite-coloured bishops and pawn majority on the kingside. It is very important to see how black can improve their position. 25...Be7 That move is not necessary.

[ ⌓25...Bb6 It is a strategic position, so we have to think about how to improve the position of our pieces. Bb6 is a more logical move because he will be more dangerous on that diagonal a7-g1. ]

26.Be4 ⌓g6 Of course, we have to restrict the activity of the opponent's bishop when we put the pawns in his colour. 27.Rd1 Kg7 Step by step, we have to improve the position of our pieces. 28.Rd3 Rc8 29.g3 fxg3 30.hxg3 And now there is a semi-open file for our rook. 30...Rf8 31.Kg2 It is time to find the best place for our bishop. 31...Bd8 32.Qg4 That move is not dangerous for Black. ⌓32...Bb6 Our bishop feels comfortable on the b6 square and we are attacking the f2 pawn. 33.f4? That move is a big strategic mistake because makes the protection of the king weaker. Remember that you have to push very carefully the pawns next to your king.

[ ⌓33.Rf3= Protecting the pawn and doesn't give any counter-chances for black. ]

33...exf4! 34.gxf4??

[ ⌓34.Rf3 White still has a chance to fix the position. fxg3 35.Rxf8! Exchanging the rooks doesn't give a chance for Black to have a strong attack against the white king. Remember that when you are under attack it is good for you to exchange pieces. Kxf8 36.Qf4+ Ke7∓ If white plays correctly they can save the position. ]

[ ⩲34...Re8! 35.Kf3 ⩲Qf7∓ 36.Rd2 h5-+ Winning position for black. ]
35.f5??
[ ⩲35.Qe6!∓ Last chance for white to save the position. ⩲Qd8 We don't want to exchange the queens because the power of our attack will decrease. 36.Rh3 Rf6 37.Qg4 ⩲Qe7 38.Kf3= White are doing fine in that position. ]
⩲35...Re8 36.Bf3 ⩲Qe1 with idea Qg1-Qf1 and to take the rook on d3. 37.fxg6 hxg6 38.Qd7+ ⩲Re7 39.Qxd6 Bc7 After Qg3, Re1 white are checkmate. What we have learned from that game: - the difference between grandmasters and intermediate players is that they always play against the opponent's ideas - we have to push very carefully the pawns next to our king - it is always good to exchange a passive piece for an active piece

13.a4 Now black has no many alternatives,like after the main 13.g5.On the other hand,that is not the best square for a queen:that doesn't allows white to push f2-f4. 13...bxa4!? In my opinion,that is a very good alternative to the most popular 13...Qe5, since black's queen is less vunlerable here than on e5. More than that,now black puts pressure on b2. 14.Rxa4 a5 The most natural continuation. 15.Bc4 Rb8? That is a serious mistake:The dark bishop is the key black's piece in this variation,so black shouldn't change it so easily. 16.b3 Kh8 Otherwise black is just much worse, but now white gets a dangerous attack. 17.0-0 f5? That is already a decisive mistake-black has no time to complete his development. 18.exf5! A great blow!

My sacrificially hot-headed friend IM Dio Aldama pulled me aside at one of our local Saturday Gambito G/40 tournaments and showed me this game, which really blew my mind. --- EXERCISE (planning): How can White obtain a decisive advantage? --- ANSWER: This one is tough for a human to find. Sacrificing a piece on b5 is strong, yet ever better is to postpone it for a turn. 1.e4! Wow. This really is a case of fear and loathing in Las Vegas! In this still favourable human version, White's rook on the seventh rank, coupled with the a-pawn, offers more than adequate compensation for the piece. 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4? Dio gets too cute. 4...Nf6 5.Nc3 e5?! This wastes time. 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5! Hesitation and a calculated strategic retreat are two very different things. Aldama intends to target the b5-pawn with Nb1 and then to the third rank. 7...a6 8.Na3?! It doesn't make sense to block his own rook. 8...b5 9.Nd5! Dio's muse never falls silent, which means that his creativity never remains mute. On the chess board I'm not the charitable type and if I give something away, I want my money's worth. IM Aldama is the opposite and is a kind of chess Santa Claus, who never fails to offer generous gifts to his opponent in virtually every game he plays. "Dude, are you crazy? I strongly urge you to stay on your meds!" I joked to Dio, when he showed me this second piece sacrifice. He banks everything on his two passed pawns, which came at the expensive price of two pieces. Such a sacrifice arises from pure intuition and isn't really bound by the laws of measurement, since I'm sure that Dio was unable to fully work out its ramifications to their end. 9...Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6? The only thing worse than our opponent's crude practical joke is to fall for it. Dio's gamble immediately pays off. 11.c3! 0-0? We can only ignore our opponent's bad manners for so long until temper flares. Then comes the desire to bloody a nose and loosen a few teeth. This dramatic lash-out is a mistake. Black misidentifies the source of the danger. 12.Nc2?? What on earth?! I'm not sure what caused Dio suddenly to start accepting sacrifices instead of offering them, not least because it's a terrible decision. 12...Bb7? 13.Be2

EXCHANGING PIECES (I): Liquidation. Over four issues I'm going to show you different situations in which it's advisable to exchange pieces. The first one is about liquidation into a winning ending. 1.Nc3 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.e4 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 After a somewhat unorthodox move order, the game transposes into a regular Sveshnikov. 7...a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 White voluntarily gives up his B for the N in order to keep the d5-square firmly under control. As in most Sicilians, this square is very important in the Sveshnikov. Black is dreaming of the move d6-d5, which would activate her pieces and make her extra central pawn effective. 10...Bxf6 11.Nxf6+ It's always tempting to exchange a N for a B, but it has a major drawback in this position. It loosens the control over d5.
[ 11.c3 , followed by Nc2-Ne3 is the most popular continuation. ]
11...Qxf6 12.c3 Bb7 13.Qd2
[ 13.Nc2 wouldn't have prevented d5 either. Ne7 14.Bd3 d5 ]
13...0-0 14.Bd3 Ne7 15.0-0 d5 16.Rfe1 Rad8 17.Qe2 Ng6 Both players did very well to maintain the tension as long as possible. However, Black's pressure has now become too strong and White decides to take on d5. 18.exd5 Nf4 19.Qe4 Nxd3 20.Qxd3 Rxd5 21.Qe2 Qg5 22.Qf3 e4 23.Qe3 Qxe3! A wise decision. Black's attack wasn't so dangerous any more and she decides to go for the 7th rank. 24.fxe3 Rd2 25.Rab1 Rfd8 26.Kf1 Bd5 27.Re2 Bxa2 28.Ra1 Rd1+ 29.Rxd1 Rxd1+ 30.Kf2 Bb3 31.Re1 Rd2+ 32.Re2 Diagram # 32...Rxe2+! A tough decision which requires precise calculation. Black is aware of the fact that pawn endings are winning for her and the main question is: how to get rid of both pieces? It turns out that the N on a3, which once dreamed of a glorious future on d5, will be stuck on a3 for the rest of the game. 33.Kxe2 Bc4+! 34.Kd2 Bd3! 35.b3 f5 36.c4 b4 37.Nc2 Bxc2 38.Kxc2 g5 39.g3 Kf7 40.Kd2 Ke6 41.Ke2 Kd6 42.Kd2 Kc5 43.Ke2 a5 44.Kd2 a4 45.bxa4 Kxc4 46.Kc2 f4 47.gxf4 gxf4 48.exf4 e3 49.f5 b3+

1.Nf3 c5 2.e4 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Nxc6 You can't see me now but I'm wagging my finger in admonition at White, in preparation for a "you-should-know-better" sermon. We arrive at our third, completely illogical theoretical sidestep. White chops on c6, automatically giving Black potential central control, as well as an open b-file. 6...bxc6 Principle: Pawn capture toward the centre.

[If you are a connoisseur of boredom, like me and GM Ulf Andersson, then opt for the dull, technical ending with 6...dxc6!? 7.Qxd8+ Kxd8 . This position, a powerful sedative, is equal and perfect for those who love instant endings. ]

7.Bg5

[Others: -- a) 7.Bc4 Bb4 8.0-0 0-0 ( 8...Bxc3 9.bxc3 Nxe4 10.Qg4 0-0 11.Qxe4 d5 12.Qxe5 Re8 13.Qg3 dxc4 is equal ) 9.Bg5 h6 10.Bh4 d6 11.Qe2 Qe7 12.a3 (this is a waste of time since Black plans to chop the knight anyway) ( 12.Rfd1 is more useful but even there, after Bxc3 13.bxc3 g5 14.Bg3 , I slightly prefer Black ) 12...Bxc3 13.bxc3 Be6 14.Bd3 g5 15.Bg3 and I prefer Black's structure to White's not-so-scary bishops, R.Sherf-N.Birnboim, Netanya 1987. ]

[b) 7.Bd3 doesn't try to halt ...d7-d5 and instead reinforces e4. After Bb4 8.Bd2 0-0 9.0-0 d5 10.Nxd5 Nxd5 11.exd5 Bxd2 12.Qxd2 cxd5 , Black stands slightly better due to the better centre, S.Mielke-K.Venske, German League 2005. ]

7...Rb8 Black immediately utilizes the open file. 8.Rb1 Qa5 Creating threats of ... Rxb2, followed by ...Qxc3+ and then ...Qxb2 and ...Nxe4, exploiting the pin on the c3-knight.

[Alternatively, 8...Bb4 9.Bd3 h6 10.Bd2 ( after 10.Bh4 d6 11.0-0 g5 12.Bg3 Bxc3 13.bxc3 Be6 I prefer Black ) 10...0-0 11.0-0 d5 also looks better for Black, again due to the greater central influence, J.Soriano Folch-L.Gomez Jurado, Mislata 2005. ]

9.Bd2 Qc7 10.Bd3 Be7

[There is nothing wrong with the immediate 10...d5 . ]

11.0-0 0-0 12.f4

[This a slight improvement on 12.Bc4? , M.Kocic-J.Kosa, Subotica 2007, when Black stands clearly better after Rd8 . However, pushing the f-pawn is not that great either, since after Black's reply neither f4xe5 nor f4-f5 has any potency. White is better off going passive. ]

12...Bd6! With the strategic threat of ...e5xf4. This artificial yet strong move induces White into clogging with f4-f5, allowing Black a coming pawn break on d5.

[Black has another decent option in 12...exf4! (principle: counter in the centre when attacked on the wing) 13.Bxf4 Bd6 14.Bxd6 Qxd6 15.Qe2 Re8 and Black controls e5, which greatly reduces White's attacking options. ]

[ After 13.Qf3 exf4 14.Bxf4 Bxf4 15.Qxf4 d6! 16.Qh4 Qb6+ 17.Kh1 Qd4! Black disallows both exchange sacrifices on f6 and also e4-e5 pushes. ]

13...Be7 Clearing the way for ...d6-d5. 14.g4!? Why are the seven deadly sins so much fun? It was Saint Augustine who prayed: "Make me chaste, oh Lord, but not yet!" --- White, refusing to grieve over his past or fret about the future, decides he will not go down passively, so he launches a kingside pawn storm. The danger of course is future overextension. 14...d5 15.g5 Nxe4 16.Nxe4 dxe4 17.Bxe4 Qd8! A double attack. Black threatens ...Qd4+, followed by ...Qxe4, and also ...Bxg5.

18.Bc3? White presses on with his own agenda but in the wrong way.

[ Others: -- a) 18.f6?? loses material to Qd4+ 19.Rf2 Bc5! . ]

[ b) After 18.Kh1! (principle: surrender is actually a superior path to persistence if you were on the wrong track to begin with) White may hold the draw; e.g. Bxg5 19.Bxg5 Qxg5 20.Qd6 Qh4! 21.Rbe1 Rxb2 22.Qxe5 Qf6 23.Qxf6 gxf6 24.Rg1+ Kh8 25.a3 c5 and Black won't have an easy time converting his extra pawn, which is doubled, isolated and blockaded. In fact every pawn on the board is an isolani! ]

18...Bc5+ 19.Kh1 Qxg5 20.Bxe5?!

[ White should tone down his ambitions and play 20.Qf3 . ]

EXERCISE (combination alert): The players exist in a state of mutual intolerance. Black has access to an amazing combination here. If you mistime the coming sequence by even a split second, it will fail. How should Black continue? 20...Qe7! ANSWER: Step 1: Sacrifice the exchange, after which White's king becomes seriously exposed on the light squares. 21.Bxb8 Qxe4+ 22.Qf3 Bxf5! Step 2: Exploit the pin of White's queen by chopping f5. 23.Rbe1

[ 23.Bg3 Qxf3+ 24.Rxf3 Be4 25.Kg2 Rd8 is a won ending for Black. ]

23...Re8!! Step 3: Zwischenzug/sham queen sacrifice. --- The rook shift to e8 is an act of generosity which is mostly symbolic, since Black immediately regains the investment, plus interest. This move is proof that hard variations function as the element that tests our abstract theory against reality. 24.Rxe4 Bxe4 25.Qxe4 Rxe4 Black has emerged a pawn ahead with the more active pieces. Also, his 3 to 1 majority on the kingside is fast, whereas White experiences almost impossible obstructions to create even a single passed pawn on the queenside. 26.Rd1 f5! A dual-purpose move. -- 1. Black creates luft for his king. -- 2. Principle: Passed pawns should be pushed. 27.Rd8+ Kf7 28.Rd7+ Ke6!?

[ Also strong is the simple, drama-free move 28...Re7 29.Rd2 g5 with a winning position for Black. ]

29.Rd2

[ Not 29.Rxg7?? , which hangs the rook to Re1+ 30.Kg2 Rg1+ . ]

29...f4 30.Kg2 Kf5 31.h3 g5 32.a3 Re3 33.b4 The comp claims this move is a mistake in an already lost position. But is it a mistake if everything else loses?

[ For example, 33.Rd7 Rg3+ 34.Kh2 Bg1+ 35.Kh1 h5 and White's counterplay

33...Rg3+ 34.Kf1 White's king lives at the bottom of a well and is in grave danger, despite the reduced material on the board.
[ 34.Kh2 Bg1+ 35.Kh1 Be3 is also an easy win for Black. ]
34...Be3 35.Rd7 Ke4! Threatening ...Kf3 and ...Rg1 mate. 36.Re7+ Kf3 37.Rxe3+ Black is obviously faster in the promotion race. 37...Kxe3 This is winning;
[ but 37...fxe3! 38.Bxg3 Kxg3 was more efficient, with an easily won king and pawn ending for Black; e.g. 39.c4 Kxh3 40.b5 c5 41.a4 g4 42.a5 g3 43.b6 axb6 44.axb6 g2+ 45.Kg1 e2 46.Kf2 g1Q+ 47.Kxg1 e1Q# . ]
38.Bxa7+ Ke4 39.a4 Rxh3 40.b5 cxb5 41.axb5 Ra3 42.b6 Ra1+ 43.Ke2 f3+ 44.Kf2 Rb1 Oh no you don't. 45.c4 g4 46.c5 Rb2+
[ Black forces mate after 46...Rb2+ 47.Kg3 Rg2+ 48.Kh4 f2 ; e.g. 49.b7 f1Q 50.Bb8 Qf6+ 51.Kh5 Qg6+ 52.Kh4 Qh6# . ]

[ Instead of defending the b4-pawn with 13...a5 , as in the previous game, Black offers it up as a sacrifice. ]
14.Ncxb4!? White calls our bluff and grabs our pawn - except we aren't bluffing! Black gets full compensation, from a lead in development, open lines on the queenside, and domination of the dark squares.
[ The usual move is 14.0-0 , when a5 returns to Zhao Jun-Wei Yi. ]
14...Nxb4 15.Nxb4 Qb6 We attack the white knight and the b2-pawn behind it.
16.Nd5 Negi immediately returns the pawn.
[ QUESTION: Why not keep it with 16.Nd3 - ? --- ANSWER: After Bb7 17.f3 ( or 17.0-0 Bxe4 18.c5 dxc5 19.Nxe5 Qxb2 and White now found himself a pawn down with an inferior position, M. Izbosarov-D.Petukhov, Saratov 2012 ) 17...Rab8 , Black gets huge compensation: -- 1. White's king is stuck in the centre. -- 2. White bleeds on the dark squares. -- 3. Black enjoys open lines on the queenside, where he can apply pressure. -- 4. Black has the only viable break in the position, with a potential ...f7-f5. --- Conclusion: White stands decidedly worse. ]
16...Qxb2 17.0-0 Qa3 18.Rb1!? The word "new" doesn't always equate to "improved". White offers his a2-pawn, but doing so offers him no advantage.
[ In the second tie-break game, Negi had played 18.Bg4 Bb7 19.Qb3 Qxb3 20.axb3 a5 21.Ra2 Bd8 22.Bd7 Rb8 23.Ba4 Bxd5 24.cxd5?! ( 24.exd5

(presumably the clock told here as White's defences fall apart) Bd8 50.Rd6? Rc2+ 51.Kg1 c4 and Black's passed pawns soon netted the white bishop, P. Negi-Y.Kryvoruchko, FIDE World Cup, Tromsø (2nd rapid tie-break game) 2013. ]

[ The only other game in my database saw instead 18.Qb3 Qc5 19.Rab1 Be6 20.Rfd1 g6 21.Qb6 , J.Kreutz-J.Kainz, correspondence 2011, when Black looks just fine after Bd8 22.Qxc5 dxc5 23.Rb3 Kg7 24.Rdb1 h5 25.Bd1 Ra7 , as I don't see a way for White to make progress; for example, 26.Rb7 Rxb7 27.Rxb7 Ba5 28.Ra7 Rb8 29.Bb3 Bc8 30.Re7 Bd8 31.Ra7 a5 . ]

18...Qc5?! Prices begin to fall if nobody buys the product. When we have before us a dreary task (such as lengthy defence for one measly pawn), it's human nature to invent excuses on how now is not the right time to start the necessary work. Here declination isn't a wand Black can wave to make his problems magically vanish.

[ Komodo's preference is to accept with 18...Qxa2! , indicating that Black is disposed to allow White control over the initiative, as long as he is provided reasonable with remuneration. For example, 19.Bg4 Bd8 20.Bxc8 Rxc8 21.Ne3 Qa3 22.Qg4 ( or 22.Ra1 Qc5 23.Rxa6 Bg5 ) 22...Rc6 23.Rb8 Rb6 24.Ra8 Qc5 (White has no more than sufficient compensation for the pawn) 25.Nd5 Rb7 26.Rc8 f5! 27.Qxf5 Rxf5 28.Rxc5 Bb6 29.Rc8+ Rf8 30.Nxb6 Rxb6 31.c5 Rb5 32.Rxf8+ Kxf8 33.cxd6 Ke8 and the ending should be drawn. ]

19.Bg4! Be6?! This loses a pawn.

[ Black had to play 19...Bd8! 20.Bxc8 Rxc8 21.Rb3 g6 ( 21...Qxc4?? loses material to 22.Rc3 ) 22.Rc3 f5 23.Qb1 fxe4 24.Qxe4 Rf7 . We get used to old aches, so that we forget them in our long-entrenched familiarity. The Sveshnikov sometimes comes with an unpleasant aftertaste for our side, since we must occasionally defend a good white knight vs. our so-so bishop position. Having said that, I think Black should still be okay here with careful play. ]

20.Bxe6! fxe6 21.Nb6 Ra7 Covering the d7-fork square. Defending a difficult position is a little like waiting it out for a terrible storm to subside. --- EXERCISE (combination alert): White has a simple move which wins a pawn. How? --- ANSWER: Double attack on the bishop and e6-pawn. 22.Qg4! "Why does God allow bad things to happen to good people?" asks the bishop. All he gets from White's queen is the stock answer about God's mysterious ways. 22...Rb7 23.Qxe6+?! When we are in love with our position, it's easy to be blind to its faults. Taking on e6 is based on the thought that the perfect moment to engage is when the opponent is at their most demoralized. Unfortunately, Negi's move has the effect of stunting his initiative. White does win the pawn, yet mistimed it, underestimating Black's counterplay.

[ Correct was 23.Qxg5! Rxb6 24.Rxb6 Qxb6 25.Qe7 h6 26.Qxe6+ , when White is a pawn up with some chances to win, though it won't be easy since he nurses two isolanis and, for now, is tied down to defence of f2. ]

23...Kh8 24.Qd5??

[ Perhaps Negi intended 24.Nd7?? , only now spotting the crushing retort Qxf2+! 25.Rxf2 Rxb1+ 26.Rf1 Rfxf1# , and in shock played something almost as bad. ]

[ He had to try 24.h4! (a key tempo-gaining pawn sacrifice, which creates desperately needed luft for his king) Bxh4 and only then 25.Nd7! Rxb1 26.Nxc5 Bxf2+ 27.Kh2 Rxf1 28.Nd7 , followed by 29 Qxd6, when all we get from this position is possibilities, rather than certainties. I think White stands no worse in this version, since his queen and knight conspire to push forward the passed c-pawn, and possibly a passed a-pawn as well. ]

The correct plan fades from White's mind, the way the face of an outdoor town statue blurs from centuries of exposure to the elements. --- EXERCISE (combination alert): A disquieting tremor of unease runs though White's position. His last move was a huge blunder. How did Black exploit it? --- ANSWER: Pin. White loses a piece.

24...Rfb8! Black's queen beckons her f8-henchman with a jerk of her head. When we escape, turning a possible loss into a certain win, the feeling of relief mimics vertigo. The portents are easy to interpret: White loses a piece for no compensation.

[ Most certainly not 24...Rxb6?? 25.Qxc5 Rxb1 26.Qxd6 with a winning position for White. ]

25.h4 Bxh4 26.g3 Bf6 . --- SUMMARY: Black can safely offer the b-pawn with 13... Bg5. If White accepts and insists on trying to keep it, we obtain excellent compensation.

16...Qxe7 17.0-0 d5 18.Bf5 Bxf5 19.Qxf5= 0-0 20.Nc2 Æ The position is about equal, I think, but my computer prefers black. I like white's pressure on the center pawns by the rooks. The knight is no way inferior to the bishop, and heading toward the kingside. 20...d4!? This leads to an islolated pawn game that 10 year old Ruifeng exploits like an experienced grandmaster - except for a slipup on move 33. [QUESTION: Can Black play 13...Nd7 , waiting for Be3, and only then ...Bg5 to try and gain a tempo? --- ANSWER: The trouble (or at least difference) is that White has the option of Bf2, after we play ...Bg5, which dodges the swap. 16.b4 White begins his quest to achieve the c4-c5 break. 16...a5!? QUESTION: Isn't it a strategic error for Black to hand his opponent control over b5, as well as a violation of the principle: "don't create confrontation on your opponent's strong wing?" --- ANSWER: This isn't the fool's errand which outer appearances may suggest. The move is okay; and as we saw in the previous game (and in Kasimdzhanov-Carlsen above), Black isn't so concerned about giving up the b5-square if he gains something else in return, such as smooth development here: Black's bishop will cover b5 from d7, while his knight develops to a6.

[ But if ...a6-a5 bothers you, then go for the more conservative set-up 16...Nd7 17.Qe3 b6 with a decent middlegame. ] counter-sacrifice, which goes after Black's underbelly points of b7 and d6.

24...Bxb5!? Krasenkow takes a safer more technical route. --- QUESTION: Why didn't he accept the offered piece? --- ANSWER: Chess isn't a shared perception. Our own stylistic quirks ensure that we all interpret a single position in multiple ways. In essence, the second factor (clarity) supersedes the first (material). Positional players tend to follow the bottom line as their guiding principle. Many reject risky material grabs, no matter how tempting the promise, if our main point is at risk. In this instance, Krasenkow goes for a line where he gets good knight vs. bad bishop, and a draw as the worst case, rather than enter the I-don't-know-where-I'm-going regions of the piece grab.
[For those who prefer to take the material, the comps declare acceptance as sound; for example, 24...gxh5! 25.Nxd6 f4! 26.Nxb7 *(*not 26.Qxb7?? f3! 27.gxf3 Bh3 and mates ) 26...Nxb4 27.h3 Qc3 , when I slightly prefer Black's chances and feel he has a draw at a minimum, since White must watch out for ...f4-f3 prying ideas. ]
[ 24...Qxb4 25.Qxd6 Bxb5 26.Qe6+ Rf7 27.Bxg6! forces a draw. ]
25.cxb5
[Not 25.Qxb5?? , which fails miserably after gxh5 26.Qxb7 Qd4+ 27.Kh1 Qxc4 . ]
25...Qxb4 26.Be2
[And here 26.Qxb7?? Nc5 leaves White's queen and bishop simultaneously en prise. ]
26...Nc5 EXERCISE (critical decision): White must now choose between 27 Qxd6 and 27 exf5. Only one line keeps him even. Which would you play? 27.Qxd6? The first mistake, in an otherwise well-played game, is as aesthetically jarring as finding a pimple on an artist's otherwise breathtakingly beautiful model. Chess is a game as cruelly unjust, as often as it's fair. We can collect available data and yet still come to an incorrect conclusion if we give too much or too little weight to the points germane to our goal - which in this case should be to expose Black's king as much as possible. White suffers a false perception, underestimating the dangers to his own king.
[ANSWER: He remains even after the correct 27.exf5! Qd2 28.fxg6! Rxf1+ *(*not 28...Qxe2?? 29.gxh7+ Kg7 30.Qc7+ Kg6 31.Qxd6+ and wins ) 29.Bxf1 Qd4+ 30.Kh1 Qf2 (scary stuff, but once again White has sufficient resources to draw) 31.Qd8+ Kg7 32.Qe7+ Kxg6 33.Qxd6+ Kf7 *(*not 33...Kh5?? 34.Qe5+ Kg6 35.Bc4! and suddenly Black is busted ) 34.Qc7+ with perpetual check. ]
27...Qd4+ 28.Kh1 Nxe4 Demand outstrips supply in White's camp, since he is in dire need of defenders. Black's queen and knight team are very threatening against White's now weakened king. 29.Qe6+ Kg7 30.g3 Rf6 31.Qe7+ Rf7 32.Qe6? This second mistake is fatal.
[White had to scurry back with 32.Qa3 and try and hold the position a pawn down after Qxd5 33.Qb2+ Kh6 34.Bf3 . ] EXERCISE (combination alert): I assure you that we don't have to calculate the square root of pi to solve this. Find one curtain closing move and White's position collapses. --- ANSWER: Clearance/ mating net. 32...Ng5! Black's pieces are the hungry cannibals, preparing to roast the juicily corpulent h1-missionary.

[ 32...Ng5 33.Qd6 ( 33.Qe8 Qxd5+ is the same ) 33...Qe4+ picks up the bishop, unless White prefers 34.Kg1 ("Order my death, and the life of an innocent will be on your hands," reasons White's king; "Eeh," shrugs his sister, who doesn't appear too worried about the moral dilemma) Nh3# . --- SUMMARY: We generally meet White's f2-f3 plan with an early ...Bg5, swapping away White's good bishop. ]

Tournaments tend to be infested with gifted kids, such as Kyron Griffith, who was still a mid-teen in those days. Today, Kyron's rating is close to 2500 and he has IM norms, so I'm glad I played him when he was still a kid! --- 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 Bc5 7.Nd6+ Ke7 Can you find a single vice which is missing from Black's position? White's knight has been allowed into the taboo d6-square, and now Black loses castling privileges. 8.Nf5+ Kf8 9.Be3 Bb4 10.Qf3? White's mistake is due mainly to having never seen this variation before. So another strong player gets befuddled by the 6...Bc5 line and plays the same move Bruce Baker played in the first game of this chapter. Amazing. 10...d5! Although this is a lazy slap, more than an actual blow, the move is still strong and it is White who fights from a position of inferiority from here on. 11.exd5 Qxd5 12.Nh4? When we enter a sharp opening line without knowing it well - and I promise you that not a single one of your opponents will know this line well - we awaken a monster. We may kill the enemy but, far more likely, we may get killed. Kyron is worried about entering an ending where Black can inflict a split kingside with ...Qxf3, so he completely misplaces his f5-knight and lands in even greater problems.

[ As mentioned previously, 12.Ng3 is the only move. ]

12...Bg4?! Lacking a killer instinct.

[ White is flat out losing if Black had kept queens on and played 12...Qa5! 13.Bd2 Bg4 14.Qg3 Rd8 15.f3 Rxd2! (I actually saw this line but grossly underestimated Black's attack) 16.Kxd2 Be6 17.Bd3 Nd5 18.Rab1 f6 19.Rhc1 Bxc3+ 20.bxc3 Nxc3 and White can resign. ]

13.Qxd5 Nevertheless, this ending is also in Black's favour as White's queenside pawns are about to get smashed. 13...Nxd5 14.Bd2 Nxc3 15.bxc3 Bc5

22...Ne7! Threatening 23...Nd5 with a double attack on e3 and c3. 23.Ree1 Nd5 24.c4 Nf4 25.a5 White is desperate to dissolve his weak queenside pawns, even at the cost of one of them. 25...Nxd3 26.cxd3 bxa5 27.Rb7+ Rd7 28.Rxd7+ Bxd7 Not only is Black an outside passed pawn ahead, his bishop is also clearly superior to White's remaining knight. 29.Ra1

34...Bxb7 35.Ne1 a3 36.f3 g5! Black fixes the white pawns on the same colour squares as his bishop, making them more vulnerable. 37.h3 a2 38.Nc2 h5 39.Kd2 h4! Same principle. White is vulnerable to a king invasion via e6, f5, f4 and g3. 40.Kc3 EXERCISE (combination alert): Low on the clock (as usual), I missed an immediate win for Black. 40...f5 Still winning.

[ANSWER: Even stronger is 40...g4! with a brute force breakthrough. I saw this move as well but incorrectly rejected it. After 41.fxg4 ( 41.hxg4 Bxf3! wins since the h-pawn will promote ) 41...Bxg2 42.Kb2 Bxh3 43.Ne3 Black has the trick Bg2! and wins, which I missed in my analysis. ]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 This move sends the game into Grand Prix Attack territory. 3...cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3!? Natural attackers are a tribe who draw their sense of identity through an entrenched belief in the philosophy: no reverse gear. There is no known way to ward off opponents' belligerence. If they want to pick a fight, there is little choice for us but to fight back. I think this move is probably White's worst line of the chapter, since he is the one fighting for equality in most of the variations. The bishop walks straight into a tempo loss after Black plays ...e6 and ...d5. QUESTION: What is White hoping for by posting his bishop on c4? ANSWER: White hopes to generate an attack down the f-file, focusing on an f5 break, in conjunction with 0-0. Also, in some lines White hopes to transfer his queen to h4, play f5 (even as a pawn sacrifice), and then follow with Bh6, or Bg5, with an attack. These kind of attacks often succeeded in the pre-comp era. The trouble is today the lines have been worked out to the point where White fights for equality. 5...e5 Black's most logical follow-up, intending to gain time with ...Nge7 and ...d5. 6.Ndb5 d6 Seizing control over both key f5 and d5-squares. 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 I think this is Black's best line, ensuring the gain of the bishop pair, and I already prefer his position. 10.Bxf6 Threatening the dirty discovery trick Nxd5!. 10...Bxf6 He keeps White worrying about a possible .. .c4 break. 11.c3 0-0! A new move. What at first sight seems a superficial divergence from the position's essence is in reality the start of a cunning plan: Black prevents Nb5, while preparing ...Nec6!, which renews the ... c4 threat. 12.Nc2 The knight logically heads to the kingside, while White's d2-bishop gets a bead on Black's a5-knight. 12...Bb7! Threat ...c4. 13.Be2 The facts come to light: Aldama concedes both bishops;

Is there such a thing as an error-free game, where one side - or even both sides - play perfectly? Correspondence games come the closest, since there is plenty of time for each move and we are allowed a sidekick 3000+ rated computer, running day and night. --- 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 0-0 12.Nc2 Bg5 13.a4 bxa4 14.Rxa4 a5 15.Bc4 Rb8 16.b3 Kh8 17.Nce3 g6 18.0-0 Sometimes White is just not interested and wants to play it safe against the Sveshnikov. Here White decides against crazy h2-h4 sacrifices. He just castles and hopes to make use of the d5-square and Black's potentially weak d6-pawn. [Another option is 21...f4 22.Nc2 Bd8! , covering a5 and b6. If White's d5-knight ever moves, Black's dark-squared bishop can emerge on b6. The chances are dynamically balanced, S.Glukhovtsev-R. Starke, correspondence 2015. ]

22.Kh1 Bd7 23.Ra2 f4 Black releases the tension and plays directly for mate in King's Indian fashion. But unlike a King's Indian Black's dark-squared bishop is unopposed. For example, it can later try and slip into play via d8. 24.Nc2 Bd8 There are two ideas behind this move: -- 1. The bishop clears the way for a kingside pawn storm with ... g6-g5-g4. -- 2. If White's d5-knight ever finds a spot to relocate then Black's dark-squared bishop can occupy a dangerous diagonal from b6. 25.Na3 g5 26.Nb5 Nobody can claim that Black's d-pawn is an attractive child. Note how White is unable to apply real pressure against d6, which is weak only in name and can be easily defended. As always with the Sveshnikov, Black is willing to sacrifice comfort in the present, by taking on a d5-hole and a backward d-pawn, to secure the welfare of a happy future, based around compensating piece activity. This line has yet to fall into theoretical disrepute and I predict it never will.

[ 32.Qd3 Rg6 33.Kf1? fails to Bxh3 and if the sacrifice is accepted with 34.gxh3?? then g2+ wins. ]

32...Bd7 33.Ra2 Rfg8! 34.Qe2? Our inaccuracies, errors and blunders can never be transcended. They can only be reduced. Even Capablanca and Fischer blundered - just not very much! Outwardly, White's configuration looks healthy, while below lies the inner rot.

34...Bxh3! One cannot accurately describe Black's not-so-difficult-to-see sacrifice as one of unsurpassable beauty, yet nobody can deny its effectiveness. 35.Kf1!

[Acceptance is out of the question. After 35.gxh3?? g2 nothing can be done against the coming ...Qxh3 and ...Qh1+. ]

35...Rg5 36.Qd3 a4! This game is a constantly shifting entity, without even a single permanent element. This unexpected move from the other wing is based on the following ideas: -- 1. If White bypasses with b3-b4 then, weirdly enough, Black gets a passed a-pawn, which appears to be meaningless. Yet White simply doesn't have time to take it. This passed a-pawn won Black the game later on. 37.Ke1?!

38.b4 EXERCISE (critical decision): How should Black continue? 38...Bxg2!
ANSWER: Annihilation of defensive barrier. 39.Rxg2 Rh2! Black's threats clarify.
[ Not 39...Rh1+? 40.Kd2 Qh3 41.Qe2 and White survives. ]
40.Qc2 The only move.
[ a) 40.Qe2?? is met by Qh3! 41.Rd2 Rh1+ , winning the queen. ]
[ b) 40.Qf1?? Rh1 41.Rg1 g2 42.Qf2 Bh4 pins and wins White's queen again. ]
40...Rh1+ 41.Bf1
[ Not 41.Kd2?? Qh3 , which is similar to what occurs in the game. ]
41...Rxf1+! Black's attack rages. 42.Kxf1 Qh1+ 43.Rg1 Qxf3+ 44.Ke1 Qh5 Black's deeply passed f- and g-pawns are worth more than White's rook. 45.Kd2 White's king continues to run, as if in an opiate-induced haze. 45...f3 It isn't so difficult for Black to pilot his f- and g-pawns up the board. 46.Kd3 f2 47.Qe2 White has no choice but to hand over a full rook.
[ 47.Rgf1 Qf3+ 48.Ne3 d5! 49.exd5 e4+ 50.Kd2 Bg5 is game over. ]
47...Qxe2+ 48.Kxe2 fxg1Q 49.Rxg1 h5 Black's simple plan is to push his passed pawns.
[ Nevertheless, 49...Ne7! is more accurate, and if 50.Nxd6? then Nxd5 51.exd5 Bb6 52.Rg2 a3! wins. ]
50.Nxd6 h4 51.Kf3 Ne7! 52.Nxe7 Bxe7 53.Nf5 Bd8 54.c4 EXERCISE (combination alert): White's passed pawns are too slow. Prove why. 54...g2!
ANSWER: Sacrifice the g-pawn, after which Black's a-pawn is too fast.
[ Whereas 54...h3?? allows 55.Rh1! and it is Black who is busted. ]
55.Rxg2 A slow, lingering death is a mournful process. There is no choice, since ... h4-h3 can't be allowed. 55...Rxg2 56.Kxg2 Be7!
[ 56...a3 also wins; e.g. 57.Ne3 a2 58.Nc2 Bg5 59.b5 Be3! etc. ]
57.Kh3
[ Or: -- a) 57.Nxe7 a3 and the passed pawn slips outside the knight's reach. ]
[ b) 57.c5 a3 58.Ne3 a2 59.Nc2 Kg7 60.Kh3 Kg6 61.Kg4 Kf7 62.Kh3 Ke6 63.Kg4 Kd7 64.Kh3 Kc6 65.Kg4 Kb5 66.Kh3 Kc4 67.c6 Bd8 68.Kg4 Kc3 wins. ]
57...Bxb4 58.Ne3 a3
[ After 58...a3 59.Nc2 a2 60.Kxh4 Kg7 61.Kg5 Bc3 62.c5 Kf7 63.c6 Ke6 White's passed pawn isn't going anywhere, while Black's will promote, costing White his knight. ]

[ Ivanchuk in fact played 5...e6 here, only transposing to our standard position after 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bf4 e5 8.Bg5 . ]
6.Ndb5 d6 0-1 (82) Caruana,F-Ivanchuk,V Reggio Emilia 2011 Sicilian Sveshnikov MBM [Cyrus Lakdawala] 7.Bg5 . Cyrus Lakdawala: '.' 7...a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.g3 GM Kotronias says this line fails to create trouble for our side. White prepares to fianchetto, but unlike in Short-Kramnik, he does it without the preparatory moves e4xf5 and c2-c3. 11...fxe4
[ Naturally, 11...Bg7 is possible, but I think it's a good idea to take the pawn. --- QUESTION: Why? Don't we waste time compared with lines where White takes on f5? --- ANSWER: Just the opposite. White has to expend a move himself to recapture on e4 - and then with a white piece on e4, we gain a move with a future ...d6-d5 or ...f7-f5 push (see the notes to Black's 15th and 17th moves below). ]
12.Bg2 Bg7
[ Or 12...Be6 13.Bxe4 Bg7 , which comes to same thing. ]
[ 12...Bf5 is also playable; for example, 13.0-0 Bg7 14.Re1 0-0 15.c3 Ne7! 16.Nc2 , M.Adams-L.Van Wely, Tilburg 1998, and now Nxd5 17.Qxd5 Be6 18.Qxe4 d5 looks fine for Black. All the same, I prefer the bishop on e6, where it fights for control over d5 and doesn't obstruct Black's ... f7-f5 push. ]
[ Note that the idiotically greedy 12...f5?? would send us home early after 13.Qh5+ Kd7 14.Qxf5+ Ke8 15.Qh5+ Kd7 16.Bh3# . ]
13.Bxe4 Be6 , which comes to same thing. 14.0-0
[ White has a few alternatives here, which we should look at: -- a) 14.Nf6+?! Bxf6 15.Bxc6+ Ke7 16.Bxa8? Qxa8 is far too greedy. Black gets excellent play for the exchange after 17.f3 ( or 17.Rg1 e4 18.c3 b4 , and if 19.cxb4 Bxb2 20.Rb1 then Bc3+! 21.Kf1 Bh3+ ) 17...e4 18.c3 b4 19.Nb1 Qa7! , followed by ...Rb8 with a crushing initiative, P.Spierenburg-J.Vermeulen, correspondence 2013. ]

[b) 14.Qd3?! fails in its purpose of preventing 0-0! , since 15.Bxh7+ *(*or if 15.g4 then Qh4! with advantage ) 15...Kh8 already sees White in trouble due to the threat of ...f7-f5. ]

[c) 14.Qh5 is most often played, which obviously does prevent castling, so we commence "Operation Confront d5" instead: Rc8 15.Rd1 *(*or similarly 15.0-0 Ne7 16.Rad1 Rc5 ) 15...Ne7! 16.c3 Rc5 17.Nb4 *(*both 17.Ne3 d5; and 17.Nxe7 Qxe7 18.Nc2 d5 19.Bf5 d4 look fine for Black ) 17...Qb6 18.Qg5 Kf8 19.Qe3 h5!? (turning a problem into a virtue) ( 19...f5 20.Bg2 e4 is possible too ) 20.0-0 h4 , when the tricky 21.Nxa6!? is met by Bh6! *(*not 21...Qxa6?? 22.Qxc5 dxc5 23.Rd8# ) 22.Rxd6! Qxd6 23.Qxc5 Qxa6 24.Nxb5 Bg7 and Black is not worse, V.Savon-B.Podlesnik, Bled 1991. ]

14...0-0 15.c3 f5 And there is our tempo gain. Black achieves full equality. 16.Bg2

[QUESTION: Can White pull a trick with 16.Nf4 - ? --- ANSWER: The discovery doesn't bother us in the least: exf4 17.Bxc6 fxg3 18.hxg3 ( 18.Bxa8?! is again too greedy: after gxh2+ 19.Kh1 Qxa8+ 20.f3 Be5 21.Nc2 Kh8 22.Nd4 Bd5 , Black gets two pawns for the exchange and pressure against the white king ) 18...Ra7 19.Bd5 Bf7 (Black is now ready for ...f5-f4, which pretty much forces White's response) 20.f4 b4 21.Nc4 bxc3 22.bxc3 Bxc3 23.Rb1 and White may have some compensation for the pawn, but I would still rather take Black's side. ]

16...Rb8 Preparing our traditional ...a6-a5 and ...b5-b4 counterplay. 17.Nc2 a5 The eagle-eyed reader will notice that we have now reached the same position as in Short-Kramnik, but with the extra move ...f7-f5 for our side. 18.a3 White suppresses the ...b5-b4 break, at least for the time being.

[Whereas 18.Qd2 Qd7 19.f4 fails in that regard, as Black can just play b4! 20.cxb4?! ( 20.Rad1 e4 21.Nce3 bxc3 22.bxc3 looks at least even for Black, whose dark square power begins to assert itself ) 20...e4 21.Kh1 axb4 *(*or 21...Nxb4 22.Ncxb4 axb4 intending ...Rb5 next ) 22.Ncxb4 Nxb4 23.Nxb4 d5 , when he already stands clearly better, A.Neverov-O.Gladyszev, Russian Team Championship 2008. ]

18...Kh8 19.Qe2

[In the only other games to reach this position, White tried 19.Qd2 (this idea of doubling on the d-file and pressure d6 isn't all that effective either) e4 *(*more aggressive than 19...Ne7 here; instead we transfer the knight to e5 ) 20.Rad1 Ne5 21.f4? (too hasty) ( 21.Nce3 Qg5 22.f4 was more like it; e.g. exf3 23.Bxf3 f4 24.Ng2 Bg4 25.Bxg4 Qxg4 26.Ngxf4 Nf3+ 27.Rxf3 Qxf3 28.Ne6 and White has compensation for the exchange ) 21...Nd3 22.Nce3 Qc8 23.g4? Qb7 24.c4 (otherwise the d5-knight has nowhere to go) bxc4 25.Nc3 d5 26.gxf5 Bg8 and White could have resigned here, A.Raetsky-P.Kukula, European Rapid Championship, Wroclaw 2014. ]

19...Qd7 The black queen watches over her c6-knight and d6-pawn. 20.Rad1 e4 QUESTION: I realize that ...e5-e4 is our main source of counterplay in such structures, but it's a psychologically difficult move for me to make, since I give White outposts on d4, e3 and f4. When do I play it and when do I hold back? --- ANSWER:

Once again you ask an impossible-to-answer question! Playing ...e5-e4 (much like the choice between ...Ne7 and ...Ne5) alters from position to position. From my experience, I have rarely gotten in trouble by playing ...e5-e4. It's simply a case of giving something to get something in return. It's much better to go for ... e5-e4, even if you overextend in the end, rather than simply wait and respond to whatever White does. 21.f3 Caruana immediately challenges the e4-point.

[ 21.Nce3 allows b4! 22.axb4 axb4 with good queenside counterplay for Black. ]

21...Nd4! Interference. Ivanchuk exploits the geometry of the white queen and rook being lined up on the f1-a6 diagonal. 22.Nxd4 Bxd5 23.Qd2 Caruana deems his opponent's provocation insufficient reason to be drawn into open conflict before he is ready for it.

[ He sensibly declines to enter the line 23.fxe4? Bc4 24.Qd2 Bxf1 25.Rxf1 fxe4 26.Bxe4 Qg4 , when I don't believe in White's compensation for the exchange. ]

23...b4 Now the thematic advance comes after all, undermining White's queenside pawns. 24.axb4 axb4 25.fxe4 bxc3 26.bxc3 fxe4 27.Rxf8+ Rxf8 28.Qe3

[ The attempt to win material with 28.Ne2?! is a bad idea, in view of Bc4! 29.Bxe4? Qe7 30.Bd3 Qa7+! 31.Nd4 Bxd4+ 32.cxd4 Qxd4+ 33.Kg2 Bd5+ 34.Kh3 Rf2 and Black wins. ]

28...Qe7 29.Bh3 Qe5 Black stands a shade better with the bishop pair in an open position and a passed e-pawn, but the simplified nature of the game leaves us to believe that White should hold the draw. 30.Re1 Rf6 31.Bg2 Rf7 32.Rb1

[ Of course e4 isn't really hanging: 32.Bxe4?? Re7 wins material. ]

32...Bb7 33.Ne2 d5 34.Rb6 Qc7 35.Rb1 Be5 36.Nd4 Ba6 37.Bf1 Principle: "When your opponent has the bishop pair, work to eliminate one of them". 37...Bc4!? 38.Bxc4 Qxc4 The removal of the opposing bishop pair hasn't allowed White to fully equalize, since Ivanchuk's remaining bishop remains superior to Caruana's knight. But again, White should still hold the game. 39.Ne6 Qa6 40.Nd4

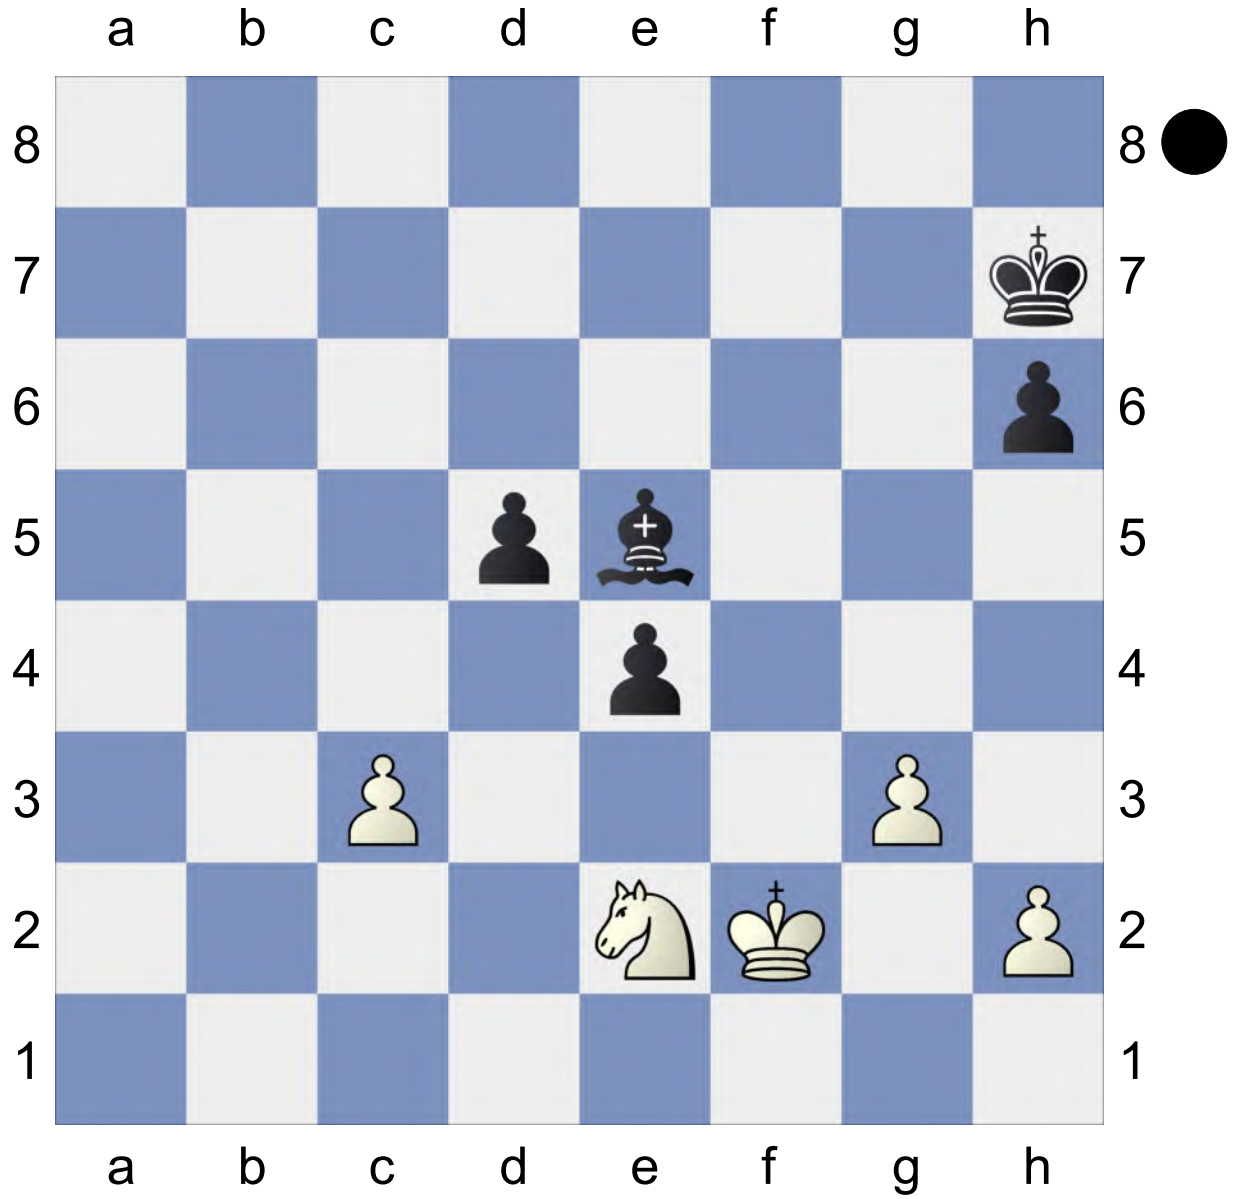
[ The queen remains on the f1-a6 diagonal, hoping for something like 40.Rb6?? , when she can deliver mate with Qf1# . ]

40...h6 41.Ne2 Kh7 42.Rf1 This wasn't necessary, but the coming swaps don't hurt White either. 42...Rxf1+ 43.Kxf1 Qa1+ 44.Kg2 Qe1 45.Qf2 Qxf2+ 46.Kxf2 The game has turned into a bishop vs. knight battle. Black still stands better, but his advantage is so small that White's chances to draw feel far higher than Black's are to win. Nevertheless, Ivanchuk isn't going to give up just yet. Now the players tack about for nearly the next 30 moves! Alex Baburin (www.chesstoday.net): 'Diagram

(Diagram)

Black is better, of course, but it's unlikely that he should be winning here. After some manoeuvring Ivanchuk weakened White's position:' 46...Kg6 47.Ke3 Kf5 48.h3 Bf6 49.Nd4+ Ke5

[ Black fails to win the king and pawn ending after 49...Bxd4+ 50.Kxd4 h5 51.Ke3 ; for example, , we're back in the drawn position from the previous note. Kg5 52.g4



hxg4 53.hxg4 Kxg4 54.c4 dxc4 55.Kxe4 with a draw. ]

50.Kd2 Bg5+ 51.Ke2 Bc1 52.Nb5 Ke6 53.Nd4+ Kf6 54.Nb5 Ke5 55.Nd4 Ba3 56.Nc2 Bc5 57.Ne3 Ke6

[ Or if 57...Bxe3 58.Kxe3 Kf5 59.Kd4 h5 60.Ke3 , we're back in the drawn position from the previous note. ]

58.Ng4 Bf8 59.Ne3 Bg7 Some initiatives are so slight (as in this case) that they produce a synthetic bliss, which wears off when you finally realize that you may stand better, but you probably won't win. 60.Kd2 Be5 61.g4!? Black finally extracts a concession, allowing his king potential entry via the kingside dark squares, which forces White on to wobblier footing.

[ Caruana should still draw, but it might have been simpler to leave the pawn alone and just defend it with 61.Nf1! (the knight is forced to dance attendance to his g-pawn, but only temporarily); if Black tries h5 then 62.g4! hxg4 63.hxg4 reduces material. I played White against Komodo here and held the draw rather easily. ]

61...Bf4 62.Ke2 Bg5 63.Nf5 Ke5 64.Ne3 Kd6 65.Nf5+ Kc5 QUESTION: Errm, what about the kingside dark squares you mentioned? --- ANSWER: Quite. If you like you can skip on to move 73. 66.Ne3 Bf4 67.Ng2 Bc7 68.Ne3 Ba5 69.Nd1 The defence is a self-maintaining organism, which refuses to deteriorate. After Ivanchuk's circular effort, he ends exactly where he began: without a path for progress.

[ Certainly not 69.Kd2?? d4 70.Nd1 dxc3+ 71.Kc2 Kd4 72.h4 e3 73.Nxe3 Kxe3 74.g5 Bd8 75.Kxc3 ( or 75.gxh6 Bf6 ) 75...h5! and Black wins. ]

[ 69...Kc4 is no more than a parody of productivity: 70.Ne3+ sends Black's king back to c5, since Kxc3 71.Nxd5+ is hopelessly drawn. ]

70.Ke3 Ke5 71.Ke2 Ke6 La, la la, la la... Oh, sorry. I got hypnotized by the endlessly uniform landscape and began to drift off there. Come on people, get one with it, you are boring my readers! 72.Ke3 Bb6+ 73.Ke2 Kf6 Ivanchuk, like a skilled martial artist, darts in and out in asymmetrical angles, which are hard to counter. But try as he may, he is unable to pierce his opponent's defences - until Caruana's next move. Alex Baburin (www.chesstoday.net): 'Diagram

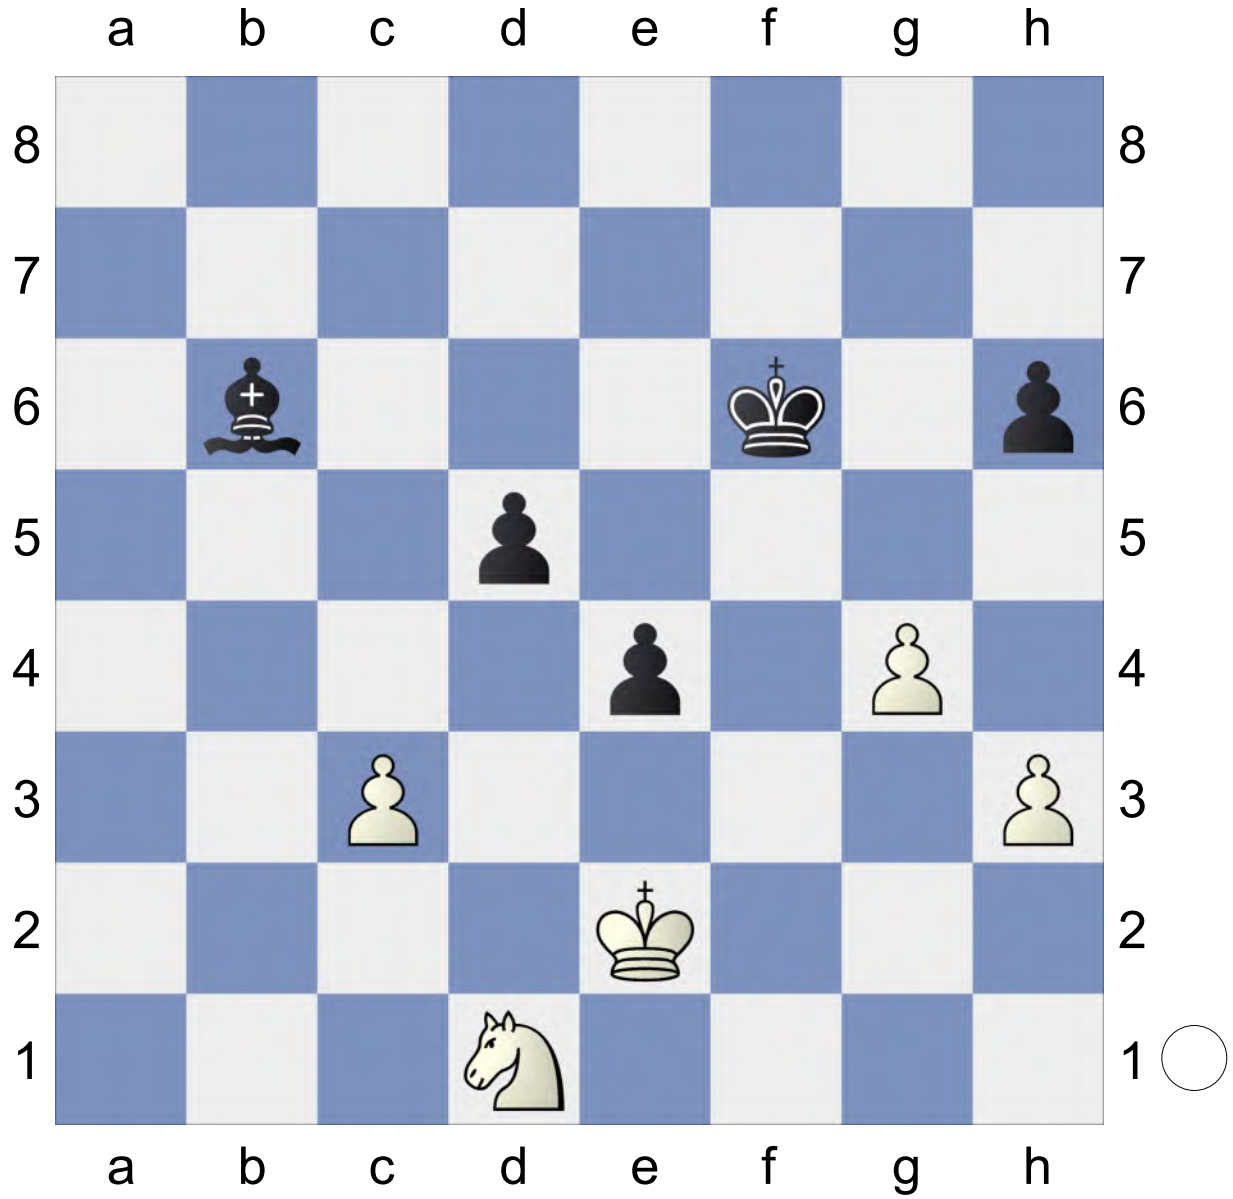
(Diagram)

' 74.Ne3?? The knight enters the stage to take on a part he never rehearsed. How frustrating when our eyes refuse to focus. No matter how brilliant the player, our vaunted human intelligence gets notoriously unreliable when faced with a combination of a low clock and fatigue. Your writer's youthful spirit often shakes a defiant fist at time, but my body is unable to evade its icy grip and tires easily over the board. This game proves that even the young and the brilliant are not necessarily immune to this affliction. I have a bad feeling that a tired Caruana allowed himself the luxury of slipping into that dangerous "anything-draws" mode. Alex Baburin (www. chesstoday.net): 'It's hard to explain how a super-GM could make such a trivial mistake... Maybe Caruana was short of time.'

[ White should still hold after Alex Baburin (www.chesstoday. net): 'White had to play' 74.h4! , keeping the black king out of g5. ]

EXERCISE (planning): A terrible mental malfunction plagued White's calculations. How did Ivanchuk force the win? --- ANSWER: Simplification. The king and pawn ending is dead lost for White. 74...Bxe3! The unfortunate knight's life was one with a limited sense of purpose. 75.Kxe3 Kg5 76.Kf2 The king keeps losing his footing, as if walking on oiled ice. This position represents a mandala of pain for Caruana, whose mind must have obsessively returned to his ill-fated decision to allow the pawn ending.

[ All lines are losing now: -- a) Alex Baburin (www.chesstoday.net): 'Or' 76.c4 dxc4 77.Kxe4 Kh4 78.Kd4 Kxh3 79.Kxc4 Kxg4 80.Kd3 Kf3 and Black promotes. ]



[b) 76.Kd4 Kf4 77.Kxd5 e3 isn't even close. ]

76...Kf4 "Think of it as a 'learning' experience," says Black's obnoxious king, as he makes air quotes over the word "learning". There is good reason for despondency after such a long defence. One look at the two kings, and we realize this is a battle between a Viking chieftain and Little Lord Fauntleroy, in one of those Victorian era sailor suits for children.

[ 76...Kh4 77.Kg2 e3 78.Kf3 Kxh3 ]

[Or 78.Kg3 Kd2 and Black promotes his e-pawn. ]

When I am beaten in a game like this, which I should have drawn, I am confronted by a powerful sense of loss, even though my rational mind reminds me that a chess game is a make-believe fight, and that real life is contest enough. --- SUMMARY: 11 g3 should not worry us. We play 11...fxe4, and after White recaptures on e4, we can look forward to gaining a tempo with a future ...d6-d5 or ...f7-f5 push. This may have been a general crisis of confidence in the English Opening as it coincided with the period mentioned in the conclusion to the 11th chapter. The cure was the same as in that case: perseverance and optimism in analysis. Although Black's position looks very solid, white retains a long-term queenside initiative. 23.Rfd1 weakens the c4-square and the c5-pawn. [Cyrus Lakdawala]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 h6 I love the expression of an opponent who has never seen an Ulfie, and thinks that this move is the construct of a deranged architect. 7.Be3 QUESTION: What is the idea behind this move? --- ANSWER: Several ideas: -- 1. Now that g5 has been ruled out, the bishop develops to its next best square, pointing at the black queenside. -- 2. White denies us a true Ulfie position, since Black has nothing better than to play 7...d6. -- 3. White aims for a position similar to the previous chapter, reckoning that Be3 is more useful than Black's ...h7-h6. Now I know some players think the third point significantly favours White. I'm not one of them and, far more importantly, Ulf Andersson isn't either. 7...d6

[Of course not 7...a6? 8.Nd6+ Bxd6 9.Qxd6 Qe7 10.Bc5! , which is just terrible for Black. ]

[I never play 7...Bb4?! either, since 8.a3 Bxc3+ 9.Nxc3 d6 10.f3 ( 10.Qd2 allows Nxe4 11.Nxe4 d5 12.Nc3 d4 13.0-0-0 dxe3 14.Qxe3 Qg5 and Black is only slightly worse ) 10...Be6 , J.Nieto Tornero-J.Buenafe Moya, Valencia 2009, and now 11.Qe2! looks clearly better for White. If Black tries the freeing break d5 12.exd5 Nxd5 13.0-0-0 Qa5 14.Nxd5 Bxd5 , then 15.Qb5 Qxb5 16.Bxb5 gives White a pleasant endgame edge with the bishop pair, since this version is a lot more open than normal Ulfies. ]

8.Nd5 Nxd5 9.exd5 Ne7! QUESTION: In the last chapter you extolled the virtues of ...Nb8, yet here you give ...Ne7 an exclam. Why? --- ANSWER: For the same reason we played 10...Ne7 after 6...d6 7 Be3 a6 8 Na3 b5 9 Nd5 Nxd5 10 exd5 (in the notes to Sadatnajafi-Shariyazdanov), because the e3-bishop is a sitting target for the black knight reaching f5. The difference here is that Black may be obliged to offer the a7-pawn (as we'll see in Salem-Miroshnichenko), but I think that sacrifice is quite promising.

[Whereas 9...Nb8 10.c4 does land Black in an inferior version of the previous chapter, since Be3 is clearly of more value than ...h7-h6; for example, after Be7 *(*or 10...a6 11.Qa4 Nd7 12.c5 ) 11.c5 0-0 12.Rc1 . ]

In ICC blitz games, Ulf Andersson plays 9...Ne7 exclusively, so when the king speaks, his followers must obey! 10.c4 In my tournament experience with this line, both opponents made this natural move, which is inaccurate.

[Next game we look at the critical 10.c3! . ]

[Others: -- a) 11.Bd3?! Nxe3 12.fxe3 Bd7 13.Nc3 Qb6 14.Qd2 Be7 15.0-0 g6! 16.Kh1 0-0 17.Ne4!? f5 18.c5!? dxc5 19.d6 Bf6 20.Bc4+ Kg7 21.Nc3 e4

22.Rad1 Rad8 and White's activity just isn't sufficient compensation, especially as the now firmly blockaded d6-pawn proved to be more of a weakness than a strength, N.Arutyunov-C. Lakdawala, San Diego (rapid) 2014. ]

[b) 11.Bd2 (this sorry retreat appears to be White's best) Be7 12.Bd3 0-0 13.0-0 a6 14.Nc3 Bg5 Black equalized, I.Doukhine-D.Lampe, Pardubice 2005. ]

11...Bd7 Threatening ... a7-a6, as well as ...Nxe3. 12.Bxa7? The correct threat phase hadn't quite worked its way to the level of "fatal" for White - until now. When I saw this move, my reaction of delightful surprise was that of a minimum wage office drone who has just been informed by lawyers that he is the rightful heir to the crown of Luxembourg, a country he had previously never imagined existed. We chess players often get away with minor infractions of the law, but commit them repeatedly and we are going to get caught. This move is made with the thought: a thief's job is to relieve the careless of their valuable assets. White's resources include the first part of the plan, which is to win the pawn, yet lack the crucial qualifications for the other: to extricate his eternally pinned bishop. In this case voluntarily entering a pin to liposuction a measly pawn is suicidal, since Black's intent to try the wayward bishop isn't a matter which can easily be circumvented.

[White had to back down with 12.Qa3 Nxe3 13.Qxe3 Bxb5 14.cxb5 Be7 , when Black has a slight lead in development, the superior opposite-coloured bishop, and the more healthy majority. ]

12...Be7? QUESTION: Why a question mark for a logical developing move? --- ANSWER: It's a wimpy response in a position which requires violent action. When we wait for something to happen - instead of making it happen - the "something" often isn't to our liking.

[Black should continue vigorously 12...Nd4! 13.Bd3 Be7 14.0-0 ( 14.c5 , as in P.Cohen Farias-Li.Lucena, Belem 2009, doesn't help after dxc5 15.d6 Bf6 16.Nc7+ Qxc7 ) 14...Bxb5 15.cxb5 Qd7! and there is no defence to the coming ... b7-b6!, winning a piece. White can try giving up his queen with 16.b3 b6 17.Bxb6 Rxa4 18.bxa4 , but even then he doesn't have enough. ]

13.Qb4! I missed this idea where White's queen slips out of the pin. 13...0-0 14.Be3!? White accepts grave strategic pain with this concession, which craters his dark squares to the stark level of a lunar landscape.

[But Komodo's 14.a4 doesn't solve White's problems either, since he has trouble developing; for example, Bxb5 15.axb5 Qd7 (threatening ...b7-b6 again) 16.Bd3 *(*or 16.Ra3 Nh4 17.Be3 Qf5 ) 16...Nh4 17.0-0 Qg4! *(*even stronger than 17...Nxg2 ) 18.g3 f5 19.f4 ( 19.Bb6? f4 20.Rfd1 Nf3+ 21.Kg2 Ng5 ) 19...e4 20.Bc2 Bf6 (threatening ...Rxa7 and ...Bd4+) 21.Bb6 Rxa1 22.Rxa1 Qe2! 23.gxh4 Qxc2 and White is strategically busted. ]

14...Nxe3 15.fxe3 Qb6 Immediately attempting to milk White's weakened dark squares. 16.Qb3 Bxb5 QUESTION: Why hand White the bishop pair? --- ANSWER: For two reasons: -- 1. The knight is White's only developed piece. -- 2. Black follows the principle: "opposite-coloured bishops favour the attacker". 17.cxb5 One flaw in our position has a creeping way of overlaying another. White must accept a damaged majority, since his queen is required to continue protection of e3. 17...Bg5 18.Kd2? It isn't psychologically easy to reconcile ourselves to a weakness in our camp which can never be cured. Putting the king on d2 is equivalent to driving him out into the wilderness to fend for himself without defenders or resources.

[ He had to go the other way: 18.Kf2 f5 19.Be2 f4 20.Rhf1 fxe3+ 21.Kg1 , when White has survived for the moment. White's last move is an error in a bad position. The preponderance of evidence suggests that his camp is crammed with the ailing and the dead. ]

EXERCISE (planning): After 18 Kd2 Black has two ways to attack the enemy king. He can play 18...f5, utilizing his kingside pawn majority to open things up, or rely solely on his pieces after 18...Rfc8. One line is much stronger than the other. What does your intuition tell you? 18...f5?! Missing the best continuation is like getting your wonderful smelling meal at the restaurant, but not being able to eat it because the infernal waiter won't get around to bringing you your cutlery. In this position Black doesn't require the use of his pawns. His pieces are enough to barge into White's camp.

[ ANSWER: Komodo points out the far stronger alternative 18...Rfc8! , when Black has a crushing attack; for example:

A) 19.a4 Qd4+ 20.Ke2 Bxe3! 21.Rd1 (the bishop can't be touched due to ... Rc2+) Qg4+ 22.Kxe3 Qf4+ 23.Ke2 Rxa4! 24.Ke1 Re4+ 25.Be2 Re3 and White can resign. ( 25...-- );

B) 19.Ke2 Ra4 20.h4 ( 20.Qxa4 Qxe3+ is mate next move ) 20...Rc2+ 21.Kd1 *(*again 21.Qxc2 Qxe3+ 22.Kd1 Rd4+ mates quickly ) 21...Rxb2 22.Qxb2 Qxe3 23.Bc4 (to connect the rooks) Rxc4 24.hxg5 Rd4+ 25.Qxd4 Qxd4+ 26.Ke2 hxg5 and White has no hope in the endgame. ]

19.Ke2 Do you get the feeling that any of White's emaciated pieces could easily land a role as an extra in a production of 'Les Miserables'? In desperation to remove his king from the pin, White plugs up his kingside development.

[ 19.h4 Qd4+ 20.Ke2 Qg4+ 21.Kd2 Bxh4 22.Be2 Qg5 is a better try, though still lost for White. ]

19...Ra4!? "Summon the royal vivisector, " commands Black's queen, as she glances at her worried e2-brother. My dyspeptic attack burps forth. Why oh why do I try and emulate Tal, when I bungle it in 100% of my attempts? This move is fancy, but again not best. Sometimes we make a show of bravado, which in reality conceals our own ignorance of the position's truth.

[ The killjoy comp has to ruin my glory by pointing out that the more mundane 19...f4 is a blockbuster. For example, if White attempts to close lines with 20.e4 ( 20.h4 fails to fxe3! 21.hxg5 Qd4 (threatening ...Rf2+) 22.Qc3 Qg4+ 23.Ke1 Qg3+ 24.Kd1 Rac8 25.Qd3 Rf2 etc ) , then 20...f3+! 21.gxf3 Ra4! (now this is a killer, threatening ...Rxe4+!) 22.Qd3 Rd4 23.Qc3 Rd2+ and it's game over. ]

20.h4 Unpleasant forced moves tend to be made with muttering discontent.

[ Not 20.Qxa4 Qxe3+ (the sight of her brother never brings out the best in Black's queen - which is saying a lot, since her "best" is already rather low on the human empathy scale) 21.Kd1 Qd2# . ]

20...Rxh4 21.Rxh4 Bxh4 22.g3 He will pay any price to develop his bishop.
[ After 22.Rc1 f4 23.Rc4 Qa5 (threatening to slip into e1) 24.Qc3 Qxa2 25.Rc8 Bd8! White's game is hopeless. ]
22...Bxg3 23.Bh3 e4 24.Rf1 g6 25.Rg1 f4 There is no attack for White. 26.Be6+ Kh7 27.Kd1 Bf2 28.Rg2 Bxe3 29.Qc2 f3 . --- SUMMARY: One of my students went to a chess camp given by GM Evgeny Bareev. This game is annotated in 'Sveshnikov: Move by Move'. ]
7...Bxf5 8.dxc6 bxc6 Don't fear Black's two queenside isolanis in this position. Analysis proves that it is White's lack of development which makes him the one fighting for equality.
[ 8...Qxd1+ is a key alternative but I prefer to keep White's knight on c3, where it does nothing, rather than trade queens and allow it to reroute to e3, where it regains a tempo on the f5-bishop, while protecting the c2-pawn. ]
9.Qf3 White's main move by a about a 6 to 1 margin. There is a double attack on f5 and c6. 9...Qd7
[ This move is superior to 9...Qc8 , staying off the d-file, which has also been played. I'm not a fan since the move is artificial and clogs Black's route to a future ...Rad8. ]

10.Bc4! Zelcic wisely hands over a pawn to complete development. White gets into trouble by hanging on to it.

[Instead: -- a) 10.Bg5 e4 11.Qe2 Be7 12.Rd1 *(*not 12.Bxf6? Bxf6 13.Nxe4 0-0 14.Nxf6+ gxf6 15.Qd1 Rfe8+ 16.Be2 Qe6 17.Kf1 Rad8 18.Bd3 c5 19.b3 Qe5 and White, who is guilty of the mother of all chess sins - falling behind in development in the opening - is unable to unravel ) 12...Qe6 13.Qc4 Rb8 14.Qxe6 fxe6! 15.b3 , V.Akopian-Y. Yakovich, Rostov on Don 1993. Black stands better after Bb4 16.Bd2 Rd8 (threat: ...Rxd2 and ...Nd5) 17.Nb1 Bc5 . ]

[b) 10.Bd3 e4 11.Qe2 Bb4 12.Bd2?! *(*the unplayed 12.Bc4 is better ) 12...0-0 13.Bc4 Bg4 14.Qe3 Rad8 with a wretched game for White, who lags seriously in development, J. Javorsky-V.Hybl, correspondence 2005. ]

[c) 10.Bb5?? e4 - Oops. White's pin on the c6-pawn is broken and a piece is lost. In my database, nine unfortunates fell for this trap as White. ]

10...Bxc2!? Black takes the time out to snatch a pawn. Chances are dynamically balanced here.

[We can also meet the seductive c2-offer with indifference and play 10...Be7 , which is about even after 11.0-0 0-0 12.Rd1 Qc8 13.Re1 e4 . ]

11.0-0 Be7 12.Qe2 Double attack. White regains the sacrificed pawn but with a loss of time.

[Instead, 12.Re1 0-0 13.Rxe5 Bd6 looks even. ]

12...Bg6 13.Qxe5 0-0 14.Rd1 Qb7 15.Qg3 The first new move. I give Black an edge, since White's development lag is more significant than the fact that Black's queenside pawns are broken.

[a) 15.Ba6?! (this exchange costs White time) Qxa6 16.Qxe7 Rfe8 17.Qc5? Bc2! 18.Rf1 Qxf1+! 19.Kxf1 Bd3+ 20.Ne2 Rxe2 21.Qc3 Rae8! 22.g3 was R.Bellin-V.Ikonnikov, Huy 1993. White would be crushed if Black found R2e3+! 23.Kg1 Re1+ 24.Kg2 Bf1+ 25.Kf3 Bh3! , threatening ...Rg1! and ... Bg2+, with a winning attack. ]

[b) 15.b3 is unplayed and may be an improvement. The game looks balanced after Rfe8 16.Qg3 Rad8 . ]

15...Rfd8 It doesn't matter which rook Black places on the d-file, since White will swap. 16.Rxd8+ Rxd8 17.Bb3 White has no easy route to complete development.

17...c5! Any attempt to develop the c1-bishop will be met by ...c5-c4 and ...Qxb2.

18.h3!? Luft is a luxury.

[Perhaps he should try 18.Be3 Bd3! 19.Qf4 Rc8! (Black seizes control over c4 and ...c5-c4 is coming) 20.Qf3! Qxf3 21.gxf3 c4 , though White is the one fighting for the draw in the ending. ]

18...Bd6 Black's intent (if he has one, besides harassment of White's queen) remains without form or shadow, yet we realize that White is in danger due to the fact that his queenside pieces remain asleep and undeveloped. This is a position where precise actions matter, not chance or intuition.

[Better is 18...Bd3! , intending ... c5-c4. After 19.Bh6 Nh5 20.Qe5 c4! 21.Qxh5 cxb3 22.Qg4 Bg6 23.Bg5 f6 24.Be3 bxa2 25.Rxa2 a6! Black can press with his bishop pair in the open position; e.g. 26.Qc4+ Bf7 27.Qxa6 Qb8 and Black's bishop pair outweighs White's extra b-pawn. ]

19.Bf4?! White enters a risky calculation battle. The move violates the principle: If your goal is to extinguish, then don't ignite.

[ 19.Qh4! is the sober and better choice. ]

19...Nh5 20.Qh4?

[ White reduces his disadvantage to a minimum if he plays 20.Qg5! , attacking the d8-rook. After Be7 21.Qe5 Nxf4 22.Qxf4 the defence bends with the wind without snapping. White only stands slightly worse here. ]

20...Be7! 21.Bg5

[ If 21.Qg4 then Rd4 22.Bd5 Rxd5 23.Nxd5 Qxd5 24.Rd1 Qa8 is a winning position for Black, who has picked up two full pieces for a rook. ]

21...Rd4

[ Also strong is 21...h6! 22.Bxe7 Rd4 23.g4 Nf4 24.Qg3 Qxe7 and Black dominates. ]

22.g4?

[ White's last prayer lay in 22.Re1! Rxh4 23.Rxe7 Qb8 24.Bxh4 , though even here White should lose. ]

EXERCISE (combination alert): The GM playing White just gave in to delirious, time-pressure-fuelled abandon. Find Black's next move and we have no doubt of the verdict. 22...Nf4! ANSWER: Step 1: Black makes good use of the fact that the pinned g5-bishop is unable to capture the f4-knight, which is happy to fill the void. A not-so-veiled threat to deliver mate on g2 arises. 23.Nd5 Zelcic desperately attempts to confuse the issue.

[ 23.Qg3 Bxg5 24.h4 Rd3 is hopeless. ]

23...Bxg5! Step 2: Simply chop on g5. White's queen and king are forked if he recaptures. 24.Qxg5 In the disciplined manner of a professional, I resist the urge to place a double question mark after this move. First, it's a rapid game and White may have had one second on his clock. Secondly, it's not a blunder if everything else loses. White's options have run out.

[ 24.Re1 , threatening a back rank cheapo, is met by the simple Re4 . ]

Why decentralize when d5 is available? ANSWER: I actually like this rare idea and was tempted to give the move an exclam. There is sound reasoning behind the decentralization: 1. White's last move, although seizing space, also created a gaping hole on f5. Black plans an eventual ...Ng7 and ...Nf5 to occupy the hole. 2. If he plays the knight to d5, as we saw last game, it just gives White invitation to continue the chase with c4 and c5, all with tempo, just as Shirov played last game. 3. Why duplicate and play to d5 when Black's b6-knight can do so? 10.Nxe7 QUESTION: Doesn't this move gain a tempo? ANSWER: Not if Black wanted to be chased to g7. Remember, h5 is just a rest stop, not the final destination. 10...Nxe7 11.Bxf6 gxf6 12.Qd2 Bb7 Success! The knight moves into his comfortable new home on f5. QUESTION: I concede that Black controls f5 – but little else! Isn't he just getting squeezed? ANSWER: There is a chance of that happening, but I actually prefer Black, due to future possibilities of White overextending. It feels to me like White's alleged advantage in space is without substance, and for now, unable to convert to anything more tangible. But I also realize this is a tough argument to sell. 13.c4 Bxe4!? QUESTION: Why did Black toss in this move? ANSWER: He probably wanted to deny White access to the g4-square.

[ 13...bxc4 14.Nxc4 d5 15.exd5 , as in A.Istratescu-G.Ardelean, Predeal 2007. I like Black's game after Bxd5 16.Rd1 ]

14.cxb5 0-0 15.bxa6!? QUESTION: Is it safe for White to castle kingside with the kingside so breezy? ANSWER: I tend to agree with you that it looks safe enough for now, but of course he must remain vigilant for future infiltration attempts. The reason White's king may castle kingside is the principle: The cramped side should not attack. Black simply lacks the space and activity to get at White's king, for now. But in chess, as in life, things change, and later Black does indeed whip up an attack. The alternative is to castle long, but in that case, Black's king looks quite safe on the sealed kingside and Black can slowly try to build for a queenside attack. 15...Kh8 16.Nb5 In order to deny Black ...Be6 ideas. 16...d5 17.f3 White continues accruing territorial wealth but Black's position remains solid and full of future counterattack potential. 17...Bg6 Principle: The cramped side should seek exchanges. 18.a7

[ 18.h4 ]

18...d4 19.Rc1 QUESTION: Is it worth considering swapping on d7 and grabbing the bishop-pair? ANSWER: I doubt it. White's entire game revolves around the strength of his e5-outpost. Also, every swap benefits Black, the cramped side. 19...Nd5 Black may be preparing a ... c5 freeing break. 20.Be2 He reads his opponent's mind and immediately clamps down on the c5-square. Still, Black may slowly be able to work it in with ...b6 first. 20...Qb6 21.a4 d3 Black's light-squared bishop hobbles about, dreaming of freedom. 22.Bxd3 Bxd3 23.Qxd3 Nf4 He begins to build a road to c5. 24.Qe4 Planning to infiltrate to a7.

[ 24.Qc2 The knight opts for actual participation in the proceedings, rather than that of passive observer. Black uncloaks all his power in the direction of White's king. Rxc8 26.Rxc8+ The knight's tentacles of control pervade the white king's consciousness. Kg7 27.Rg8+ Kh6 EXERCISE (combination alert): The war is over yet there remains a pocket of resistance. Summary: 9...Nh5!? is an appealing (and, in my opinion, more logical) alternative to the 'book' move 9...Nd5. The move needs further trials and may be an improvement over playing to the d5-square. ( 30...Nd3+ when White has no chance of survival. ) 31.Kc4 is also deadly. Most players would keep queens on with Nb6+ 32.Kb4 ]

24...Rfd8 25.Rc2 Nd3+ 26.Kf1 Forcing Black's next move, which he intended anyway. 26...Nf4! Houdini assesses at equal, but I prefer Black, due to his dynamic potential. The more the game opens, the more exposed White's king looks. 27.Qe1?!

[ 27.Ke1 Qa5+ 28.Nc3 Rxa7 White attempts to close lines, frantically scheming to evade his fate, to no avail. ]

27...Qa6! Great judgement. The e5-knight's once formidable coercive powers fade away. No longer is he able to intimidate. Black eliminates White's best piece and sees that his weakening is in reality just cosmetic. QUESTION: Why? Black's last move looks like an awful strategic decision which punctures his dark squares. ANSWER: Those dark squares are only weak if White's pieces and especially his dark-squared bishop get easy access to them, which they don't, mainly because White's g- and e-pawns block avenues of entry. 28.b3 Rxa7! The once introverted bishop inveigles his way into White's camp. A swap of light-squared bishops sucks dry the remainder of White's life force, to leave a husk rather than a corpse of the remaining bishop on d2. Following two principles: 1. When the opponent has the bishop-pair, eliminate one of them. 2. Force your opponent's pawns on the same colour as his remaining bishop. White's alleged powerhouse, his dark-squared bishop, begins to see that his reputation far outstrips his actual abilities. 29.Rd2 Rad7 Black's queen and knight prepare ambush against White's king, who still believes himself insulated from the outside world. The power differential between knight and bishop is self-evident. 30.Rxd7? The rook, needed for defence, goes off on his own little adventure. Now the light squares sag and collapse, leaving White's king vulnerable and demoralized. His position shudders. 30...Rxd7! Threat: ...Nh4, with terrible dual menaces on g2 and f3. What is wrong with this picture? Few openings are more generative of irony and pure, befuddling paradox than the Scandinavian. It becomes painfully obvious that White overreached in his insatiable lust for space, earlier in the game. Now, gusts of misery blow White's way and his king soon gets pelted with a hail of threats. 31.Qc1 Qa8 32.Qc2 Running like the wind, but one might ask: In the middle of an apocalypse, why run when there is no place on earth to hide? 32...Qd8

[ 32...Qd8 The queen backs away from her post with the wary respect one only offers a more powerful foe. 33.Ke1!? Opting for a circumspect pathway, yet understandable since practically speaking it is just as winning. Qb6 ]

45. US Championship 2009
[Cyrus Lakdawala]

I used to play blitz with Nakamura on a daily basis when he was a 13-year-old IM (even though I was the stronger player at the time, Hikaru considered this as an impertinence on my part!). --- 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Ne7 9.c4 Ng6 10.Bd3 Be7 11.0-0 0-0 12.Bxg6!? With this exchange both sides gain something and lose something. At first glance it may look illogical, since White gives up the bishop pair. Here is the hidden logic behind the move: -- 1. Black's main asset in the position is the potential for a kingside attack. -- 2. Without a knight, Black's kingside attacking chances are reduced. -- 3. White has pawns fixed on the light squares d5 and c4, which means his remaining bishop will be a good one, posted on e3, in conjunction with f2-f3. -- 4. Black's kingside pawn majority slightly loses its flexibility and ability to push forward, no matter which way Black recaptures. --- On the debit side of the balance sheet, White gives away the following: -- 1. The bishop pair. -- 2. Later on, White may be in deep mourning of the voluntary loss of influence on the light squares. -- 3. White's natural plan is to play for an eventual c4-c5. Doing so automatically opens the game, which may end up helping Black, who now has the bishop pair. --- In conclusion. The capture gives White no advantage, yet it is intended to throw the Sveshnikov player out of our comfort zone. 12...hxg6 Principle: capture towards the centre. This also keeps Black's kingside pawn majority fluid. Later Black may even be able to play ...Kh7, ...Rh8 and ...Kg8, transferring his rook to the h-file in order to pursue an attack.

[ 12...fxg6?! seems illogical, since Black is not going to mate White any time soon, just because the f-file is open. Then 13.Be3 a6 14.Nc3 Bf5 was H.Lopez Martin-J.Grinwis, correspondence 2005. I slightly prefer White after 15.Qe2 b6 16.f3 Bg5 17.Bf2 . The comp calls this even, but I don't see a plan for Black, other than to wait. ]

13.Be3 f5 Nakamura activates his kingside majority.

[Instead, 13...a6 14.Nc3 was seen in L.Bednarski-M.Wisniewski, Polish League 1992. Here Black can try the adventurous b5! with excellent Benko Gambit-like compensation if White accepts, while on 15.b3 Rb8 16.Rc1 f5 , I slightly prefer Black. ]

14.f3 Preventing ...f5-f4-f3 ideas.

[Others: -- a) 14.Nxa7?! f4! 15.Nxc8 Qxc8 16.Bd2 Qxc4 17.Qb3 Qxb3 18.axb3 gives Black the superior ending, since White is essentially a pawn down. ]

14...b6 Nakamura wants to slow down White's queenside pawn majority.

[Also tempting is 14...a6 15.Na3 b5!? . ]
15.f4?! There are three problems with this move: -- 1. White has just played f2-f3, so the push to f4 constitutes a waste of a tempo. -- 2. Black can eventually take on f4 and then activate his fluid kingside pawn majority with ...g6-g5. -- 3. After a future ... e5xf4, Black's dark-squared bishop's activity is greatly enhanced via a transfer to the a1-h8-diagonal with ...Bf6.
[Instead, 15.a4 is about even after a6 16.Nc3 Rb8 . ]
15...a6 It's important to play this before ...e5xf4, since it chases the knight away from immediate access to the d4-square. 16.Nc3 exf4! 17.Bxf4 Bf6 18.Be3 White wants to play for an eventual break on c5, and also gives himself the option of challenging Black's dark-squared bishop with Bd4. 18...Bd7 19.Bd4 Rc8 20.Qd3 Qc7! Black again attacks the c4-pawn, provoking White into b2-b3, weakening protection of the c3-knight. 21.Bxf6 Rxf6 This may not be the most accurate way to recapture.
[Black should play 21...gxf6! 22.Qg3 Kf7 23.Rac1 Rce8 24.b4 Re5 with a clear edge. ]
[A counterattack on b6 with 22.Qd4! was necessary, after which Black only holds a slight edge. ]
22...Qc5+ 23.Kh1 b5 24.Rae1? Brooks must have misevaluated, thinking he may have some counterplay for the pawn. He doesn't.
[ 24.Qg3 was necessary. ]
24...bxc4 25.Qg3
[Since 25.bxc4 Qxc4 is a hopelessly lost ending for White. ]
25...cxb3 26.Ne4 EXERCISE (critical decision): "Discouragement" is not a word which comes up often in the mind of an optimist. Calculate the ramifications of 26... fxe4. White plans to play Rxf6 and then come crashing through on g6. Should Black accept, or should he sacrifice the exchange? 26...fxe4! ANSWER: Step 1: Accept the first piece and chop e4. Nakamura understands that he is being baited but has analysed deeper. 27.Rxf6! When it comes to swindles, we chess players are devoid of conscience. Has White's conspiracy born fruit? The answer is no. There is an absence of a key component in White's idea: Black is not obliged to accept the sacrifice. 27...Bf5! Nakamura is a genius in irrational positions that require pure calculation. In such situations it will be him who does the tricking, not his opponents. Step 2: White's once tidy conclusion falls into disarray. Black doesn't have to recapture the rook.
[Obviously Black must avoid 27...gxf6?? as it's perpetual check after 28.Qxg6+ Kf8 29.Qxf6+ Kg8 30.Qg6+ etc; ]
[but 27...b2! is also crushing: 28.Qxg6 Qxd5! (preventing both Qf7+ and Rf7 ideas) 29.Ref1 Rb8 30.Rf7 Qe5! 31.Rxd7 b1Q 32.Rd8+! Rxd8 33.Qf7+ Kh7 34.Rxb1 e3 with an easy win for Black. ]
28.Rxd6

[Or 28.Rxg6 Bxg6 29.Qxg6 Qxd5 30.axb3 Qe5! and the e4-pawn can't be touched due to White's weak back rank, so Black consolidates. ]

[After 29.h4 e3 the b-pawn promotes. ]

29...Rxc6 30.dxc6 Qc1! 31.Qb3+ Kh7 32.Qd1 Qxd1 Simplest. Factor in that White, too, owns a deeply passed c-pawn. 33...e3 ANSWER: The pawn push works, as the piteously frail white rook is no match against the surging black b- and e-pawns. 34.c7 e2! The difficulty level of this exercise cannot be accurately described as inexpressibly hard. In fact, the solution is rather easy. Black's b-pawn will win the white rook, while his e-pawn will be the one to promote and back rank mate White.

However, I was prepared for this line and had previously tested it in blitz, surviving and even winning multiple games against titled players. --- Black's game is playable but only if played perfectly. In many lines, the comp assesses the situation favourably for White, but in practical play Black has excellent chances. My feeling is that the comp's favourable assessment for White is something of an illusion and that in reality Black is fine - as long as you master the mechanics of the coming position. 7...d6! The thing about comping sharp opening lines is that they stop the guesswork. Nxd3+ 19.Bxd3 , I just don't trust Black's ability to survive this ending so far behind in development and with the h8-rook out of play. ]

[ b) 11.Bc4 Rd8 12.Rxd8 Nxd8 13.Rd1 Be6 14.Nd5+ Bxd5 15.exd5 a6 16.d6+ (I love it when White pushes the d-pawn to d6, since the majority of the time I win it later in the game) Kd7 17.Nc7 was A.Cioara-N.Giffard, Le Touquet 2002. I like Black's game after Rc8 18.f3 Ne6 19.Nxe6 fxe6 20.a4 Rc6 , as White's d-pawn falls and if anyone is going to win, it will be Black. ]

11...Rb8 12.N3d5+

12...Nxd5 13.Nxd5+

[ Or 13.exd5 Nd4 14.c3 Nf5 15.Nb5 Nd6 16.Nxd6 Kxd6 and Black already stands slightly better, since he is the only one with a mobile pawn majority. Again, I have won blitz games from this position. ]

13...Kf8 14.Ne3

[ 14.c3 Be6 is also fine for Black. ]

14...Be6 15.Bc4 Ke7! A new move;

[ and an improvement over 15...Bxc4? 16.Nxc4 Ke7 17.Rd5 , when Black was already in deep trouble, D.Dochev-F. Lindgren, Umel 1997. ]

[ 16.Nd5+ is met by the cool Kf8! , intending ...g7-g6 and ...Kg7, while after 17.Ne3 I planned to repeat moves with Ke7 . ]

16...fxe6! Principle: An visually ugly structure isn't really weak, if our opponent's pieces lack access to its underbelly. 17.c3 b5 I didn't think Black was worse here and offered a draw. However, a draw would have bumped Bruce out of the money. So he declined and played on. 18.Kc2 Rhd8 19.Rxd8 Rxd8 20.a4! White's only chance to play for the win is to retain one pair of rooks on the board and play on the open a-file. 20...a6 21.axb5 axb5 22.Ra1 Kd6 23.Nf1!?

[ 23.Rd1+ Kc7 24.Rxd8 Nxd8 is a near certain draw. White will not be able to

23...Kc7 24.Ng3 c4 25.Nh5 g6!?

[ I didn't want to let his rook into my camp after 25...Rf8 26.f3 Rf7 27.Ra8 , even though the comp now calls it dead level. After Kb6 28.Rg8 g6 29.Rg7 Rf8! 30.Ng3 Ra8! 31.Rxh7 Ra1 Black stands no worse, but I wanted no part of such a sharp line, when my goal was merely to evade a loss. ]

26.Ng7!? This is an insanely risky gamble to say the least, since he self-traps his knight. Objectively, this move must be good for Black. Yet White has suddenly created a position where Black can mess things up and lose, since the complexity level has risen considerably, with both clocks running low.

[ Instead: -- a) 26.Nf6?? loses to Rf8! 27.Ng4 h5 , when f2 falls and White is dead. ]

[ b) 26.Ng3 is technically best, but after Kb6 a draw is the likely outcome. ]

26...Kd7

[ Here I missed 26...Kd6! 27.Ra6 Rf8 28.f3 h6! 29.Kc1 ( if 29.Nxe6 Re8! , his knight must sacrifice itself on d4, since it gets trapped on g7 by ...Re7! ) 29...Rc8! 30.Rb6 Rg8! 31.Nxe6 Re8 32.Rxb5! Rxe6 33.Rd5+ Kc7 34.Rc5 Kb6 35.Rxc4 Kb5 36.b3 Rd6 with good chances to convert. ]

27.Ra6 Rc8

29...Ke7 30.Rb6 Kf6 Inaccurate, though not technically an error as Black can reverse course.

[ After 30...Kf7! 31.Rb7+ Ne7 32.Rxb5 ( 32.g3 Rg8 traps the knight ) 32...Kxg7 33.Rxe5 Kf6 Black is winning. ]

31.Rb7

31...Rg8 32.g4! hxg4 33.fxg4 Ne7! 34.Nxe6

[ At the board I was terrified of the line 34.g5+ Kf7 35.h5! 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Nf5 When we encounter a loose dog on a walk, we quickly discern from his expression whether he will wag his tail or try and bite us. I think in the case of this knight it's the former, since there is no real threat involved for our side. White's last move is played in open disregard to traditional territorial boundaries. He prepares Ne3, seizing complete control over the crucial d5-square, while also intending Nd6+. --- QUESTION: This sounds serious. What do we do about this plan? --- ANSWER: Undermine. Please see Black's next move. 6...d5! Conventional wisdom congealed around this logical response. 7.Bg5? With White, you can maybe get away with playing a shady variation; but if you venture a shady sub-variation within the shady variation, you are asking for trouble. My opponent normally plays the Grand Prix Attack against the Sicilian, and only tried this line as a surprise weapon. In this case rapid development isn't such a great plan.

17...Qc4?! QUESTION: Why are you protecting the c3-pawn? It's not under attack due to the mating threat on e2. --- ANSWER: My knee-jerk move was pretty stupid. As usual, my clock was running low and I just didn't want to calculate Qxc3 on every move.

[I should play 17...Rhd8! and if 18.Bd3 then R8xd3! 19.cxd3 Rxd3 20.Qe4 Nd4 21.0-0 *(*or 21.Rc1 Nf3+ 22.Ke2 Rd4+ 23.Kxf3 Rxe4 24.Kxe4 Qe2+ 25.Kd5 - "A little help would be nice. 27...Rxd3 28.cxd3?! Handing Black a dangerous queenside pawn majority.

[ White would do better to try 28.Bxd3 . ]

28...Rc8 29.a4 Rc5 In this game my initiative is seemingly put on and taken off, like articles of clothing. At this point he had six minutes left to my three. 30.Rb4?! My mother always told me not to pick at a cut, or it won't heal.

[ White should just ignore his a-pawn for now and play 30.g4! , when it's not so easy for Black to make progress. My opponent's last inaccurate move allows an infiltration. ]

30...Rc1! 31.g4 Kc5 32.Rb2 Ra1 Now a4 falls and White is busted. The a-pawn was that old injury which flared when it rained. 33.Kg3 Rxa4 34.f4 exf4+ 35.Kxf4 Ra1 36.Rh2 a5 37.Rh7 White lacks the time to take both black f-pawns and then promote his own pawn. 37...a4 38.Rxf7 a3 39.Rc7+ Kb5? If you ingest poison, the antidote must be at hand. It's too late to drive to the pharmacy. Sometimes we make a move, which at the time seems perfectly sensible. Then we go home and look at the same move, and think: "Was I out of my mind?". I allow his bishop to help stop my surging a-pawn. I'm not even sure what my intent was with this inarticulate gesture.

[ The obvious 39...Kd6 40.Rc4 Rf1+ 41.Ke3 Nxf5+ 42.Bxf5 a2 costs White a full exchange. ]

[ I should play 40...Re1 here. ]

EXERCISE (critical decision): My last move was an error. After 40...a2? should White play 41 Bxa2 or toss in 41 Ba4+ before taking the a-pawn? Only one of these will save him. Which is it? 41.Bxa2?

[ ANSWER: White holds the game if he inserts the zwischenzug 41.Bc4+! Kb4 ( not 41...Ka5? 42.Bxa2 Rxa2? 43.Ra7+ and wins ) 42.Bxa2 . The problem is White now threatens Rc4+ and Rxd4, so Black is forced into Ne2+ 43.Ke3 Rxa2 44.Rc6 , when the comps work the game out to a draw; e.g. b5 45.Rxf6 Nc3 46.Rc6 ( 46.g5?? gets forked by Nd5+ ) 46...Rg2 47.Kf4 Rf2+ 48.Kg5 Kb3 49.f6 Kc2 50.Kg6 b4 51.f7 b3 52.Kg7 b2 53.Rb6 b1Q 54.Rxb1 Nxb1 55.g5 Nc3 56.g6 Nd5 57.f8Q Rxf8 58.Kxf8 Nf4! 59.g7 Ne6+ 60.Kf7 Nxg7 61.Kxg7 Kxd3 and that's that. ]

41...Rxa2 Now Black is winning again. It has been my experience that you rarely get lucky multiple times in a chess game. One time when I was a kid, I found myself on Montreal Spring's ice in the middle of a pond, and saw cracks spreading beneath my feet. (As you may have guessed, your writer wasn't the brightest of children to waltz into the middle of a thin-ice pond.) The only way back to solid earth was to submit to the indignity of laying on my belly to spread my body's weight, and slither to safety. Somehow, the way I won this game reminds me of this undignified episode. 42.Ke4

Nc6 43.d4 Re2+ 44.Kd3 Re7 . --- SUMMARY: Meet 6 Nf5 with the undermining trick 6...d5!, after which White at best gains an unblemished pawn structure, versus our lead in development and greater central control. I think we get the better of the bargain.

11...g5 12.Nxh6? I suspect White knew that this sacrifice was unsound, but did it anyway in the hope of creating confusion in a rapid game.

14...Bxf2+?! At the board I originally thought this shot ruins things for White. I failed to appreciate the potency of opening the f-file for his attack and also the loss of time incurred by the move.

[Black should still be winning, but it would have been wiser - at least from a practical perspective - to continue in consolidation mode with 14...Bb4! , threatening 15...Nxe4!. After 15.Bd3 Nd4 16.h4 Ne6 White's attack sputters into non-existence. ]

[The cautious 16...Rg6! 17.Rhf1 Nd4 18.h3 Be6 19.Bxe6 fxe6 20.g4 Kg7 was correct, when Black should consolidate. ]

17.Bxe6 fxe6 EXERCISE (combination alert): There is a shot which allows White back into the game. What should he play? 18.Rhf1? Oh, thank goodness.

[ANSWER: By this point I was frozen with terror, having seen 18.Rxd6! Qe7 (forced) 19.Nd5! ( 19.Rd7?! fails to Rxg2! ) 19...Qxd6 20.Qxf6+ Ke8 21.Qxg5 exd5 22.Qg8+ . 18...Rg6 Now Black is winning again. 19.Rd3?! The initiative is not a renewable resource. Allow it to die and it likely will never recharge. The rook lift is too slow.

[After 20.Nb5 Rd8 21.Nxa7 Nxa7 22.Qxa7 Kg7 Black should win the game. ]

20...Kg7 21.Rh3! EXERCISE (critical decision): Should Black play 21...Rf8 - ? If not, is there a stronger move? 21...Rg8! ANSWER: White set up a trap on his last move and it's critical to play the rook to g8, not f8.

5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 h6!? I know. One look at the position and you are thinking: "This line should be strangled at birth!" A single odd idea is the deviant within the orthodoxy. Our chess styles and tastes - unlike our hairstyles - aren't something we consciously choose. Most of us are slaves to that benign autocracy, known as fashionable opening theory. It's a place where communal consensus is prized over individual discovery. This isn't such a place! Welcome to the Ulfie, a place where perpetual change battles the powerful forces of precedence. I can only tell you from my own experience that the line is sound. According to my database, my score after 31 games is over 90%: twenty-six wins, four draws and a single loss, against a field averaging a rating of 2275. This is a lot better than virtually every other opening I play - with either colour! --- QUESTION: 6...h6 almost feels like a random move. What is the point? --- ANSWER: An idea is given wings when it smacks of necessity as well. As I mentioned above, there are two ideas behind 6...h6:1. As all Sveshers understand, d5 is our holy grail square. With ...h7-h6 we deny White the standard Bg5 and Bxf6 plan of weakening our grip on that square. 2. We challenge the almost automatic assumption that Nd6+ is an actual strategic threat. The following four games in this chapter hopefully shed light on that question.
[ Incidentally, I play 6...Bc5!? as well. We don't have the room to cover that, since the normally easy-going folk at Everyman tend to get a wee bit annoyed when the number of pages in my books surpasses the girth of "War and Peace". ]
7.Be2 My opponent, never having seen the Ulfie, plays it safe with a solid developing move, hoping to steer clear of my opening prep.
[ Later in the chapter we look at 7.Nd6+ ]

My experience with the line tells me this isn't so; Black gets adequate play down the c-file, d6 is easy to protect, and the powerful e5-knight compensates for other strategic woes. ]

7...a6 We essentially force the knight into d6.
[ Preventing it with 7...d6 is less accurate, as after 8.Nd5! Nxd5 9.exd5 Nb8 10.c4 , F.Cuijpers-A.Baert, Belgian Team Championship 2001, we get a version of the previous chapter with Be2 and ... h7-h6 inserted. This favours White, since Be2 is a developing move, while ... h7-h6 isn't really necessary. ]

8.Nd6+ Bxd6 9.Qxd6 Qe7 10.Qd3 White keeps the queens on the board in the hopes of an attack, while leaving options for a rook to go to d1 as well as a queen transfer to g3 later on.
[ Instead: -- a) 10.Qxe7+ Kxe7 11.Be3 d6 12.0-0-0 Be6 reaches the type of ending we look at later in the chapter (see the next four games). At first glance, this position may seem highly favourable for White, but the database shows that, at the time of writing, White scores a mere 41.7% from here. ] above), where the full retreat is often recommended, but the bishop development to e2 is too quiet to offer White much. For example, 0-0 11.0-0 d6 12.Be3 Be6 13.Nd5 Bxd5 14.exd5 Nd4! 10...0-0
[ b) 10.Qd1 usually arises via the Löwenthal Variation (see 4...e5!? 4 Nb5 a6

[ Black might possibly throw in 10...Nb4!? here, pushing the white queen from the third rank before continuing as normal, or even trying for something like 11.Qd1 d5!? 12.Nxd5 *(*or 12.a3 d4 ) 12...Nfxd5 13.exd5?! Bf5 . ]

[ 12.Rd1 is well met by Nb4! 13.Qxd6 *(*or 13.Qd2 Rd8 14.a3 Nc6 ) 13...Qxd6 14.Rxd6 Nxc2 15.Rb1 Be6 and Black is fine. ]

12...Kh7 Avoiding the cheapo on h6. 13.f4 QUESTION: Simple play seems to given White a very promising position, with a potential kingside attack and the bishop pair, while Black must deal with a chronically weak backward d-pawn and a hole on d5. Is this assessment correct? --- ANSWER: I hope not, since if it is, then I need to give up the Ulfie! In answer to the points you make: I don't see my king in any grave danger; my opponent's bishop pair is not too scary since the position isn't too open or fluid; my backward d-pawn isn't weak, at least for now; and White's control over d5 will be soon challenged. So I'm actually comfortable here! By the way, wise Komodo only gives White a tiny edge here - and I even dispute that! Play on and I will try and show you why.

[ Another try is 13.Nd5 Nxd5 14.exd5 Nd4 15.Bd3+ Kh8 16.c3 Nf5 17.Qf3 Nh4 18.Qh5 e4 19.Bc2 Bf5 20.Bf4 Bh7 21.Rae1 f5 22.Bg3 Ng6 23.f3 Qd8 (threatening ...Qb6+ and ...Qxb2) 24.Kh1 Qb6 25.b3 Qc7 26.c4 b5 27.fxe4 f4 28.Bf2 bxc4 29.Bd4 cxb3 30.Bxb3 Ne5 and if White stands a shade better, it isn't anything too terrifying for Black. ]

13...Nb4? Sometimes we create the most colossal messes when our motivation is pure and benign. What could be more natural than the attack on c2, which forces White's bishop to an awkward square? Yet the comp proves it to be a serious inaccuracy.

[ Black is better off with the simple 13...b5 14.Be3 exf4 15.Bxf4 Ne5 16.Nd5 Nxd5 17.exd5 f5 , when ...g7-g5 is coming and Black's game is perfectly acceptable. ]

14.Bd1 Bd7 Playing to e6 hangs the e5-pawn. 15.Qh4 Your paranoid writer's eyes tend to contract with deep suspicion whenever a potential attacker loiters near my king.

[Alternatively: -- a) 15.a3 Nc6 16.Nd5 Qd8 17.Qd3 Re8 18.fxe5 Nxe5 19.Nxf6+ Qxf6 20.Rxf6 Nxd3 21.Rxd6 Ne5 , when control over e5 gives Black some, but probably not enough, compensation for the pawn. ]

[b) 15.fxe5 dxe5 16.Qf2! (the comp found this tricky move; White plays around with Bxh6! ideas) Qe6 ( 16...Be6? allows 17.Bxh6! , when Kxh6?? loses to 18.Qh4+ Kg6 19.Bh5+! ) 17.a3 Nc6 18.Bxh6 Nxe4 19.Nxe4 Qxh6 20.Nc5 with some advantage to White. ]

15...Nfd5! This tactic eases White's pressure through a queen swap. Nature conspired to hold your writer back on the chessboard, by issuing me a brain which is easily confused in complex positions. I get around this issue by swapping queens at the earliest possible opportunity. 16.Qxe7

[White avoids the trap 16.Qg3? Nxf4! 17.Rxf4 *(*or 17.Bxf4 exf4 18.Rxf4 Qe5 and Black stands at least even ) 17...exf4 18.Bxf4 , when the fork/skewer on d6 doesn't win material in view of Rfe8 19.Bxd6 Qd8 20.Bxb4? Qb6+ etc. ]

16...Nxe7 17.f5!?

[I might have gone for 17.fxe5! dxe5 18.Be3 Rac8 19.a3 Nbc6 20.Na4 , when Black's position is the thin-soled shoe into which the friction of White's dark square pressure threatens to tear a hole. ]

19.a3 Nbc6 20.Bh5?!

[After 20.Na4! Rc7 21.Nb6 Rd8 22.c3 Be8 23.Bb3 , Black is still in a bind. ]

20...Nd4?

[Missing a chance to free my game with 20...d5! 21.exd5 Nd4 22.Bxd4 exd4 23.Ne2 Rxc2 24.Nxd4 Rxb2 . ]

21.Rf2 Nb5 Trying to weaken White's grip on d5. 22.Na4 Threatening a knight fork on b6. 22...Rc4!? I have a bad habit of poking the wasp's nest. In situations of desperation our two greatest allies are our will to survive and the adrenalin that fuels it. At this point I was far from gruntled (yes, this is a real word - I looked it up!); I justified my move with the thought that when we back out of an interesting sacrificial opportunity, we become the man who intends to propose marriage to his girlfriend, but chickens out when the time comes and utters only pleasant banalities. Sensing that I am lost, I try a desperate gamble. For the exchange, Black gets the key e4-pawn. 23.Nb6 Rxe4 24.Nxa8 Rxe3 Exaggeration can be based upon a fact, and yet it's still a lie. I mistakenly considered Black to be back in business with full compensation for the material. I hate it when I play a game, thinking I came up with the most ingenious chess idea ever conceived, and then I go home and the comp informs me that I'm an idiot, and that nothing I planned worked. Fortunately, our human opponents are usually just as fallible. 25.Rd1?!

[White could play more clinically at this point: 25.a4! Nd4 26.Nb6 Bxf5 27.Nc4 Re4 28.Nxd6 Rh4 29.Bd1 , when Black's queenside pawns are loose and he won't hold the game. ]

32.Nxc6 Nexc6

[ The comp prefers the inhuman 32...bxc6! 33.Be8 Kf8 34.Bd7 Re3 35.Be6 Nd5 with a fully playable ending. ]

33.Kf1 Kf8 Keeping the bishop out of e8, while centralizing my king. 34.Re1 Rg4! A calculated gamble which pays off. In mutual time pressure I felt my best chance was an attempt at an attack with rook and two knights. I knew this was asking for it because my rook is in real danger of getting trapped. 35.Re3?!

[ White should target the rook at once: 35.Bh5 Rh4 36.Bd1 , threatening to trap it with -- 37.g3 . ]

[ or after 35.Bh5 Rh4 36.Bd1 , Rxh2?? ( Black would have to retreat with 36...Nb5 to give the rook an escape route ) 37.Kg1 Rh4 38.g3 . ]

35...Ne7 36.Bh5

36...Rh4 37.g4?! Still playing for a back rank mate which will never happen, White grows lax on the maintenance and upkeep of his once-pristine structure.

[ The comp likes 37.Bf3 Rxh2 (threatening mate) 38.Kg1 Nexf5!? 39.Rxe5 Rxg2+ 40.Kxg2 fxe5 41.Bxb7 a5 42.Be4 g6 with an unbelievably difficult position to evaluate. It's White's extra exchange and passed b-pawn vs. Black's three passed kingside pawns. ]

37...Nexf5! 38.Rc3 Nd6

[ Black can also try 38...Ne7!? , aiming to trap the bishop with ...f6-f5 and ...g7-g6; for example, 39.Rc7 f5 40.Rxb7 g6 41.gxf5 gxh5 and I think Black's chances are better. ]

39.h3 My rook is trapped... sort of. We had both foreseen this position yet assessed it differently. I felt Black was at least even and Ali felt he was winning. We were both wrong.

[ According to Komodo, Black is close to winning now; instead, it recommends 39.Rc7 f5 40.Rd7 Ne4 41.Rg2 f4 , when your guess is as good as mine as to the correct evaluation. ]

39...Ke7?!

[ I missed 39...Ne4! 40.Rc8+ Ke7 41.Rh2 Ng3+ 42.Kg2 Nxh5 43.gxh5 Kd6 with good winning chances for Black, who gets quite a few pawns for the exchange. ]

40.Kg2? This last minute revision should have been avoided.

[ Komodo, in its omniscience, gives the lengthy drawing line 40.Rc7+ Ke6 41.Kg2 f5 42.Rxg7 f4 43.Rg6+ Ke7 44.Rxh6 f3+ 45.Kh2 Ne4 46.Bg6 Nxf2 47.Rxh4 e4 48.Bxe4 Nxe4 49.g5 Nd2! 50.Kg1 Nf5 51.Rf4 Ke6 52.g6 Ke5 53.Rxf5+ Kxf5 54.g7 f2+! 55.Kxf2 Ne4+ 56.Ke3 Nf6 57.Kd4 Kg6 58.Kc5 Kxg7 59.Kb6 Ne4 60.Kxb7 Nd6+ 61.Kxa6 Nc4 and the game is drawn. ]

40...f5?! Aack!

41.Rc7+ Kf6 42.Rd7 Ne4 EXERCISE (critical decision): White's f2-rook is en prise - what should he do? 43.Rf1?? We were both down around the three minute mark here.

[ --- ANSWER: White had to find 43.Rxf5+! Nxf5 44.Rf7+ Ke6 45.gxf5+ Kd6 46.Bf3 Ng5 47.Rxg7 Nxf3 48.Kxf3 Rxh3+ 49.Ke4 , when the game should end in a draw. ]

[ 43.Rxd4 Nxf2 is less clear. ]

43...g6 We are never inured to our own blunders. The shock level for an experienced master is exactly the same as it was when he was seven years old and walked into a simple back rank mate. This is the cartoon situation of the bishop stepping on the teeth of the rake and the long handle popping up and smashing him in the teeth. The bishop is trapped, and Black's two knights, rook, and passed e-pawn supported by the king will be too much for White. 44.Rxb7 gxh5 45.gxf5 Nxf5 46.Rb6+ Kg5 47.Re1 Rf4 48.Rxa6 Nh4+ I throw everything into my attack, the way a bachelor throws whatever is in the fridge into his microwave. 49.Kh1 Ng3+ "Matters will go smoother if I do the asking and you do the answering," says the knight. [ I had hoped for 50.Kh2 Rf2+! 51.Kxg3 Rg2# ]

[ or 50.Kh2 Rf2+ 51.Kg1 Rg2# . ]

50...Nf3+ 51.Kf2 Nxe1+ 52.Kxe1 e4 53.Re6 Rf3 The most accurate, supporting the e-pawn's advance. 54.Kd2 e3+! 55.Rxe3

[ Or 55.Kd3 e2+ 56.Kd2 Rf1 , followed by ...Rd1+ and wins. ]

55...Nf1+ . I wish I could tell you that my play in this game was flooded with illumination, but this wouldn't be true. --- SUMMARY: As this game demonstrates, the Ulfie, like fruitcake, meatloaf and sausages, can at times be an opening full of 12...Be6 13.Nxb5!? White hangs on to the initiative with a slippery grasp. QUESTION: How can such a sacrifice be sound? After all, when White recaptures on b5, he will have moved his bishop twice, losing a tempo. --- ANSWER: This is that disorienting moment where we wave to someone we think we know, and get a blank stare as a response. I think this sacrifice's (semi-) justification lies in the fact that White may have moved his light-squared bishop twice after Bxb5, but Black will have to do the same with ...Bd7. --- Anyway, if you're concerned about seemingly wasted tempi, note that this variation can also arise via 12 Nxb5!? axb5 13 Bxb5 Bd7 (see above), when each side has only moved their bishop once. 13...axb5 14.Bxb5 Bd7 More accurate than moving the rook to c8, since our light-squared bishop must move anyway, due to the coming e4xf5. 15.exf5 0-0 The most natural move, though it's not obligatory.

16...e4 Black highest scoring move, and the choice of most top GMs. When we play for tiny positional gains, we are the acolyte who does good deeds in the present, in the expectation of a reward in heaven later on. --- QUESTION: Doesn't this move artificially isolate our now advanced e-pawn and put it in grave risk? --- ANSWER: Positional players, in their/our hearts, mostly don't believe the aphorism: "Nothing ventured, nothing gained", since we tend to try and win risk free. I can tell you from personal experience, it's next to impossible to beat a GM or and IM without taking on some risk, as in this case. Black's move does indeed weaken the e4-pawn, but the clearing of e5 for our pieces takes precedence.

[ Other plans seem inferior: a) 16...Kh8 17.a4 f6 (if Black needs to play this move, obstructing the g7-bishop, I think his position may have already gone wrong) 18.b4 Rb8 19.Qd3 Re8 20.Rfd1 e4 21.Qe2 Qc8 , Z.Almasi-A.Shirov, German League 2004, and now 22.a5 , with the threat of Nb6, looks very good for White. ]

17.a4 QUESTION: Who stands better in the aftermath of the sacrifice? --- ANSWER: Let's move to the data collection phase: -- 1. White has three pawns for the piece - a good deal for Black, since this is still a middlegame, rather than an ending. -- 2. Both Black's e4-pawn and White's f5-pawn are wobbly and liable to come under attack. -- 3. Black has secured the powerful, central e5-square for his pieces. -- 4. Black may potentially utilize the open g-file for an attack with a future ...Kh8 and ...Rg8. -- 5. White owns connected passed pawns on the a- and b-files. -- 6. White's knight sits on a powerful d5-outpost, which he can back up by Rad1 with latent pressure on Black's d6-pawn. --- Conclusion: It looks to me as if the position is dynamically balanced. White's sacrifice is sound, yet offers him no advantage. 17...Re8 18.Qg4 White's queen adds coverage to the f5-pawn, while pressuring Black's king.

18...Kh8 Removing all future f5-f6 ideas, while clearing g8 for a rook later on.

19.Rad1 White backs up control over his powerful knight and prepares to pressure d6. 19...Rc8 This move makes it tougher for White to play b2-b4, since c3 is then weakened.

20.Rfe1 Re5! A correctly timed attack on f5. --- QUESTION: You keep changing your mind about ...Re5. After 18 Re1 in the notes, you gave it an exclamation mark; last move you criticized it; and now you give it an exclamation mark again. What's the difference? --- ANSWER: In the previous note, White's rook stood on f1, which enabled a promising f2-f4!, since if ... e4xf3 then Rxf3 lifts it into the attack. In the current case (and the earlier one), White no longer has f2-f4 ideas as he has already committed the rook to e1. 21.Ne3 Covering f5, while pressuring d6. Black responds by covering d6, while pressuring f5 again. 21...Qf6 22.Qh5?! Delchev mirrors his opponent's play in the earlier note, but there's a difference; the c6-knight has been protected, so Black can just take on f5, gaining a tempo on the queen as well.

[White should go for 22.Qe2 Bxf5 23.Nxf5 Qxf5 24.Rxd6 Nb8 , which has led to numerous draws in correspondence play: 25.Rb6 ( or 25.h3 Bf8 26.Rd4 Bc5 27.Rxe4 Rxe4 28.Qxe4 Qxf2+ 29.Kh1 Bd6 30.Re3 Qf4 31.Qxf4 Bxf4 with an ending where every game has been halved ) 25...Bf6 26.Rb7 Nc6 27.Bxc6 Rxc6 28.Rxf7 Rd6 and Black's activity again balances White's four pawns; for example, 29.b4 Red5 30.a5 Rd2 31.Qf1 Rc2 32.h3 Rdd2 33.a6 Rxf2 34.a7 Rxg2+ 35.Qxg2 Rxg2+ 36.Kxg2 Qf3+ with perpetual check. ]

22...Bxf5 23.Nxf5 Rxf5 24.Qh3 Ne5 25.Rxe4 White may have regained his lost pawn, but he has lost time doing so and the advantage swings to Black, who now increases his kingside build-up. 25...Rg8! Assertive begins to morph into outright aggressive, as the sense of unease slowly swells in White's position. 26.Rf1

[The task of covering f2 would be better accomplished by 26.Re2 . ]
[The attempted trick 26.Rxd6? is refuted by Nf3+! 27.Qxf3 ( or 27.gxf3 Rg5+ 28.Rg4 Rxg4+ 29.fxg4 Qxd6 ) 27...Rxf3 28.Rxf6 Rxf6 , when White's four pawns are no match for Black's extra rook. ]

26...Qg6! Now ...Nf3+, ...Rh5, or a combination of both, are in the air. 27.Re3?! Even a tiny miscalculation can turn our grand scheme into amateurish banality. When we retrace our steps, we don't always return to the place of origin, since alterations take place in other parts of the board. White's rook hesitates with the air of the office worker who has been assigned a foolish order by the boss. It simply doesn't have time for the intended Rg3.

[White had to try the (admittedly miserable) line 27.f4 Rh5 28.f5 Qg5 29.Qg3 Qf6 30.Be2 d5 31.Bxh5 dxe4 32.Qe3 Qh4 33.Be2 Bh6 34.Qf2 , when he is just barely hanging on. ]

27...Rh5 28.Qg3

[ Unfortunately for White, 28.Rg3 Qh6 traps the queen, who is left to ponder her many shortcomings. After 29.f4 Rxh3 30.Rxh3 Qg6 31.fxe5 Bxe5 , White only has one rook and pawns for the queen and is completely busted. ]

28...Qh6! With the decisive threat of ...Bf6. 29.Re4 EXERCISE (combination alert): When we are losing, there is an invisible cut-off point where even the most optimistic of us realizes that hope ends here. Well, this is that exact point. Black to play and win. --- ANSWER #1: Attraction/discovered attack. 29...Rxh2!

[ When ill-fated geometry befalls our opponent, we become religious and begin to believe in divine retribution. "Only now do you both realize that the assumption of your divine infallibility is false," lectures the rook to white king and queen. White resigned after 29...Rxh2 , in view of 30.Qxh2 Nf3+ 31.gxf3 Be5+ and wins. ]

[ ANSWER #2: Black could in fact have improved this line by playing 29...Bf6! (which was the threat after all) 30.Qf4 and only then Rxh2! , when 31.Qxh6 Rgxg2# *(*or 31...Nf3# . White's once-wealthy king must now resort to rooting through garbage cans and dumpsters in search of recyclable empty cans and bottles for a living. )]

[ ANSWER #3: There was even a third win: 29...f5! 30.Re2 f4! and White's queen is trapped. --- SUMMARY: 13 Nxb5!? is probably a sound sacrifice for White, who gets at least three pawns for the piece. Don't be afraid to risk giving up a fourth pawn with ... e5-e4!?, since our control over e5 compensates for the e-pawn's weakness, or even loss. ]

17...Nc5 Applying pressure to e4, while suppressing the a2-a4 break. 18.Nb4 g6 19.Nd5!? QUESTION: Doesn't this conveniently walk into Black's plan of sticking White with a remaining bad bishop? --- ANSWER: It does, but it also embraces Tartakower's philosophy of the worst bishop still being better than the best knight! In any case, I wouldn't call White's bishop bad just yet, since the game may still open up. Also, if White doesn't play Nd5, then what is his plan, other than waiting? 19...Bxd5 really does have nothing to do. --- QUESTION: What is the point of Black's last move? --- ANSWER: Two points: -- 1. If he angles for ...f7-f5 and White exchanges pawns on f5, Black can place a rook on the newly opened g-file. -- 2. If Black ever achieves a ...b5-b4 break and the c-file opens for the rooks, he doesn't have to worry about a possible Qxf7 anymore, since it doesn't come with check. 30.Rc2 Toying with a c2-c4 plan, which Black immediately neutralizes. 30...a5 31.Re1 For now, both sides' intent is as vague as when I ask my wife Nancy what her plans are for the day, and she answers "This and that." 34...Nxe1 "In the past, you refused to address me with due courtesy - an omission for which you shall pay dearly in the present," says the knight. How did he force mate? --- ANSWER: Annihilation of the defensive barrier. 35...hxg3! The attack overwhelms through sheer weight in numbers. Black's rook is irrelevant, compared with the damage to White's king.

36.fxg3 The bravest of resolutions crumbles in the face of overwhelming odds.

36...Qe3! Danger swiftly materializes for White in the form of ...Qf3+, to which there is no defence.

[ It wasn't too late for Black to go wrong and play 36...Qxg3?? . You can prove a portion of a hypothesis and still be incorrect about the remainder. We have all made moves like this, since a surplus of good fortune has a way of dulling the

This blunder allows White to escape after 37.Qd2+ (covering the g2 mate threat with tempo) Kg7 38.Rxc7 , when Black has to take the perpetual with Qxh3+ 39.Qh2 Qf1+ 40.Qg1 Qh3+ etc. --- SUMMARY: I like Black's ambitious 15... 29.Qb4 EXERCISE (critical decision): The white queen now attacks both e4 and b7. Given that we can't ride two horses simultaneously, how should we respond?
29...Bb5? Crap. When your initiative-challenged writer begins to bungle a won game, I console myself with the thought that long journeys are rarely smooth and uneventful. I factor in my own stupidity and expect a few mishaps and adventures before I reach my destination. Most players consider fear of the unknown a flaw; I disagree, since fear is a kind of inner stimulant which can awaken us to new heights of awareness. It's when I'm not scared that I'm most likely to commit an error. --- Yet here, we see the opposite problem of overcaution. I chickened out and threw away a beautiful opportunity. My intuition told me that 29...f3! had to be correct, but the chance to play safely for a win held me back. I went with the "don't-you-realize-that-there-is-a-real-world-out-there?" argument and copped out. I was satisfied to creep forward with a strong degree of circumspection, not allowing even a molecule of counterplay. The trouble with what I played is that it should probably throw away the win.
[ ANSWER: I should have put my fortunes on 29...f3! (sometimes we don't have the luxury of time and simply allow our deeds to speak on our behalf) 30.Qxe4 ( 30.Qxb7? Rf7 is hopeless ) 30...Qg5! 30.Qxe4! The relief my opponent must have felt is like a dislodged burr from tender flesh. An animal's most basic instinct is to avoid all forms of danger which threaten its survival. [ White puts up greater resistance with 38.Qg4! Be5! (Black's queen draws her bishop conspiratorially aside) 39.Qxg3 Bxg3 40.Bc4 , but Komodo says this ending is still dead lost for White who eventually finds himself in zugzwang; for example, Rf4 41.Bb5 Kg7 42.a4 Kf6 43.Be8 Re4 44.Bb5 Re1 45.Bc4 ( 45.a5 Re5 wins the a-pawn ) 45...Ke5 (no mere minor subcontractor, the king is recruited as a key player in the coming events; the goal is to travel to b4, after which White is in zugzwang, since his bishop is unable to protect both a4 and f1 and make a move) 46.Bb5 Kd5 47.Ba6 ( or 47.a5 Kc5 48.Bd3 Kd4 and 49.-- Re5 again ) 47...Kc5 48.Bd3 Kb4 49.Bb5 (for White's bishop, this is the Beckettian play where there is no action and all dialogue) Ka5 (zugzwang; this is a confirmatory gesture, conceding that Black's threats have real bite) 50.Bd3 ("Oh, dear God, how long must I endure it?" prays the bishop silently) Kxa4 51.Bc4 Kb4 52.Bd3 Kc3 53.Bb5 Kd2 54.Bc4 Rxf1+ 55.Bxf1 Ke1 and the f-pawn finally promotes. ]

EXERCISE (combination alert): White just blundered in a losing position. Black to play and win. --- ANSWER: The queen takes right of precedence over f1. 38...Qd3! . White's rook must move, after which Black promotes. --- SUMMARY: Be very careful after 9 Nc3!. It is one of the few lines in the Ulfie where I can't find full equality for Black, who must suffer a "+=" deficit if White plays the opening perfectly.

Chapter 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 0-0 12.Nc2 Bg5 13.a4 bxa4 14.Rxa4 a5 15.Bc4 Rb8 Diagram # In this chapter, we will analyze the main and the most popular line of the Chelyabinsk variation. Black's last move looks the most natural, since he has improved the placement of his rook and he has avoided the pin along the a-file with tempo. The next idea on his agenda is to prepare and accomplish the thematic pawn-advance f7-f5. 16.b3 This move fortifies the light-squared bishop and it defends the hanging pawn. Now, Black has a choice. Sometimes he chooses a) 16...Be6, but still he plays much more often b) 16...Kh8. Before beginning our analysis of these lines, we will pay some attention to Black's alternatives. b) 16...Kh8 Diagram # This is the most popular and logical move for Black. He removes his king away from the a2-g8 diagonal and that is necessary for the preparation of f7-f5. Meanwhile he has not made up his mind yet whether he would push immediately his bishop pawn, or he would precede that with the move g7-g6.

[a) 16...Be6 Diagram # This move is not flexible, because the e6-square is not always optimal for Black's bishop. 17.0-0

A) In case of 17...Ne7 White's most principled reaction is 18.Nxe7+! as it was played in the game Nijboer - van Kooten, Dieren 1984, and after Bxe7 *(*Black would not change the evaluation of the position with 18...Qxe7 in view of 19.Na3! White's knight is headed for the c4-square in order to attack both Black's weak pawns. Qc7 20.Bxe6 fxe6 21.Nc4 Be7 22.Rxa5 Qb7 23.Qd3 Qxb3 24.Ra7± Black has managed to regain his pawn indeed, but White maintains the initiative as before. ) 19.Ne3± White obtained a stable advantage.;

B) In the variation 17...Qd7 18.Qe2 *(*It is also interesting for White to try 18.Qh5 h6 19.Qe2± Carvajal - les Palau, Cali 2001, provoking weakening of the light squares in Black's camp in case he goes for the standard pawn-advance f7-f5. ) 18...Kh8 19.Nce3 g6 20.Kh1 f5 21.exf5 gxf5 22.f4 Bh6 23.Qh5 Bxf4 24.Nxf4 exf4 25.Nd5 Ne5 it looks like Black has come very close to equality, but following 26.Rxa5 Nxc4 27.bxc4± Acher - Lazar, Mureck 1998, White maintains a slight advantage, because Black's king is rather unsafe.;

C) After 17...g6 18.Nce3 it is more reasonable for Black to opt for C1) while the premature activity 18...f5?! when Black's king is under X-ray is not so good for him. White follows with 19.exf5 gxf5 20.f4 exf4 21.Nxf4 Bxc4 22.Nxc4 Bxf4 23.Qd5+! Kg7 24.Rxf4 Rf6 25.Rf3± and he obtains good attacking chances.;

C2) White is better too after 18...Bh6 Zaslavsky - Dragicevic, Budva 2003, 19.Qf3!? Kh8 *(*But not 19...f5? 20.exf5 gxf5 because of 21.Nb4!+- ) 20.Rd1± and the game develops in the spirit of the main line 17...Kh8.;

C3) 18...Kh8 - see 17...Kh8,;

D) 17...Kh8 18.Nce3 That is a natural move, preventing the advance f7-f5.

D1) About 18...Qd7 19.Qe2 - see 17...Qd7.;

D2) Naturally, White is clearly better after 18...f5? 19.exf5 Bxf5 20.Nxf5 Rxf5 21.Bd3 Rf8 Incedi - Strelicka, Svetla nad Sazavou 1998, 22.h4! Bf4 *(*or 22...Bxh4? 23.Qh5+- ) 23.g3 Bh6 24.Qc2 g6 25.h5± and Black's kingside ends up in ruins.;

D3) If 18...Bxe3 19.Nxe3 Ne7 then 20.Bxe6 fxe6 21.Nc4± CompZChess - Jaulin, Aubervilliers 1999.;

D4) 18...g6 Diagram # 19.Qf3!? This interesting idea was successfully tried in the game Radulski - Nataf, Vrnjacka Banja 2005. It is very difficult for Black to prove that the advance of his f-pawn is good for him when White's queen is on the f3-square. On the contrary, Black only creates new weaknesses after that. f5 20.Rd1 *(*No doubt, it deserves attention to analyze the tactical possibility: 20.exf5 gxf5 21.Nb4!? but after correct play from both sides, there arise simplifications after which White has a symbolic extra pawn, but the position is evidently quite drawish: e4 22.Nxc6 exf3 23.Nxd8 Bxc4 24.Nxc4 fxg2 25.Rd1 Bxd8 26.b4 axb4 27.Rxb4 Rc8 28.Nxd6 Rxc3 29.Rb8 Kg7 30.Rxd8 Rxd8 31.Nxf5+ Kf6 32.Rxd8 Kxf5= ) 20...Qd7 21.h3 It is necessary for White to take the g4-square under control. He should not be in a hurry and he should test his opponent how he is going to solve the problem with the juxtaposition of the pawns on f5 and e4. *(*The line: 21.Qg3 Bd8 22.exf5 gxf5 23.f4∞ leads to an unclear position with mutual chances. ) 21...Bh4 White would have a comfortable blocking game after the exchange on e4. 22.Rd2 f4 Black closes the kingside with the idea to organize a direct attack there. 23.Ng4 Qf7 Diagram # 24.Nh2! This is a very powerful maneuver. White transfers his knight along the route g4-h2-f3; meanwhile the queen goes back to the queenside in order to exert pressure against Black's weaknesses there. Bd8 25.Qd1 h5 26.Nf3± Diagram # White has created a concealed tactical threat, which was realized in the abovementioned game. After Black's mistake

D4a) After 26...Kh7 it works again for White to continue with 27.Nxf4! exf4 28.Rxd6 Bxc4 29.Rxc4+-;

D4b) It is better for Black to play 26...Qe8 but White can counter that with 27.Qa1 (with the idea Qa3) and later for example: g5 28.Nxg5! Bd7 *(*Or 28...Bxg5 29.Nc7±; 28...Bxd5 29.exd5 Bxg5 30.dxc6± ) 29.h4 Qg6 30.f3 Bxg5 31.hxg5 Qxg5 32.Nc7 Qe7 33.Raa2! Be8 34.Nb5 Rf6 35.Qd1 Rd8 36.Rd3± Black's attack is not so dangerous anymore; meanwhile White has prepared to triple his heavy pieces along the d-file in a classical fashion.;

D4c) 26...Rg8? 27.Nxf4! (This is beautiful and strong.) exf4 *(*The position is hopeless for Black after 27...Bxc4 28.Rxc4 Qxf4 29.Rxc6+- ) 28.Rxd6 Bxc4 29.Rxc4 Ne7 30.Ng5 Qf8 31.Qd4+ Qg7 32.Nf7+ Kh7 33.Nxd8+- and Black should better resign. ]

[The positions arising after 16...Bd7 17.Nce3!? was analyzed thoroughly in our previous chapter - see 15...Bd7. ]

[In case of 16...Bb7 17.Nce3 Kh8 18.0-0 Ne7 19.Qd3 Bxe3 20.Nxe3 there arises again a transposition to other lines - see 16...Kh8 17 Nce3 Bxe3. ]

[After 16...g6 17.0-0 original positions can be reached only after Kg7 *(*The move 17...Kh8 leads to the main line - see 16...Kh8. ) but it is not easy to recommend such a move, because Black's king is not comfortable on the g7-square after standard developments in the game. There might follow 18.Qe2 Be6 19.Kh1 Qd7 and here in the game Janturin - Kamenets, Decin 1998, White had to play 20.Nce3 and then to counter f5 with the standard reaction 21.exf5 gxf5 22.f4 exf4 23.Nxf4 Bxf4 24.Rxf4 Bxc4 25.Qxc4± creating a maximal number of pawn-islands for the opponent. ]

[Black cannot equalize with the move 16...Ne7 which was played in the game Brener - Kostic, Internet 2005, in view of 17.Nxe7+!? and Black is forced to capture on e7 with his bishop and after Bxe7 18.0-0 Bd7 19.Ra2 a4 That is an attempt by Black to get rid of his weakness. 20.bxa4 Qc7 21.Ne3 Bg5 22.Qd3 Rfc8 23.Bd5 Qxc3 24.Qxc3 Rxc3 25.a5± and the endgame is better for White, because of his passed a-pawn. Black cannot play Bxe3? 26.fxe3 Be6 27.a6 Bxd5 28.exd5 Ra8 29.Rb1+- since the rook and pawn ending is winning for White. ]

[The move 17.0-0 has been played in numerous games, but lately White encounters real problems to obtain any opening advantage. After Black's most energetic reaction f5! 18.exf5 Bxf5 19.Nce3 Bg6∞ he has excellent prospects and that evaluation was confirmed by a lot of games played at the highest possible level. I advise my readers to avoid the main lines just at that moment and to try to reach not so well analyzed positions, which are quite interesting and with good prospects for White. The move 17 Nce3!? restricts Black's posibilities, since it does not allow the immediate move f7-f5. The drawback of that move is that Black can get rid of his potentially bad dark-squared bishop, but as we are going to see, things are far from easy for him after similar developments. We will analyze here b1) 17...Bxe3 and b2) 17...g6. ] b2) 17...g6 Diagram # Black usually plays like that, preparing the pawn-advance f7-f5, being reluctant to part with his bishop pair.

[b1) 17...Bxe3 Diagram # This is a straightforward attempt by Black to solve his opening problems. He forces White's knight to abandon the central d5-outpost and then Black advances f7-f5 without the preparatory move of his knight-pawn. 18.Nxe3 Ne7 19.0-0

A) The other possibility for Black here is 19...Bb7 20.Qd3 f5 *(*But not 20...Qd7? 21.Rd1 Rbd8 22.Rxa5 Qc6 23.Nd5+- Schoene - Helmbold, Willingen 2001. ) but White has at his disposal the powerful argument 21.Rd1! It becomes clear now that after Bxe4 *(*In the game Obukhovski - Kalegin, Kaluga 1981, Black refrained from capturing on e4 and he preferred the aggressive move 21...f4 There followed 22.Nf1 Rf6 23.Nd2 g5 24.Rda1 g4 25.Rxa5 Rh6 26.Rb5 Ra8 27.Rxa8 Qxa8 28.Rb6 Nc8 29.Rb4± White won a pawn, while Black's pieces wer incapable of supporting effecitively the pawn-offensive on the kingside. ) 22.Qxd6 Qxd6 23.Rxd6 Black has great problems in the endgame, for example: f4 24.Nf1 Nc8 25.Rd2 Nb6 26.Rxa5 Nxc4 27.bxc4 Rbc8 28.c5!? *(*The alternative for White is - 28.Rxe5 Rxc4 29.Rd4 Rxd4 30.cxd4 Bd3 31.g4 fxg3 32.hxg3± and he has considerable chances of materializing his extra pawn. ) 28...Bc6 29.Rd6 e4 30.g3 g5 31.Ra7± - White's rooks are very active and Black's defence is difficult.;

18.0-0 After 18 0-0, Black usually chooses between b2a) 18...f5 and b2b) 18.. .Bh6.

[ White can try to fortify his position in the centre without castling with 18.Qd3 f5 19.f3 but that is far from being safe, for example: Bh4+ 20.Ke2!? *(*Black is better after 20.g3 f4 21.Nf1 Bg5∓ ) 20...f4 *(*It is not so effective for Black to continue with 20...fxe4 21.Qxe4 Bf5 22.Nxf5 gxf5 23.Qc2 Qg5 24.g3 Qg7 25.Re1⩱ ) 21.Nf1 Qd7 22.Kd1 Qa7∞ ]

[ It has become very fashionable lately for White to play aggressive lines with h2-h4. He cantry 18.h4!? right now, but the consequences of that move are absolutely unpredictable. We will have to remind our readers that we recommend that method of seizing the initiative only considering some concrete features of the position. For example, in the Radjabov variation, which we analyzed in out previous chapter, Black's bishop was on the d7-square and it was covering the seventh rank for Black's queen rook. That circumstance was quite advantageous for White's attacking chances, therefore, we recommend h2-h4 in numerous lines. ]

b2b) 18...Bh6 That is a logical preparatory move. Black is not in a hurry to advance his f-pawn and he retreats his bishop to a safer square. At least, there it would not come under attack with tempo after f2-f4. The drawback of that move is that it is a bit too slow.

[b2a) 18...f5 Diagram # Black is playing quite systematically according to his plan.

A) 19.exf5 Let us see what might happen later. It is not good for Black to play here A1) It is stronger for Black to opt for 19...gxf5 after which White has two possibilities. He obtains no advantage with A1a) It is more promising for White to play 20.Qh5! Bd7 21.Rfa1! *(*In the first game, in which taht variation was played, White ried 21.Kh1?! but after Be8 22.Qh3 f4 23.Bd3 Qd7∓ Hamdouchi - Cherniaev, Cannes 1997, he had nothing to brag about.; It is not advantageous for White to continue with 21.Ra3 e4! 22.f4?! exf3 23.Rxf3 Ne5 24.Rg3 h6 25.h4 Be8 26.Qd1 f4 27.Rh3 Bd7!∓; as well as 21.Ra2 Be8 22.Qh3 f4 23.Bd3 Qd7 24.Bf5 Qf7 25.Be6 Qh5 26.Qxh5 Bxh5 27.Nc4 Nd8 28.Bd7 Bf7 29.Rd1 Bxd5 30.Rxd5 Rxb3 31.g3 Nb7= )

A1a1) In case of 21...Be8 White regroups his forces comfortably with 22.Qd1! f4 23.Nf1 e4 This move weakens the a1-h8 diagonal, but White is clearly better after ( 23...f3 24.gxf3! Bh5 25.Be2 Rg8 26.Kh1 Bf7 27.Ng3± ) 24.Nd2 Bg6 25.Bf1 e3 *(*In case of 25...Re8 it is completely safe for White to play 26.Nc4 e3 27.Nxa5 Nxa5 28.Rxa5 exf2+ 29.Kxf2 Be4 30.Qd4+ Re5 31.b4± ) 26.Nf3± and he neutralizes his opponent's activity and he obtains the advantage.;

A1a2) We must also analyze the move 21...e4! since it poses the greatest problems for White. If 22.Qd1 then *(*Besides 22 Qd1, White can play passively 22.Nf1 Rg8! 23.Qe2 Rg6 24.Kh1 Qf8 25.R4a3 Rh6 26.Kg1 Qg7 27.Ng3 Qe5∞ and although the position remains unclear, Black has the initiative. So, all these lines show that after 19 exf5, Black manages somehow to solve his problems, although not effortlessly, therefore I consider the move 19 Qd3!? more precise. ) 22...f4 and later it is possible to play 23.Nc2

A1a21) 23...f3 24.g3 Qe8 since then White has the resource 25.Nde3!? with the idea after Qe5 to regroup his forces with the help of 26.Bd5! combining his threats with the indirect protection of the c3-pawn: Qxc3? ( 26...Rbc8 27.Bxc6 Bxc6 28.Rxa5 Qg7 29.c4± ) 27.Rc4+-;

A1a22) 23...Qe8! This is more precise than 24.Rxa5 White is practically forced to sacrifice the exchange, because after ( 24.Nd4 Ne5 25.Rxa5 f3 26.g3 e3 27.R5a2 e2 28.Nxe2 Nxc4 29.bxc4 fxe2 30.Rxe2 Qg6∓ Black is even better. ) 24...Nxa5 25.Rxa5 f3 26.g3⩲ - and White has a sufficient compensation for the exchange, but not more than that.;

A1a3) He attacks k's a5-pawn and the f1-square is free for White's knight. What should Black do? He loses after 21...f4? because of 22.Bd3+-;

A1b) 20.f4 exf4 21.Nc2 *(*But not 21.Nxf4? Qb6 22.Qd3 Re8-+ Makarova - Sterliagova, Serpukhov 2003. ) because of 21...Bd7! That is an important inclusion for Black, since the usual move ( 21...Ne5 is not so convincing. ) 22.Ra3 Ne5 23.Nxf4 Nxc4 24.bxc4 Rb2 and White has nothig better than to maintain the balance with the line: 25.Nd3 Rb8 26.Nf4=;

B) 19.Qd3!? Diagram # This is an original decision. White should not be in a hurry to clarify the situation in the centre. It is much more popular for him to play the move

B1) About 19...Bh6 - see 18...Bh6.;

B2) In case of 19...fxe4 20.Qxe4 White achieves what he is after. The computer game The King - The Baron, Leiden 2006, continued with: Be6 *(*If 20...Bf5 then 21.Nxf5 gxf5 22.Qe2 Qd7 23.Qh5 Qg7 24.Rd1± with superior prospects for White. ) 21.Qd3 Qd7 22.Bb5! Bxe3 23.Nxe3 Bxb3 24.Rxa5 Qb7 25.Bxc6 Qxc6 26.Ra6 Rb6 27.Rxb6 Qxb6 28.Rb1 - and Black came under a deadly pin and following Ra8 29.c4 Ra3 30.c5! dxc5 31.Qc3 Kg8 32.Qxe5 Qe6 33.Qxc5± White gradually realized his extra pawn.;

B3) Black's attempt to advance the f-pawn as quickly as possible should not worry White too much - 19...Bxe3 20.Qxe3 f4 21.Qd3 f3 because after 22.g3 he maintains the advantage after the straightforward line h5 *(*or *22...Be6 23.Re1 Qd7 24.Re3 Bg4 25.Qd1!? B4) It would be interesting for Black to try 19...Be6!? Here, in comparison to the variations we have analyzed before with a black bishop on e6, White's queen is on d3 and not on the f3-square. Now, White can fight for the advantage with the help of the move 20.Rd1!? (not weakening the shelter of his king) *(*or with the help of the already well tested line *20.f3!? B5b) In the game Brundisch - Ilinca, ICCF 2003, Black played 21...Bh3 22.Rfa1 Qc8 23.Ne1

B5b1) White can counter 23...Qg4 with the line: 24.Nc7! Qd7 25.Nxf3 Rxf3 26.Qxf3 and here he wins the exchange: Qxc7 *(*or 26...Bg4 27.Qf7± ) 27.g4±; B5b2) 23...Bg4 and here White could have combined his threats against the pawns on d6 and f3 with the variation: 24.Ne3!? Bh3 *(*Or 24...Bxe3 25.Qxe3± ) 25.N3c2 Bg4 26.Qxd6 Rf6 27.Qd3±;

19.Qd3

[If White plans to exchange on f5, then he should better choose the prophylactic move 19.Kh1 and that is a good alternative for him. After f5 20.exf5 gxf5 21.f4 Black must make up his mind. There might follow:

A) After 21...Bd7 Fomichenko - Mamjan, Krasnodar 2002, 22.Ra1 Bg7 23.Qd2± White has a slight edge.;

B) 21...Ne7 22.Qh5 Nxd5 23.Nxd5

B1) It is even more dangerous for Black to play 23...Bg7 24.Rfa1! - since Ra8 will be countered by White with *(*while if 24...exf4 then 25.Rxa5 Be5 26.Ra7 Rb7 27.Ra8± Ibragimov - Andreev, Tomsk 1997, and again Black is faced with big problems. ) 25.b4;

B2) 23...Bxf4 24.Nxf4 exf4 25.Qf3 Bb7 26.Qxf4 Be4 27.Rd1± - Black has so many pawn-islands that he must comply with passive defence.;

C) Finally, in case of 21...Qe8 as it was played in the game Saunina - Savushkina, Orsk 2000, White has at his disposal a tactical resource - 22.Bb5! and following Bd7 *(*The exchange-sacrifice 22...Rxb5? 23.Nc7 Qg6 24.Nxb5 Bxf4 is not convincing in view of 25.Raxf4! exf4 26.Nd5 with a variation like Ba6 27.Nxf4 Qf6 28.c4 Bxb5 29.cxb5 Nd4 30.b6 Rb8 31.Nh5 Qe5 32.Re1 Qc5 33.Re7+- which illustrates Black's difficulties.; If 22...exf4 then 23.Nc4 Bg7 24.Re1± ) 23.Nc4! [Black can play 19...Bd7 forcing White's rook to abandon the fourth rank. In that case after 20.Ra2 f5 the game transposes to the Radjabov variation - see 15... Bd7 16 Nce3 Rb8 17 b3 Kh8 18 0-0 g6 19 Qd3 f5 20 Ra2 Bh6. ]

20.Rd1!? A similar position (only with the inclusion of the moves Bd7 and Ra2) was played in the game Anand - Radjabov, Wijk aan Zee 2007, and we analyzed it in out previous chapter. White should better follow the plan, which was realized successfully by the Indian grandmaster, in this position as well. 20...f4

[It is not so good for Black to play 20...Qh4 when his rook is on a4 (analogously to the above-mentioned game), because of 21.exf5 e4 *(*Or 21...Bxf5 22.Nxf5 Rxf5 23.Qe2 and Black cannot play Rbf8? due to 24.Bb5+- ) 22.Qf1 gxf5 23.Bb5 If

29.Rb1! Qd7 30.Rb5± - White has managed to occupy important key-squares. Whenever Black is not in a hurry to clarify the situation in the centre, then as I have already mentioned, the White players should follow the example of the games Topalov - Kasparov, Leon 1998 and Anand - Radjabov, Wijk aan Zee 2007. At first, White must take care of some prophylactic -Ra4-a2 and f2-f3 with the idea to stabilize the centre and to protect his second rank in case Black plays actively on the kingside. After that, he should start attacking Black's weaknesses and mostly his pawns on a5 and d6.;

21.Nc2 f3 22.g3 Bd7 23.Ra2± Diagram # A similar situation arose in variation b2a. Black has no real attacking prospects, White will soon exert pressure against Black's weaknesses, and his f3-pawn has just become one more of them. CONCLUSION In our final chapter, we have dealt with practically the main line of the Chelyabinsk variation, which is frequently played more than a quarter of a century. Tournament practice has shown that White's natural way of developing his initiative - 16...Kh8 17 0-0, does not proise him much after 17...f5, because Black thus manages to activate his forces. White's attempts to neutralize his opponent's counterplay by exchanges often lead to an almost completeexhaustion of available resources. Therefore, I believe that at the contemporary stage of development of that variation, White's hope of obtaining an advantage should be focused on a relatively new plan, based on keeping the position relatively closed. That is the idea behind the move 17 Nce3! - it not only prevents the immediate advance 17...f5, but what is tremendously important is that Black fails to acomplish the typical freeing maneuver with the line: 17...Bxe3 18 Nxe3 Ne7 19 0-0 f5 20 exf5 Nxf5 21 Nxf5 Bxf5 22 Qd5, since he thus loses his a5-pawn. Later, White must hold on to his blocking construction on the central outposts e4 and d5. That plan might seem a bit slow; nevertheless, it is very unpleasant for Black, because he cannot coordinate his pieces in that situation. The connection between his two flanks has been disrupted. The variations we have analyzed show that Black's counterplay on the kingside is not so dangerous for White if he plays carefully, while Black will have problem with his compromised pawn-structure to the end of the game. He will need to find improvements in this variation!

Meanwhile, it often comes to a transposition of moves. Sometimes he tries to create counterplay on the queenside, saving a tempo for castling, or he attempts to remove his opponent's centralized knight with Ne7, having in mind that White cannot capture the bishop on f6, because it is not there. 12.Nc2 This move not only prepares the fastest possible advance a2-a4, which is thematic for White in his fight for the advantage, but also it is important that he activates his most displaced piece. In this chapter, we will analyze all Black's moves, except the most natural and of course the most popular - 12... 0-0. He plays most often in practice a) 12...Be6, b) 12...Ne7, c) 12...Rb8. c) 12...Rb8!? Diagram # Black understands perfectly that White's plan is connected with the pawn-advance a2-a4, so he tries to organize some counterplay along the b-file.

31.bxa5 Kxd5 32.Bb5!+- Black is compl etely helpless against White's two connected far-advanced passed pawns. CONCLUSION In this chapter, we analyze one of the modern lines of the Chelyabinsk variation 11... Bg5 - Black ensures the two-bishop advantage, with the idea that it would compensate the defects of his pawn-structure. In answer to the strongest move for White 12 Nc2, (White centralizes his knight and prepares the crucial pawn-advance a2-a4, which is aimed at exploiting the weakness of the light squares on the queenside.) Black has tried in practice different moves and in this chapter we analyze thoroughly: a) 12...Be6?!, b) 12...Ne7, c) 12...Rb8. It is worth mentioning that Black does not lose after some other rarely played lines, but they all lead to positions without any good prospects for him, while White's game is very easy on the weak squares on both sides of the board. The development of Black's bishop to the e6-square in variation a, is no doubt premature, because at first, that square is not always the best for that bishop - it must be deployed sometimes to b7, or d7 and secondly, Black thus weakens his a6-pawn and White develops his initiative effortlessly with quite natural moves. The logical move 12...Ne7 (Black fights immediately against White's powerful centralized knight) is analyzed in variation b. The basic drawback of that move however is that White can play 13 h4! repelling Black's bishop to the edge of the board and it cannot join in the actions easily from there. After the practically forced line 13...Bh6 14 a4 bxa4 15 Ncb4! Black has to make up his mind between several possibilities: In variation b1, he forces his opponent to sacrifice the exchange on a4. White obtains numerous advantages as compensation - he has complete control over the light squares in the centre and on the queenside. His knight on d5 is all-powerful and he can create a passed pawn on the queenside after he captures Black's weak a6-pawn. Then, it would be practically material equality on the board. Accordingly, Black's extra exchange cannot compensate completely all the defects of his position. In variation b2, Black obtains a more solid, but rather passive position, practically without counterplay, but in a position with material equality. He tries to complete his development and he tries to make a draw by simplifications. The disadvantageous placement of his bishop on h6 is especially empasized in that variation. In the critical position, arising after Black's move 19, White has the pleasant choice between the move, which forces the issue immediately - 20 b2-b4 and the calmer line - 20 b2-b3. The first line leads to considerable simplifications - there are only kingside pawns left on the board, but the presence of heavy piece emphasizes the different power of the opposite-coloured bishops and that dooms Black to a fight for a draw without any active prospects. In the second case, White is not in a hurry to create a passed pawn on the queenside and because of that, there remain many more pawns on the board. In that case, Black must consider the possible advance of his opponent's b-pawn at any moment and he must take care about the protection of his weak a5-pawn too. In variation c) 12...Rb8, Black tries to save a tempo by postponing his castling, with the idea to create some counterplay on the b-file. He plans to counter White's thematic break a2-a4, by exchanging b5xa4 and exerting pressure against the b2-pawn. Despite that, White, in his fight for the opening advantage, is forced to sacrifice temporarily a pawn with 13 a4, followed by 13...bxa4 14 Ncb4! - he covers the b-file in that fashion and he gobbles unavoidably Black's a6-pawn. The key moment in that variatio is the possibility for White to capture c3xb4! in answer to a5xb4. After that, Black's rook is restricted in its movements by his opponent's b4-pawn and it is much easier for White to protect that pawn than the b2-pawn. Later, after White captures Black's a6-pawn, he creates a passed pawn along the b-file. It is essential for White to control the d5-outpost, since he needs to have a piece there. Just like in variation b1, it is a classical resource, in his fight for the advantage, to exchange at an opportune moment his rook for Black's light-squared bishop.

28.Rxb7 CONCLUSION ABOUT CHAPTERS 2 AND 3 The lines we analyze in these chapters are characterized by the fact that Black postpones the move b7-b5 and that enables White to improve quickly the placement of his knight on a3. Among the numerous possibilities for Black to avoid entering the main line of the Chelyabinsk variation (8...b5), only the move 8...Be6 can be considered as a serious alternative for him with chances of obtaining counterplay. In case of 9 Nc4! Rc8! 10 Bxf6 Qxf6, there arises a situation in which White has the possibility of deploying his knight on b6 and then of fortifying it there with the pawn-march a2-a4-a5, preserving a considerable space advantage on the queenside. In case Black plays 10...gxf6,

White places his knight on e3 and he impedes the pawn advances d6-d5 and f6-f5 for Black. Therefore, his active counterplay is reduced only to Bh6 and Qb6. White maintains superior prospects too, but he must play precisely. It is also important that if Black captures on e3, White recaptures there with his f2-pawn and his pressure along the open f-file becomes rather unpleasant for Black. White's unprotected b2-pawn proves to be poisoned in numerous lines. Weighted Error Value: White=0.11 (very precise) /Black=0.15 (very precise) . Mistake: White=1 Black=2 Inaccurate: White=1 --- OK: White=4 Black=7 Best: White=2 --- Strong: White=1 Black=1

23.Nxd6 Ke7 24.Nc4 f6 25.Ra5± White's prospects are superior thanks to his better piece-coordination and Black's weak a6-pawn. CONCLUSION In this chapter, we analyze Black's moves 11, which have not become popular, because they are not in the spirit of the Chelyabinsk variation. White reacts practically always with the standard maneuver 12 Nc2, followed by a2-a4 and a transfer of the knight to e3, or to b4. In answer to 11...Nb8, it is essential for White to exploit his lead in development and to attack immediately Black's queenside with c3-c4. The most popular move for Black here 11...Bb7, reduces his control over the f5-square and he must play very accurately afterwards. The maximum that he can dream about in this line is to reach a worse endgame without any chances of seizing the initiative.

■ Chapter

Chapter 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 Diagram # Thi s move was discovered by the second World Champio Emmanuel Lasker,who tried it back in the year 1910 against Karl Schlechter in game nine of their match for the world crown. White did not react in the most principled fashion indeed - he played 6 Nb3, but it was a very interesting game and after a lively fight, it ended in a draw. The new idea did not gain popularity outright and for a period of several decades, the variation was out of the tournament practice. It came back triumphantly during the 70ies of the past century, when the system with 5...e5, was often and what is even more important quite successfully played by the grandmasters from Chelyabinsk Evgenij Sveshnikov and Gennady Timoschenko. Nowadays, this is one of the most reliable systems in the Sicilian Defenc and its popularity is surpassed only by the Najdorf system. The move 5...e5 has a solid positional basis - it wins a tempo for development and it does not let White obtain an advantage in the centre. Black weakens the d5-square indeed and that becomes the key-point of the developing fight. 6.Ndb5 d6

White centralizes his knight; he increases the pressure in the centre, planning to advance the undermining move a2-a4. He will thus create weaknesses on Black's queenside, freeing the c4-square for his pieces (it would be used most probably by White's light-squared bishop). How can Black counter that plan? In this chapter, we will analyze some rarely played lines like a) 12...Be6, b) 12...Bb7 and c) 12...Nb8, while the next chapter will be devoted to the popular move 12... Rb8. c) 12...Nb8 Diagram # This is a variation of the same idea as in the previous line. the difference is that Black does not lose time for the move Bb7, and he will attack faster White's e4-pawn.

[a) 12...Be6 Diagram # Black determines the placement of his bishop a bit prematurely and he does not prevvent the move a2-a4. Considering the immediate exchange on d5, it has certain drawbacks too and we will prove that. 13.a4 the endgame and gradually he pressed his advantage home. CONCLUSION Therefore, we have analyzed all Black's possibilities besides the most principled and strong 12...Rb8 and 12...Bg5. White obtains the advantage in all the lines without too much of an effort and that explains why all these lines are not so popular at all. White's opening advantage is not so great indeed, but it is important that he can usually transfer from a better middle game into a superior endgame. If we ignore the numerous possible transpositions of moves leading to the variations with 12...Bg5, then it is very interesting for Black to try the idea of GM Gurgenidze, connected with the maneuver of the knight along the route c6-b8-d7-c5(b6). It is essential then, whether Black with play at first 12..Bb7, or he would choose immediately 12...Nb8. In the first case, White should not refrain from his thematic break 13 a4, because then he manages to accomplish his ideal deployment of forces thanks to the additional tempo. After 12...Nb8 however, it is not so easy for White, therefore I consider as more precise the prophylactic move 13 h4!, which was tried successfully by Viswanathan Anand.

Part 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 Diagram # The development of the theory of the Chelyabinsk variation folows in fact two main schemes for White. He tries from time to time to break Black's defence in the system 9 Bxf6 gxf6 10 Nd5. For a while, it looked like that the entire variation might become history, but it proved to be quite solid, coming back from oblivion, so then White returned to the more solid set-up, which this book was devoted to. We will try to summarize for you what is essential in this system at the level of common sense. Black's main trump cards are his bishop pair and some lead in development. White relies on his space advantage and the key factor is his construction - pawn e4+Nd5, which has a vital blockading function. It is of paramount impotance for Black to break that blockade in order to activate his pieces. He attacks the d5 and e4-squares, while White tries to hold on to them at least until he completes the mobilization of his forces. Generally speaking, in that variation Black as a rule makes almost always the same moves - 0-0, Bg5, Ne7, Rb8, Kh8, f5 etc. The order of moves might be different and there are important nuances in practically each different case. Sometime however, it may all come to a transposition of moves. In Chapter 5, we analyze some rarely played lines for Black on move 11. 11...0-0

[Original positions may arise only after 11...Bb7 followed by Nb8-d7, so that Black's set-up resembles a bit the Najdorf variation. This is all connected however with a certain loss of time and he fails to accomplish that plan successfully, because White can reach a superior endgame with precise play. ]

[Chapter 6 deals with the move 11...Ne7 That is a quite purposeful line for Black. White cannot keep the d5-oupost, since his knight on a3 has not entered the actions yet. There are some drawbacks of that line for Black too. After 12.Nxf6+ he loses his two-bishop advantage and his pawn-structure is compromised. White obtains a lead in development, his king is safer and he seizes the initiative with accurate play. ]

[The variation 11...Bg5 12.Nc2 Ne7 which we analyze in Chapter 7, used to be quite popular once - it was like an improved version of the idea 11...Ne7. Still, after the correct reaction for White 13.h4! Bh6 14.a4 bxa4 15.Ncb4 Black fails to obtain an effective counterplay. White's strategy is based on two main ideas. The first is that he can sacrifice the exchange for Black's light-squared bishop. In that case, his knight on d5 becomes practically the master of the board and that in connection with the possibility to create a passed pawn on the queenside provides White with more than sufficient compensation for the exchange (variations a and c). The second important point is that tournament practice has shown that the total exchanges do not guarantee for Black any easy draw, because in particular the position with bishops of opposite colours (white bishop on d5) is rather unpleasant for Black to defend (variation b). ]

12.Nc2 Diagram # This is the main line of the entire system. In Chapter 8, we analyze some of the not so popular lines for Black and just like in Chapter 5, White should pay attention to the idea for Black to transfer his knight along the route c6-b8-d7, followed by Nc5 or Nb6. 12...Bg5

[The move 12...Rb8 has been dealt with in Chapter 9 and it is a tough nut to crack. It was played numerous times by E. Sveshnikov and M. Dvoretskij at the dawn of thedevelopment of the system. White's queenside actions, connected with the break a2-a4 are impeded, because his b2-pawn is hanging. Black used to solve all his problems for a while. Only later White managed to find the right path. If Black does not activate his bishop - then White should prevent that radically - 13.h4! According to the database, that move was played for the first time in the game Nunn - Wirthensohn, Cleveland 1979, and it was considered until today to be the most unpleasant counter measure against Black's move order. ]

13.a4 bxa4 14.Rxa4 Diagram # 14...a5 This is the most popular line for Black,but it is not the only one. His other possibilities are analyzed in Chapter 10 and I recommend to you to pay a close attention to the alternative

[ 14...Bb7 Black succeeded in obtaining satisfactory game until recently, but in the game Kotronias - Timoshenko, Thessaloniki 2007, that variation was dealt a mortal blow. After a series of precise moves, among which we must mention 18 h4! and that of course combined with the "know-how" of Vasilios Kotronias - 21 h5!, White seized the initiative and pressed his advantage home convincingly. ]

15.Bc4 Rb8

[In Chapters 11-12, we have seen Black's attempts to avoid entering the main line. We must pay attention to the move 15...Bd7 (Chapter 12) - because recently Teimour Radjabov played it several times. The theory of that line continues to develop, but in general, it becomes clear, in the variations we analyze, that White's chances of obtaining the advantage are quite real. ]

16.b3 Kh8 Diagram # That is the main "tabia" of the variation and our final Chapter 13 is devoted to it. 17.Nce3!? In that case, White manages to preserve his blocking construction in the centre and that is essential for him to prevent Black's piece counterplay. Later White can take care of Black's weak a5-pawn.

[ The lines after 17.0-0 f5 have been analyzed quite thoroughly before and they do not promise White any real advantage. Still, he has a good alternative to castling in the move 17 Nce3!? ]

21.fxe3 Rxf1+ 22.Bxf1 Qb6 23.Qd2± Diagram # White maintains his positional advantage despite the simplifications. Black's pieces are forced to protect the weaknesses on a5 and d6, while his counterattack against the e3-pawn is almost immaterial. CONCLUSION In this chapter, we have analyzed some lines, which are not so often played by Black: a) 15...Bb7, b) 15...Be6 and c) 15...Kh8. The more recent and fashionable move 15...Bd7 is dealt with in the next chapter, while the move, which has long acquired the reputation to be the main line - 15... Rb8 is analyzed in Chapter 13. Either the alternatives for Black transpose to other variations, or they enable White to obtain a considerable advantage almost efforlessly. In variation a, White manages to create a passed pawn on the queenside and he controls the centre too. Black has practically no real counterplay and that provides Whit with long-term positional pressure in the centre and on the queenside. Black's position is much more solid in variation b, but there the vulnerability of his pawns on a5 and d6 is hurting him,while organizing any effective counterplay is nearly impossible. In variation c, Black is trying to accomplish the thematic pawn-advance f7-f5, and he plays 15. ..Kh8 in order to prepare it. Still, that move does not help him obtain sufficient counter chances, because the position is simplified considerably and his weaknesses on a5 and d6 become even greater liability.

26.Ra5 Nd6 27.Bd5! Bxd5 28.Rxd5± and after the trade of the bishops, Black will have great problems coping with his opponent's passed pawns. CONCLUSION We analyze the move 11...Ne7 in this chapter. Its drawbacks are evident - after the natural reaction 12 Nxf6+ gxf6, Black loses his couple of bishops and his kingside pawn-structure isconsiderabl y weakened. Things are not so simple though, Black obtains some dynamic pluses, since he gains access to the semi-open g-file and his pawn-mass in the centre is compact and mobile. In connection with that, White must organize quickly queenside pressure and he must bring his knight on a3 closer to the centre. The line 13 Nc2 seems to be the best for him under the circumstances. After the natural response 13...Bb7 14 Bd3, there are only two principled lines for Black - 14...f5 - variation a; and 14...d5 - variation b. Black's other possibilities, as you can see in the variations of out analysis, do not pose any serious problems for White in his fight for the opening advantage. In variation a, Black disrupts his opponent's pawn-structure on the kingside and he corrects slightly his own, but he loses plenty of valuable time in doing that. White obtains a healthy lead in development, he occupies the g-file and seizes the initiative on the queenside with the undermining move a2-a4, after which Black's monarch has no safe shelter. In variation b, Black ignores the defects of his pawn-structure and he acts aggressively in the centre, advancing his e and f-pawns. White is practically forced to sacrifice a piece in his fight for the advantage. He obtains three dangerous passed pawns on the queenside and he neutralizes Black's initiative on the kingside and in the centre. As we can see in our analysis, Black can hardly contain White's passed pawns.

16.a4 bxa4 17.Rxa4± - Black has managed to advance his f-pawn indeed, but his position is considerably worse. His pieces are passive, he has no counterplay and his queenside is endangered, while his king is unsafe as well. CONCLUSION We have analyzed in this chapter all weak option for Black against 9 Nd5, as well as the line 9...Be7 10 Bxf6 gxf6. The main drawback of the last variation is that after 10 Bxf6, Black does not respond with the necessary move 10... Bxf6, and he plays 10... gxf6, analogously to the variation a). Accordingly, simmilarly to variation a, he has problems, connected with his inferior pawn-structure and the unfavourable placement of his dark-squared bishop, which requires plenty of valuable time to be activated. In all these variations, White often deprives completely Black of any counterplay. White's plan also includes the undermining move a2-a4, with the idea to create objects for attack on the queenside. Black has great problems to undouble his pawns with f6-f5, but even if he manages to do that, White maintains his advantage, since he suceeds in organizing active actions during that time on the queenside. Variation b) is often played with the idea to make a quick draw. White however, can try to obtain the advantage, quite deservedly so, with the help of the sharp line - 11.c4. In variation b1), Black captures the e4-pawn indeed, but he falls behind in development and he is completely unprepared for opening of the game on the queenside. Still, White needs to play very accurately, for example the move 15 Ke2, which used to be considered as the best, would not provide any advantage for him. Meanwhile, he is clearly better after 15 Kf1. In variation b2), Black plays 11...b4 and he does not allow his opponent to open the c-file, therefore his position looks more solid, although he has certain problems to organize counterplay. White maintains a slight, but stable advantage practically in all the variations.

Black is happy that he has the two-bishop advantage, some lead in development and seemingly a very solid position. White, in his stead, is trying to prove that his control over the central squares, the domination over the d5-outpost and his queenside initiative is worth much more than Black's above-mentioned achievements. Black has tried in this position to preserve his b5-pawn with a) 13... Rb8, but he has played in practice most of all b) 13.. . bxa4. b) 13...bxa4 This is the most popular move for Black. He complies with the appearance of a weak pawn on his queenside, but opens the b-file in order to organize some counterplay.

[a) 13...Rb8 Black attempts to maintain his pawn on b5, so that White's bishop cannot occupy its most favourable placement on the c4-square. The main drawback of that move however is that Black's b5-pawn becomes a liability and its defence overburdens his forces. 14.axb5 axb5 15.Bd3 Diagram # White's plan is rather simple. He wishes to attack Black's b5-pawn with all his pieces and to occupy the a-file, while later his actions will depend on circumstances. Black has played here mainly a1) 15... Be6, but it looks like his most resilient defensive move is a2) 15...Ne7. a2)

CONCLUSION In this chapter we havve started anylizing the main lines of the Chelyabinsk variation - 11... 0-0 12 Nc2 Bg5 13 a4. Here, Black has two possibilities, if he is reluctant to remain a pawn down - a) 13...Rb8 and b) 13...bxa4. In variation a, after 13...Rb8 14 axb5 axb5 15 Bd3, there arises a position, in which Black's weakness on b5 is hurting. He has played most of all 15...Be6, but after 16 Qe2! White wins that pawn immediately. Black can hardly prove any compensation for it. It is stronger for him to play 15...Ne7, with the idea to facilitate his defence with exchanges. Still, it is difficult for Black to activate his forces then, because they are burdened with the protection of the b5-pawn and that is well illustrated by the variations in the chapter. Naturally, it is stronger for Black to capture 13...bxa4. After 14 Rxa4, he has numerous possibilities and the most popular line for him is 14...a5, which will be dealt with in the next chapters. Here, we analyze Black's all other alternatives. In answer to 14... Rb8 and 14...f5 it is very good for White to play 15 h4! in order to repel Black's bishop to a unfavourable position. White obtains a great advantage in both cases by simple means. Black tries sometimes the move 14...Nb8 too, but the maneuver of the knight to the c5-square is too slow. In variation b1, Black tries to facilitate his defence by simplifying, but White then controls the light squares in the centre and he has powerful pressure against the a and d-pawns. In variation b2, Black plays 14...Kh8, planning to open the f-file in order to organize counterplay on the kingside. That leads to the occupation by White of the important central squares e4 and d5. In variation b3, Black manages after 14...Bb7 15 Bc4 Na5 16 Ba2 Bc6 17 Ra3 Bb5, to activate his light pieces andthat forces White to act with maximum precision. In the main line, it is essential for him to avoid the popular variation, in which he wins the exchange, because there Black's chances of making a draw are considerable. Therefore, the novelty of the Greek grandmaster V. Kotronias looks very attractive - 21 h5! and that move enables White to avoid the sharp variations, creating pressure against Black's weak pawns in a rather calm situation.

Presently, it can still be considered as not so thoroughly analyzed. Black eyes White's rook on a4 and in some lines he plans to advance his rook-pawn a5-a4, in order to provide it with adequate protection and to fix White's pawn on the b2-square. Similar developments may turn out to be rather unfavourable for White. 16.Nce3!? I believe this move provides White with maximal chances of obtaining an edge in the opening. In order for you to understand better the advantages of that move, we will show you how black can react against White's most offten played lines: 1) 16 Ra2 and 2) 16 0-0.

[2) 16.0-0 Diagram # That line creates more problems for Black, but at the same time, it presents him with numerous possibilities. It is amazing, but even Teimour Radjabov has tried different lines for Black here.

A) 16...Nb4!? Black takes the a2-square from White's rook and he opts for tactical play. That is quite natural move indeed, but it deserves attention for White to try here the typical positional sacrifice for that scheme: 17.Ra3 ( 17.Ncxb4 Bxa4 18.Qxa4 axb4 19.Qxb4⩲ - and White has a pawn for the exchange and an almighty knight on the d5-outpost, as well as a potentially dangerous passed pawn along the b-file. )

A1) In case Black refrains from the immediate capturing on d5 in favour of the intermediate move 17...Rc8?! he risks a lot, because of the line: 18.cxb4! Here, in case of A1a) while in case of 18...axb4 then 19.Ra6 Rxc4 20.Rxd6 and White has the unpleasant threats 21 Rxd7 and 21 Nb6. In the game Volokitin - Radjabov, Biel 2006, there followed b3 21.Nce3 Rd4 and here instead of A1a1) it is much more interesting for White to continue with 22.Qf3!? - he protec ts his e4-pawn with that move and he threatens 23 Nf5, forcing his opponent to clarify his intentions concerning his rook on d4. In case of

A1a11) while following 22...Be7 White has at his disposal the beautiful tactical line: 23.Rxd7! Qxd7 24.Qg3! The appearance of the knight on f5 spells great trouble for Black. After Rxe4 White follows with *(*It is bad for him to play 24...g6 25.Qxe5± because his rook and bishop are hanging,; while after 24...f6 25.Nf5 Bc5 26.Nxd4 Bxd4 27.Qxb3± White remains with a solid extra pawn and good winning chances.; Therefore, Black has nothing better than to enter an endgame with heavy pieces, being a pawn down: 24...Qe6

25.Nf5 Bf6 26.Nxf6+ Qxf6 27.Nxd4 exd4 28.Qxb3± ) 25.Nf5!+- anyway and Black can capture neither knight.;

A1a12) 22...g6 White can activate his passive rook with 23.Ra1;

A1a2) 22.Qxb3 Qc8! 23.Qc2 Be6 24.Rc6 Qb8 25.Rb1 Bxe3! 26.Nxe3 Rfd8⇄ with sufficient counterplay for Black,;

A1b) 18...Rxc4?! White counters with 19.bxa5 Rxe4 20.a6 Ra4 21.Rxa4 Bxa4 22.Qe2± and it would be very difficult for Black to fight against the powerful passed a-pawn,;

A2) 17...Nxd5 18.Bxd5 *(*It is also possible for White to play 18.Qxd5 Be6 19.Qd3 Qc7 20.Bd5 Rab8 21.b4 axb4 22.Nxb4 but after Qc5 23.Bxe6 fxe6 24.Ra6 Rfc8! 25.Qxd6 Qxd6 26.Rxd6 Rxc3± White has only minimal chances of winning, mostly thanks to his superior pawn-structure. Therefore,it is better for him to capture on d5 with the bishop. ) 18...Rb8 19.Ra2!? *(*It deserves attention for White to slow down with the advance of the b-pawn for a while. He should better double his rooks along the rook-file first. That is much trickier than the immediate straightforward line: 19.b4 axb4 20.Nxb4! Bb5 21.Re1 Qe7 22.Qf3 Rfc8 23.Rea1± although even then White maintains some minimal edge, thanks to his pressure against the f7-square and the threat of penetrating to the seventh rank. ) 19...a4 *(*If Black refrains from that move and he plays instead 19...g6 then after *20.Qf3!? Bxa4 22.Qxa4± White has accomplished the thematic exchange sacrifice for that variation and he maintains superior prospects. He dominates on the a-file and his bishop on d5 restricts the mobility of Black's rooks considerably. White will follow with advancing his queenside pawns after retreating his knight from b4.;

B) 16...Nd4 You can see Black's great problems in that variation in the game of the Indian grandmaster against the greatest specialist of that variation. 17.Ra2 Ne6 *(*The trade on c3 does not look so attractive to Black. C) Naturally, Blac is not obliged to play so aggressively and he can opt for much calmer lines: 16...Kh8 17.Nce3 that variation will be analyzed after a different move-order - see 16 Nce3.;

D) In case of 16...Rb8 17.Ra2 Kh8 it is very good for White to play 18.Nde3!

17.b3!? This is the most ambitious decision for White. The idea should be well familiar to our readers. White postpones his castling short, planning to push h2-h4 at some moment.

25.Qc2!?⩱ and White has more than sufficient compensation for the sacrificed pawn. He can increase the pressure by trebling his heavy pieces along the h-file, or by advancing his f4-pawn, placing his queen on the f2-square in advance.
CONCLUSION In this chapter, we have dealt with one of the most fashionable and not so well analyzed lines of the Chelyabinsk variation, which was introduced into the high-level tournament practice by GM Teimour Radjabov. Presently, after 15...Bd7!? White often encounters problems in his attempts to obtain an advantage in the opening. Therefore, we have analyzed in this chapter three possibilities for White and the most interesting are 16 0-0 and 16 Nce3!?. In the first case, White must be ready to sacrifice the exchange for a pawn, positional compensation and long-lasting initiative. The second possibility looks quite promising too. White can continue with an aggressive gambit plan advancing his h-pawn. That idea is particularly effective when Black's bishop is on d7.

White normally plays Nc3 before venturing f2-f4, but I did think it was worth checking out what happens if White tries it a move earlier. It's very rarely played on move four, and it can lead to great complications. B33: Sicilian: Pelikan and Sveshnikov Variations Gongora Reyes,Maikel: 'Gongora,M: 'Inf 92/(128)" 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4!? 19...Qc7 20.Nh5+!? I saw this beforehand and wasn't terribly concerned. White lacks the necessary firepower to deliver either mate or perpetual check, so this may be a waste of time. Then again, I don't really know what to suggest here for White.

11.Bxa7 QUESTION: Black is a pawn down, and yet you are encouraging us to enter this position. Is our sacrifice sound? --- ANSWER: Your writer - a lifelong positional player - telling you to go ahead and speculate with such a risky sacrifice (when the comp says "don't do it!") is like the chain smoker who lectures his children on the dangers of tobacco. I realize that when it comes to risky opening sacrifices, it's a lot better to be a nay-sayer than a yea-sayer. Opening gambits, like acne, tend to be out of our system once we leave adolescence. Not so with this line of the Ulfie, where we are forced to relive our childhood. Empirically speaking, I'm not certain it is 100% sound. Yet from a practical standpoint, I believe it very much is. The fact that Black, a strong GM rated 2642, was willing to chance it should offer us encouragement. --- For our pawn, we get: -- 1. A lead in development, since White loses time extricating his bishop. -- 2. We turn our development into some kind of kingside attack, as seen in this game. --- For an annotator to cop out with an evaluation of "unclear" - as I'm attempting to do now! - is the equivalent of the priest who uses the standard formula of "it's just one of God's unfathomable mysteries" to explain away some patent scriptural contradiction. But I can't help it. The ensuing position really is unclear! I admit that it is a high-risk undertaking, like being an astronaut in the 1950s, in that your chances of death or glory seem about equivalent. All I can tell you from my personal experience is that the sacrifice feels sound. I am not an advocate of being a slave to utility on the chessboard. Sometimes we launch a risky idea for the sheer fun of it. When we were kids our mothers handed us all the universal mom-admonition: "Don't play with your food!" But what our collective mothers never understood was the argument: "Why not? It's fun!" 11...Be7 We just calmly develop and castle.

[ The comp declares mate in six, while pointing out that 23...Rf4! was mate in four. --- SUMMARY: Our evaluations are distinguished by the angle from which they are viewed. An optimist may look at a sacrificial idea and dream "Promising!", while the cautious player may scream "Folly!". In the case of our Ulfie sacrifice, I urge you not to be preoccupied with the "How much?" part of the equation. At club level it is highly unlikely that White will know the analysis of this variation (unless they have the brilliant insight to buy this awesome book!). [WARNING: 14...Qc8 (covering f5) 15.c4 is much worse than the same position with the queen on d8, especially since after e4 16.Be2 Bg7 White does not have to stop to defend b2 but can play 17.cxb5 , as Bxb2 18.Nc4 now wins material. ]
[However, 14...Qd7 is possible; Black would like to play 15 Qh5 Rg8, but as Rogozenko indicates, White can cross Black's plans with 15.Nc2 Bg7 16.a4 e4 17.Be2 0-0 18.axb5 axb5 19.Qd2 . Black can certainly play this but he supposedly remains more flexibly placed to meet this plan of early queenside play if he starts with 14...Bg7 (see the next note). ]

15.Qh5

This is the same position as in the last note, except that Black's queen is on b6 rather than d7, which supposedly represents an improvement, although if Black's next move is going to be ...Qb7 then it doesn't make much difference. In this version perhaps Black's next move ought to be 19... Ng6, when the battle is for and against the move ...f4. *(*Alexander Galkin wrote a long article about this line in 'New in Chess Yearbook 80', in which he advocated 19.Rxa8 Rxa8 20.Qd2 for White, followed up usually by the trip Qg5-f5-d7 to try and tie Black down to the b5-pawn. )]
[TIP: According to Galkin Black should not allow the b5-pawn to become a target like this, but rather play 15.Nc2 0-0 16.a4 e4 17.Be2 bxa4 18.Rxa4 Qb6 . One can see a lot of sense in this – the b-pawn on b5 is an ugly fixed weakness with the knight on c2 covering b4, while on a5 it prevents the knight coming in on c6. Moreover, with the pawn weaknesses on the queenside offset on different files there is always counterplay against one of White's queenside pawns. Lastly, Black avoids the immediate weakening of his attacking potential by the exchange of a pair of rooks. This position was actually reached in D.Sadvakasov-A.Khalifman, Russian Team Championship 2005, when White wasn't able to show any edge after . 15...e4 16.Bc2 0-0

[ This has been an extremely popular tabiya and Rogozenko devotes thirty closely packed pages to the variations arising over the next few moves. It seems that the lines have been mined out, although you never know, and Black certainly has to know what he's doing if he doesn't want to get mated horribly. I've confined myself to repertoire coverage for Black and providing explanation which I hope will help remember the recommended path, rather than discussing possible alternatives. At this point some people – Yakovich for example – think that 16...Qc8 is more accurate so that 17.Rad1 can be met with Qc5 at once, but it's certainly simpler to play the same way against both 17 Rad1 and 17 Rae1 and I've chosen to assume Black's going to do so. ]

[ 17.Rad1 is less pressing since this rook isn't going to help mate Black. After Qc8 (the next note explains why the queen is well placed here), White needs to bring his knight into the game, so his candidate moves are either 18 Bb3 or 18 Bb1:

11...Ne7

[ 11...Be6 is not a mistake, but 12.0-0 f5 13.Qh5 transposes to lines Black usually prefers to avoid these days (see the section on 10...f5 11 Bd3 Be6 12 Qh5 in the next chapter). ]

12.Nxe7 NOTE: As usual allowing ...Nxd5 and being forced to recapture with a pawn

His problem is that the natural 0-0 *(*while 14...fxe4 15.Bxe4 Rb8 16.Nb4 Qc7 17.Qd3 enables White to use the fact neither side has castled to blockade f5 and gain the advantage ) is good for White after 15.Qh5 , when he still has the possibility to castle queenside (after f4 16.g3 , for example). ]

[ That leaves: 13.c3 f5 14.Nc2 :

A) The problem with 14...Bb7 is that after 15.exf5 Bxg2? *(*so 15...0-0 16.0-0 25 is the best Black can do, transposing to note 'a' to Black's 15th in Game 25*;* instead 15...Qh4 has a bad reputation, although it isn't obviously terrible after 16.Ne3 d5 17.0-0 0-0 ) loses to 16.Rg1 .;

B) The main line is 14...Qb7 when White has two promising ideas:

B1) 15.Qf3 0-0 16.Ne3 f4 (regrettably this is forced) 17.Nd5 Be6 18.g4 (a good move to fight against ...Bxd5, exd5 ...f5) b4! 19.c4 *(*or 19.Nxb4 a5 ) 19...Bxd5 , and now Black gains sufficient activity for his bishop after 20.cxd5 *(*or 20.exd5 e4! ) 20...Bf6 , as in S.Dolmatov-V.Topalov, Groningen 1993.;

B2) 15.f3 (White renews the threat of exf5, whereas 15 exf5 Qxg2 is more double-edged) f4 (Black doesn't have much choice) reaches a position from which Black hasn't done very well. Rogozenko gives the game T.Luther-J. Gustafsson, Panormo 2001, which went 16.Nb4 0-0 17.Bc2 a5 18.Nd5 Be6 19.g4 and White obtained a positional advantage and won in the end, although at this moment why Black couldn't have got to it directly like Topalov with b4 20.c4 Bxd5 21.cxd5 ( 21.exd5 e4; or 21.Qxd5 Qa7 ) 21...Bf6 -d8 and so on I don't know; Black seems fine to me.;

B3) 15.--;

C) 14...Qg5!? is the main alternative: White has many lines but Rogozenko likes 15.Qe2 Bb7 ( 15...Qxg2 16.0-0-0 is very dangerous;; 15...0-0 16.h4 Qxg2 is a better shot, when Rogozenko prefers White after 17.0-0-0 Qg4 18.f3 Qf4+ 19.Kb1 fxe4 20.Bxe4 Rb8 21.Rxd6 a5 , but both sides have chances ) 16.Ne3 ( 16.Bxb5+ is tempting, but after Kf8 17.Bd3 Qxg2 Black conquers e4, which makes up for the missing b-pawn and the dislocation of his king ) 16...Bxe4 ( 16...fxe4 17.Bxb5+ and Bc4 is good now that g2 is covered ) 17.Bxe4 fxe4 18.h4 Qg6 19.g4 h5 20.Rg1 Bh6 21.g5 Bg7 22.Nd5 Rc8 23.0-0-0 . These moves weren't forced, of course, but the result is a very sharp position where White seems to be better.;

[ Instead 13.c4 f5 14.0-0 0-0 transposes to Game 24, but first we will return to 13 0-0: ]

13...0-0 Here White's two main options are 14 c4 (see Game 24) and 14 c3 (the subject of Game 25). Instead 14.Qf3 has as usual to be dealt with by the breakthrough 14...f5 15.exf5 d5 , when 16.Qxd5 Bb7 17.Qb3 e4 18.Be2 Qg5

A2) Instead White really has to develop his light-squared bishop to g2 (e2 is possible but represents a success for Black, since the bishop fights neither for f5 nor d5): 15.g3 Nxd5 (Black should get this in before White can recapture with the bishop) 16.Nxd5 0-0 17.Bg2 leads to positions very similar to Game 31. The most accurate way for Black to develop these notions is considered to be a5! 18.0-0 f5 . The point of playing precisely these two moves is that they turn out to be the perfect ones to counter White's 19.Qh5 . Black has the excellent rejoinder b4! , taking advantage of White's momentary lack of central control to inflict weaknesses on the queenside. To make this move work he needs to have ...f5 in rather than ...Rb8, so that ...e4 is possible in some lines. Rogozenko gives the continuation 20.Rad1 *(*the point of the pawn sacrifice is 20.cxb4 axb4 21.Nxb4 e4 , illustrating the need for 18...f5, after which Black is much better ) 20...bxc3 21.Nxc3 Rb8 22.Rd2 e4 23.Rfd1 Be5 24.f4 exf3 25.Bxf3 Kh8 with a position-type where Black is better: his strongly entrenched bishop (of course the d-pawn is going to stay where it is for a long time) is miles better than White's feeble knight, he has the possibility of ...f4 (also after Nd5 ...Bxd5, Bxd5 this can be strong, as in some games by Kramnik), and the b8-rook and a5-pawn between them restrain White's majority totally; b2 is no more than a target. In view of this White has to develop his queen more modestly on e2, and the game goes on, along the lines I indicated above and indeed of Game 31.;

A3) 15.--;

B) Unsurprisingly an immediate 14.g3 is a more critical try, as we'll see in Game 31.;

Returning to 13...0-0: 14.Nce3 Be6 Black has also tried 14...Bd7, 14...Bg6 and 14... Be4, but to me the text seems so natural and so much more attuned to the basic idea of the Sveshnikov – to fight for d5 – that I'm going to concentrate on it. 15.Bd3 White's moves are all naturally aimed at the light squares; Qh5, 0-0 and then perhaps a4 will typically follow, all seeking to get at Black's weakened light square complex. 15...f5 No comment necessary. Black has to play this move to allow his rook to join the fight for f5. Now we reach an important theoretical divide: 16.--

[ a) 16.Bc2 hopes for an early forced draw, as we will see in Game 32. ]

[b) 16.Qh5 is quite a natural move, much debated over the years but now believed not to give White any advantage as Game 33 reveals. ]
[c) Game 34's 16.0-0 has replaced 16 Qh5 of late as the vogue continuation. ]

17...Qb6 18.Nc2 Kf8 Castling by hand gets the king to safety.
[The untried 18...a5 , intending ...b5-b4, also looks playable. ]
19.a4 This move was played in all 25 games in my database. It breaks up Black's queenside pawns. As usual, Black achieves more than sufficient play against b2.
19...bxa4 20.Nb4 e4 Black may later transfer a piece - probably the knight - to e5.
[Note that 20...a5 doesn't eject the knight, since it is met by 21.Qxa4 . ]
21.Qxa4
[ 21.Rxa4 a5 22.Nc6 Qxb2 also looks good for Black. ]
21...f4! Suddenly, White's king doesn't look all that safe; I already prefer Black's position. 22.Qa5 Qb7 23.Bxa6 Principle: If something looks too good to be true, it probably isn't. The position is fun, in a completely unsettling way. White wins a not-so-important pawn, while Black finds compensation from the fact that White loses time untangling from the pin. The computer still favours Black here, despite White's extra pawn. 23...Qd7! The queen heads in the direction of the white king.

The trouble is that Black looks better in the ending, since he has connected and passed e- and f-pawns which are about to race down the board. White will race his b-pawn down too, but one versus two is not a good omen in the coming ending. 35.b4 f5 36.b5 Ne3+ 37.Kb3 Rb8 38.c4

I have some awful news for you: we are still in theory! Now the game becomes a promotion race, for which Black is better equipped.

[ 38.Ra4 was an attempted improvement, which turned out to be no improvement. After Bg7 39.Ng3 Kf7 40.Nxf5 Nxf5 41.Rxe4 Be5 White's passed b-pawn wasn't enough and Black converted his extra piece, J.Achermann-C.Gilbert, correspondence 2011. ]

38...f4 39.Nd4 f3 40.Nc6 Rb6! Using a full rook to blockade a single passed pawn seems like a bad deal for Black. But not doing so, and allowing the b-pawn to shoot forward, would have been a lot worse. The comps still prefer Black here. 41.Bc8 Intending Bh3, halting Black's passed f-pawn. 41...Bg5!

[ It takes hours to build a winning position and a fraction of inattention to ruin it. 41...f2?! allows White to defend after 42.Bh3 Bf4 43.Ra2! Ng4 44.Kc3 Be3 45.Ra8+ Kf7 46.Nd4 Nxh2 47.Ra6! Rb8 48.Rxd6 Re8 . The comp assesses this mess as equal. ]

42.Bh3 EXERCISE (planning): It appears as if Black is in trouble. After all, his passed f-pawn is blocked from promotion on f1 and White may even toy with Ra6 ideas. Find the single reply which keeps the advantage in Black's hands. 42...Nxd5!! ANSWER: Clearance. Black sacrifices his knight to break up White's pawns and clear the path for his e-pawn. 43.Bf5! The only move.

58...Kf4 White is only one pawn down, yet it feels as if his position hasn't eaten in a week. The rook ending is winning for Black. 59.Rb1 c4 60.Rf1+ Ke5 61.Rc1 Kd4 62.Rd1+ Kc3! 63.Rb1 Kc2 64.Rb4 c3 65.Ke3 Kc1! 66.Rxe4 Rxb5 67.Rxg4 Kb2 It becomes clear that Black will win a rook. The only question is: can White hold a draw with his king and h-pawn? The answer is no. Black's king gets back in time.

D) b) 13.g3 Bg5 14.Bg2 a5 (this is considered best, taking control of b4 so that to reach d5 the knight has to go to e3, where it can be taken by the g5-bishop; the significance of that exchange is that White can no longer win the fight for d5 by leaving Black with a minor piece which cannot challenge that square) 15.a3 *(*this is not really necessary but 15.0-0 Ne7 16.Nce3 Bxe3 17.Nxe3 Be6 is fine for Black too; White's only positive idea is f4, but Black can meet that comfortably with ...f6 and White has only weakened himself ) 15...Ne7 16.Nce3 Be6 ( 16...Bxe3 immediately is also fine but Radjabov prefers to keep the tension ) 17.Nxe7+ Qxe7 18.Nf5 Qd7 and White's adventure had achieved nothing, since 19.Nxd6? terrible for him, in M.Bartel-T.Radjabov, FIDE World Championship, Tripoli 2004.;

E) c) 13.Bd3 is well met by Be6 . White has to defend d5 again with 14.Nce3 , but Black can then exchange his worse bishop for the e3-knight: Bg5 15.0-0 Ne7 (Black doesn't need to trade the knight on e3 until the bishop leaves the d-file, since Nxe7+ ...Qxe7, Nd5 would allow the desirable, for Black, ...Bxd5, exd5) 16.Bc2 Bxe3 17.Nxe3 b4 and Black is fine.;

F1) a) 14.g3 Be6 15.Bg2 Qd7 16.0-0 Bd8 17.Qd3 a5 18.Nce3 Ne7 saw Black execute his plan and equalize in A.Shirov-A.Timofeev, Sarajevo 2005. Black can always trade the minor pieces on d5 and reach an endgame which will probably be drawish because of the passive bishop on g2. It needs to be within reach of d5 to make these positions prospectful for White; that is one of the motives behind Karjakin's set-up in Game 22.;

F2) b) 14.a3 Be6 15.Ncb4 Nxb4 16.axb4 (we've seen this motif before in the notes to Game 15) was tried in the high-profile encounter V.Topalov-P. 13.a4 Since Black hasn't set out to prevent it, this is far and away White's most natural and commonest move. NOTE: It helps White to remove the b5-pawn by forcing ...bxa4 since it means that Black cannot choose his moment for ...b4, either leaving a backward c-pawn on the open file or eroding White's control of d4, to say nothing of exposing the a-pawn on the open file. White has three alternatives, none of which inspires much confidence:

[a) 13.g3 just doesn't devote itself to the critical issues of d5 and the queenside pawns enough, and was very thematically dealt with in Xie Jun-A.Galliamova, 6th matchgame, Kazan 1999: Ne7 14.Ncb4 Be6 15.Bg2 a5 16.Nxe7+ Qxe7 17.Nd5 Qb7 18.0-0 . Black's sequence up to here is worth noting carefully; with the bishop on g2 White just doesn't have the firepower to keep control of d5 properly and Black could now have played the thematic Bxd5 *(*not that there was anything wrong with 18...b4 19.c4 Rfc8 as in the game ) 19.Qxd5 Qxd5 20.exd5 . TIP: This opposite-coloured bishop and double rook ending is almost always better for Black with or without queens; he can take the bishop to b6 and play ...f5, while White's bishop has very few active prospects. ]

[After 13.g3 Ne7 , Nigel Short recently tried the grotesque 14.h4 Bh6 15.Bh3?! against former Avignon Pope Veselin Topalov at Wijk aan Zee 2005. Topalov could perfectly well have played Be6 – exchanging on e6 and giving Black back control of d5 is not something White is keen to do – but played even more simply: ( 15...Bxh3 16.Rxh3 a5 17.Kf1 Rc8 18.Nce3 Bxe3 19.Nxe3 Qd7 , and Black was better. NOTE: Topalov's combination of ...a5 and ... Bg5 cut off the knight on c2 from d5; as a result White was even unable to prevent the ...d5-break. )]

[I said 'grotesque', but Judit Polgar recently tried the same idea in a slightly different order against Topalov in their Bilbao blindfold match, with 13.h4 Bh6 14.g3 . I don't know why Topalov didn't play the thematic Ne7 now; *(*in fact he preferred 14...Rb8 15.Bh3 Bxh3 16.Rxh3 a5 17.Nce3 . )]

[b) 13.Be2 seems natural but can be dealt with in the same sort of way: Be6 14.0-0 Ne7 15.Ncb4 a5 16.Nxe7+ Qxe7 17.Nd5 Qb7 18.Qd3 Bxd5 19.Qxd5 Qxd5 20.exd5 and again Black is better, E. Dervishi-M.Krasenkow, European Championship, Ohrid 2001 (Black won the endgame in a very typical fashion well worth playing through). ]

[c) 13.h4 , on the other hand, errs rather on the side of vigorousness. White, obviously isn't going to follow up by quietly castling; his principal idea is Bh6 14.g4 *(*although 14.g3 is possible; see above ) and now 14...Bf4 is usual *(*although

14...f6 is clearly possible ) . Then 15.Qf3 is usually what White plays, hoping just to win a pawn. Black can either just develop (with say 15...Re8 or 15...Bb7) and gambit the pawn, or sensibly develop with Be6 (intending to follow up with ...Bxd5, while 16 Nxf4 can be met with 16...Qf6 and so doesn't win a pawn), when 16.Rd1 Bxd5 17.Rxd5 Qa5 is quite annoying (e.g. 18.a3 ( 18.Rxd6 Rac8 makes things worse ) 18...Bc1 ), so White can't keep the d-file open. ]

13...bxa4

[ WARNING: 13...Rb8 14.axb5 axb5 is a very bad idea; b5 is weak and, almost worse, the c2-knight can rest undisturbed on b4 and thus White easily maintains d5. Even if Black should then manage to swap off the two knights for his own knight and bishop, White would be able to play b4 with a huge advantage in the opposite-coloured bishop position, since b5 is impossible to defend and even trading it for c3 is likely to leave White much better with his passed b-pawn and control of d5. ]

14.Rxa4

[ 14.Nce3 is a rare move aiming to take on a4 with the queen. In the very recent game L-D.Nisipeanu-L.Van Wely, European Club Cup, Fuegen 2006, White associated it with the extravagant idea to castle queenside after Bxe3 15.Nxe3 Rb8 16.Qxa4 Ne7

A) This has the computers reeling in disbelief, but if White wants to play for a win it's really the only way since 17.Rd1 Rxb2 18.Nc4 ( 18.Bxa6 and a draw offer is better ) 18...Rb8 19.Nxd6 allows Bg4 20.f3 Be6 with the better prospects for Black (Nisipeanu).;

B) 17.0-0-0 . Time will tell how Nisipeanu's idea should best be met, but Rogozenko's suggestion to wait with 17...Qc7 to see where White's king's bishop is going (18 Bc4 is met by 18...Bb7 and 18 Bd3 with 18...Be6) is pretty sensible. It's hard to imagine that Black can be worse here. ]

14...a5

[ 14...Bb7 is rather like the 11...Bb7 of Chapter Three, but if Black wanted to play ... Bb7, he didn't need to bother putting the other bishop on g5. The move was once associated with a specific idea to prevent White castling: 15.Bc4 Na5 16.Ba2 Bc6 17.Ra3 Bb5 , but in order to achieve this Black has had to put all his minor pieces in stupid positions and abandon the fight for d5, and it turns out that White is much better after 18.h4 Bh6 19.Nce3 Bxe3 20.Nxe3 Rc8 21.Nf5 . ]

[ Meanwhile 14...Rb8 aims to swap the weak a-pawn for the potentially dangerous b-pawn, but the price is too high and after 15.h4 Bh6 16.Bxa6 Rxb2 17.Bxc8 Qxc8 18.Rc4 White is much better – he has sidelined the bishop, managed to exchange light-squared bishops, and can look forward to exchanging knights and dominating d5. ]

15.Bc4

[ 15.Bb5 hopes either for an exchange of bishops after Bd7 ( or for 15...Bb7 16.0-0 Ne7 17.Bc4 , when White can maintain at least a slight edge. )]

[ Instead of committing the c8-bishop Black should challenge the knight at once with 15.Bb5 Ne7 16.Nxe7+ ( 16.Nce3 is met as usual by Bxe3; while 16.Ncb4 , as we saw in the notes to Smeets-Carlsen, allows Bd7 17.Nxe7+ Bxe7! 18.Nc6 Qe8 ) 16...Qxe7 ( this was the point of 16 Nxe7+; now 16...Bxe7 can be met by 17.Ne3 ) 17.Nb4 , and now Black can either play the obscure Bh3!? ( or the approved equalizer 17...Bg4 , with the point that 18.Qa1 Qb7! 19.Bc6 Qb6 20.Bxa8 Qb5! forces a draw – 21.f3 axb4 22.fxg4 Qd3 and perpetual. )]

15...Rb8

[ This is a very natural and by far the commonest move – it seems so obvious that the rook needs to be here, and no other piece's destination is quite so clear. But Black does have a good and (as yet) much less theoretical alternative in 15...Bd7 , which is an old idea of Sveshnikov's recently revived by Radjabov (two folk worth taking a lot of notice of in this opening). Black has a few ideas: he might want to keep b8 free for the queen to allow ... Bd8-b6; or he might want, by harassing the rook, to put himself in a good position to drive the bishop away from contact with d5 and perhaps even win the fight for that square. Following 15...Bd7 16.0-0 ( Black's immediate point is that 16.Ra2 is well met by a4 driving the bishop back when, for example, 17.0-0 Na5 18.Bd3 Nb3 sees Black continue with ...Nc5 and ...Be6 with a good position;; 16.b3 Ne7 is also fine, since in view of the fact Black's rook usually comes to c8 in this line it isn't likely to be right for White to weaken c3 like this ) 16...Ne7 ( 16...Nb4 is critical but didn't do so well after 17.Ra3 Rc8 18.cxb4 axb4 19.Ra6 Rxc4 20.Rxd6 , when White was better in A. Volokitin-T.Radjabov, Biel 2006 ) 17.Ra3 ( 17.Ra2 Rc8 18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.Bd5 Rc5 had got White nowhere in V.Anand-T.Radjabov, 1st rapidplay matchgame, Mainz 2006 – White is hampered by the possibility of ... Rxc4 and ...Be6 ) 17...Rc8 18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.Qd3 Rc5 20.Rd1 Rb8 21.b4 White had an advantage in J. Smeets-A.Khairullin, Essent 2006, and it's here that Black may need to improve in this line. ]

16.b3 The position before this move has been the main starting point for the variation with 12...Bg5 for 25 years or more. White has tried many other moves, but the text is beginning to establish itself as the favourite. Alternatively:

[ a) 16.Qa1 aims to bring a rook to the queenside. Black should proceed as usual with Kh8 17.0-0 and now g6 ( or 17...f5 18.exf5 Bxf5 19.Nce3 Bg6 ) 18.b4 axb4 19.cxb4 Ne7 (once the a-pawn has gone Black can happily embark on this typical manoeuvre), followed by arranging ...f5 should give Black good play. ]

[ b) 16.b4 aims to save time on the queen move, but Bd7 ( the object of this is to avoid 16...axb4 17.Ncxb4 Nxb4 18.Rxb4 Rxb4 19.cxb4 ; although Black ought to be OK here too he does better to keep White's slightly awkwardly placed rook on the board ) 17.Ra2 axb4 18.cxb4 ( 18.Ncxb4 Nxb4 just helps Black ) 18...Ne7 is fine for Black too. ]

[ c) 16.Ra2 is seen in Game 17. ]

[ TIP: Black has really only two, slightly different, plans here: one is to play ...f5 with minimal preparation, the other is ...g6 and then ... f5. In either case the text move is essential, so it makes sense to play it at once and preserve the choice between the two a move longer. If Black is afraid of 16...Kh8 17 Nce3 then he can, as Leko did recently, commit himself with 16...g6 . Then White's idea from Game 19 is less effective after 17 Nce3 Kg7, but on the other hand Black is committed after 17.0-0 Kh8 to the ...g6 and . ..f5 plan, which may not be what he wanted to do. ]

After 16...Kh8, 17 0-0 is the subject of Game 18 and 17 Nce3 that of Game 19. White has many alternatives here too, notably 17.Qe2 . 17...--

[ The first idea of this is that 17...g6 can be met with 18.h4 Bxh4 19.g3 Bg5 20.f4 in the style of Game 19, ]

[ so usually Black plays 17...f5 and now the second idea is revealed after 18.h4 Bh6 19.exf5 Bxf5 20.g4 , when Black is reputedly forced into the undesirable exchange 20..Bxc2 21 Qxc2, although it isn't immediately obvious that Bd7 21.g5 Nd4 is bad for Black. ]

[ However, instead 17...f5 18.h4 Bf6 19.exf5 Bxf5 20.Nce3 Bd7 is normal, when Black is fine: White can't keep ...e4 and ...Ne5 prevented (even after 21.Qc2 e4 ) and hold on to d5, especially with h4 vulnerable if he castles. ]

21.Nxf5 d5 22.Nh6 Be8 23.Ng5!? As most of us understand from high school and college: our love isn't always returned. As it turns out, White's hoped-for attack is an object unworthy of his love.

23...Ne7 24.Qe1!? De Firmian dreams of an attack against Black's well-defended king.

24...Qb6+ 25.Kh1 Bg7 26.Ng4 h6 27.Nxe4?! Both sides are trying hard to out-crazy each other. White's thoughts flow from a desire not to lose, to a desire to win. --- De Firmian decides to sacrifice a piece. He is already a pawn up so he gets three pawns for it in total. As it turns it, this isn't enough. And White doesn't get the attack he hoped for either.

[ De Firmian probably sensed the initiative slipping away if he went passive with 27.Nh3 . A common fallacy in chess is that courage is always a virtue. It isn't. 27 Nh3, which goes passive, isn't all that bad for White. After b4! 28.c4! Rc8 29.Ne5 Ng6 30.Qg3 the comp assesses it as dead even. ] compensated for handing White control over e4 (if White plays e4xf5), the weak d6-pawn as well as the d5-hole, with the following: -- 1. Enhanced piece activity. -- 2. The bishop pair and potential for dark-square activity later on. -- 3. Play along the f-file. -- 4. By removing White's e-pawn, Black gets a central pawn majority, if it proves possible to break White's blockade on d5. This may seem inconceivable when we look at this position, yet in this game Black managed to do just that. It happens far more often than we would believe in Sveshnikov, where White's seemingly invincible grip on d5 is often worn away over time. 18.exf5

27...dxe4 28.Bxe4 Rc8 A reasonable alternative is to place the rook on the open d-file. 29.f5 Ng8! White's attack looks stalled after this powerful Steinitzian retreat, which disallows f5-f6 ideas, while reinforcing h6. 30.Qh4 Nf6! Clever. 31...Qxf6 32.Qg3 Bf7 White's three pawns are not enough for the piece, since they completely lack fluidity. 33.a3 The trouble with a move like this is that White essentially freezes his queenside pawn majority. 33...Rc4

[ White should liquidate, since Black stands better if the centre is shored up with f2-f3, which weakens dark squares. For example, 18.f3 Ne7 19.Nxe7 Bxe7 20.Qd3 ( 20.Ne3?? hung a piece to Qb6 21.Qe2 f4 , T.Mak-M.Amanov, Doha 2006 ) 20...fxe4 21.fxe4 Rxf1+ 22.Kxf1 , U. Fataliyeva-S.Gaboyan, Porto Carras 2010. White is in danger after Qb6 23.Ne3 Bd7 , intending to shift the rook over to f8. ]

18...Bxf5 19.Nce3 Bg6 I prefer this to playing it to e6, since here the bishop slices through the centre. 20.Qe2

[ White would be wise to challenge the bishop with 20.Bd3 Bxd3 21.Qxd3 Bxe3 22.fxe3 Rxf1+ 23.Qxf1 Rxb3 24.Rc4 Rb5 25.Nc7 Rb6 26.Nd5 , when he can take a draw by repetition, as in V.Bologan-A.Timofeev, Sarajevo 2005. ]

20...Qd7 21.Rfa1

[ The game is also balanced after 21.Rd1 Bd8 . ]

21...Qb7 We reach the end of theory. With his last move Black's queen prevents Bb5, while eyeing both the b3-pawn and d5-knight.

[ The computer prefers 21...Bd8 , as in B.Baroin-M.Versili, correspondence 2005. ]

22.b4!? White logically seeks to open the a-file and create a passed pawn.

[ It's hard to imagine White losing if she does nothing and continues to manoeuvre with something like 22.Qg4 Bh6 23.Rd1 . ]

22...axb4 Black is happy, since now there is no need for him to babysit the weak a-pawn. 23.Nxb4

23...Nxb4

[ 23...Ne7 is playable as well. ]

24.cxb4 Be8! A dual-purpose move: -- 1. Black fights for control over b5. -- 2. Black prepares to transfer the bishop to c6, after which it takes aim at the d5-square and g2-pawn. 25.R4a3? This move commits White's greatest Sveshnikov sin: losing control over d5.

[ The WGM should have played 25.Bd5 with an approximately even game. ]

25...Bc6! 26.Rb3

[ It may have been preferable just to hand over a pawn with 26.b5 Bxb5 27.Bxb5 Bxe3 28.Qxe3 Qxb5 , when White is a pawn down and fighting for her life. ]

26...d5 One of the ABCs in the Sveshnikov is that White should not allow us control over d5. 27.Ba6 Qb6 28.b5 Ba8 Principle: when it comes to bishops, distance does not isolate our opponents from their wrath. In case you believe that Black's a8-bishop is some Pete Best-like fifth Beatle, who lives in the shadows, then I urge you to disbelieve the notion. First, the bishop, although sidelined on a8, continues to cover the critical d5-pawn and square. Secondly, if Black plays ...d5-d4, the bishop suddenly becomes a monster along the h1-a8 diagonal. 29.Rd1 Rbd8 Black has a winning position for the following reasons: -- 1. His centre is rolling and his d-pawn is set to advance. -- 2. He has a powerful bishop pair. -- 3. White's passed b-pawn is blockaded. -- 4. White's offside a6-bishop has been downgraded to spectator status. -- 5. The f2-square is tender, due to the open f-file and Black's dark-squared bishop, in conjunction with the black queen. 30.Rbd3 Qc5

[ After 30...d4 31.Nc4 Qf6! Black's e5-pawn is taboo, since 32.Nxe5?? loses a piece to the simple pin Rde8 33.Re1 Rxe5! (overloaded defender). White's queen is unable to recapture due to the mating threat on f2. ]

31.Qh5 e4 32.Rd4 Bf6 33.Rc4 Clever, but ineffective. 33...Qa3 34.Rcc1 g6

[ 34...d4! 35.Ng4 e3! is even stronger. ]

35.Qe2 Intending to advance b5-b6. 35...Bg7?

[ Better is 35...d4! 36.Nc4 Qe7 37.b6 d3 38.Qd2 Bd4 39.Rf1 Bd5 40.Ne3 Bxb6 , when Black is a pawn up with a crushing bind. ]

Black's lax move gives White a saving chance. --- EXERCISE (planning): The coroner isn't quite ready to sign the white position's death certificate. Black played too cautiously. Find a plan where White can save the game. 36.Qd2?

36...d4 Black once again has a winning position. 37.Nc4 Qe7 38.Nb6

38...e3! 39.fxe3 dxe3 40.Qe1 EXERCISE (combination alert): How did Black force the win? 40...e2! ANSWER: Clearance. There is no defence to a deadly bishop check on d4. 41.Rxd8 Qxd8
